ERNEMANN'S "JUBILEE" MODEL.

A marked degree of interest has been aroused by the latest model projector designed by the Ernemann Company. But little more than a month has elapsed since its arrival, yet this machine is one of the most talked about at the present time, and, believing that some further details of the interior mechanism and case will be of interest, we have pleasure in reproducing the illustration below. The jubilee of this famous Continental firm has certainly been signalised by the issue of this very fine piece of accurate mechanism.

As will be seen, the gearing is carried upon a mount of especial rigidity, while the cover, despite its invulnerability, is so designed that the "works" are most accessible. The film-way is in an entirely separate chamber, and in consequence of the oil-proof partition, is particularly immune from baneful effects. All the spindles are of best silver steel, case-hardened and scientifically ground, while the Maltese Cross runs continually in oil. The glass hardened pin and careful design and manufacture of this portion of the apparatus ensure that smooth running and the excellent picture associated with the "Imperator," even after years of use. In short, all the best points of its famous predecessor have been incorporated in the "Jubilee" projector, and as we stated in a previous article, there is no possibility of the film being fired other than the very small portion standing in the gate. The new and sturdily-designed fan is also an innovation, while the control of the special axes and the masking is effected in a very simple way.

AN X.L. CAPTURE.

A very dramatic feature is promised in "The Midnight Mystery," the latest sensational number to be screened by the X.L. Film Company, of London, who hold the exclusive rights for Scotland, Cumberland, Northumberland and Westmorland.

BITS FROM BOLTON.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

During the past fourteen days that most interesting local film of a Territorial Review was taken exclusively for and shown at the Electric Theatre, Deansgate. With the parade being held in the town the picture was doubly attractive. A number of the men visited the show to see how they acquitted themselves on parade. "Beauty and the Barge," "Flames of Shame" and "A Terrible Night at Sea" were other top-liners.

Although not the star film, "Dear Old Girl" was undoubtedly one of the most absorbing items for the past fortnight at the Queen's Theatre, Bradshawgate. "A Queen's Love," "Forgotten Women," "The Childrens' Hour" and "The Mysterious Way" were some of the other dramas, and much amusement was created when "Love and Dynamite," "Bunny's Mistake" and "Game of Pool" were screened.

The Gem has been worth visiting of late. Not the least enjoyable picture was "The Water War," and this was well seconded by "The Vagaries of Fate." Then there was "Reinstated" along with "Taming Terrible Ted," "General Bunko's Victory" and "Cohen Saves the Flag." Later, "On Secret Service" headed the bill.

Lately, the Atlas Theatre, Fletcher Street, has altered its entertainment from the twice-nightly show to "continuous." "The World Alone," "Luella's Love Story," "The Gipsy Child" and "Through Flaming Paths" were excellent pictures well backed up by "Archie and the Bell Boy," "Peggy's Burglar," and later, "Meeting Their Board Bill" and "The Fatal Taxi-Cab."

A feature of the entertainment at Rumworth Theatre, Daubhill, is the singing picture which always entertains and amuses. "Sammy Come Over Here" and "The Old Porch" have been the latest efforts and both were enthusiastically received. Mr. Parnell had also booked a number of good dramatic films, among them being "The Jewelled Slippers," "Nihilist Vengeance," "Prisoner of the Harem" and "The Quarrel on the Cliffs."

The Princess Cinema has much to recommend it. The chief pictures have been "Caprice," "United in Danger" and "The Cricket on the Hearth." There was also a host of humorous films.

AN ORIGINAL SOUVENIR.

In connection with the filming of the Cunarder Aquitania leaving the Clyde, and the exhibition of the pictures at the Eglinton Electreum, the proprietor, Mr. Alex. Gilchrist, J.P., issued to patrons of the popular Glasgow house a charming souvenir. This took the form of a photograph of an early Cunarder (1853), and an autograph letter written by Elihu Burritt, who was one of the pioneers of the Ocean Penny Postage movement. The comparison between the two liners proved most interesting, and the souvenirs have been much sought after. The autograph letter from the "learned blacksmith" is, it may be added, reproduced from the original, in the possession of Mr. Gilchrist.

Round the Birmingham Halls.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

A tour round the Central district last Saturday night revealed a considerably improved state of business. The welcome rain had served to pack all the picture shows, and long queues were to be seen. At the New Street Picture House excellent fare was provided by Mr. Yeulett, including "The Bo'sun's Mate" and "The Cage." During the earlier part of the week "'Neath the Lion's Paw" was starred. I learned from Mr. Yeulett that "She Stoops to Conquer" is billed as the star for this week. The educational matinées are still proving very popular.

Mr. Bradbury, of the Masonic Hall, New Street, was also doing very good business with an all-round programme of exceptional strength, "The Girl Who Played the Game" being a popular item. Mr. Bradbury is billing as his star picture this week "Was She Justified" to very good business.

Mr. Grahame Cutts, of the Scala, Smallbrook Street, reports excellent business, and during the latter part of last week he screened an exceptionally good programme, which included "The Master Criminal" and "Trompe la Morte." Saturday night was excellent from a business point of view, and the hall was packed continuously. This week "Moths" is the star. Speaking of the Scala reminds me that the management gave a very successful Trade show of Messrs. Cross's films, including the "Children of Captain Grant" and "The Lady of Monsoreau," on Friday last in the afternoon, and Mr. Webster, the local manager for Cross's here, reports that the films realised very good business. On Tuesday a Trade show of "Woe to the Conquered" was given.

The King's Hall has been doing quite good business, "Stolen Gold" being the star last week, and this week the Clarendon "speaking pictures" are having a successful run. Mr Carlton, who is now managing things here, is to be congratulated upon several important improvements he has introduced.

The Star Picture House, Gravelly Hill, Erdington, is still forging ahead, and patrons find the dainty little café lounge a great inducement. This week the great attraction is "The Shadows of New York City."—Mr. Heath, who is now managing the Picturedrome, Sparkbrook, did good business last week with "At the Eleventh Hour" and "Broncho Billy and the Red Man," and the excellent programme which was presented to patrons.

Congratulations to my old friend, Mr. A. O. Purnell, who has taken over the management of the Grand, Soho Road, Handsworth, where he is realising excellent business with well-selected films. Mr. Purnell is a great acquisition to any picture house, for he has a wide experience of the Birmingham Trade, and enjoyed a long and successful management of the New Street Picture House.

A notable feature at the Newtown Row Palace is an Open Competition for would-be cinema actors.—The Elité, Bordesely Green, had a most successful run last week with "Lord of the Jungles."—Mr. Harris, of the Imperial, Moseley Road, made a great hit in screening Will Evans "Harnessing a Horse," together with "A Bride of Mystery."

The Birchfield Picturedrome screened a strong programme last week, featuring "Amid Raging Beasts" and "The Dead Secret."—The Springfield Road Picture Playhouse, under the management of Mr. Dewey, is steadily achieving a reputation for itself, both by well-selected programmes and a very excellent orchestra.

SALES OF CONFECTIONERY.

At the annual conference of the British Federation of Confectioners' Association, held at Bradford, one of the principal topics of consideration was that of the sale of chocolates, cigarettes, etc., in picture theatres. The chair was occupied by the President, and delegates were present from the most important provincial towns. Condemnation was in a measure the tone of the discussion, though a Sheffield delegate asked why had picture houses been singled out for attack? These sales had been going on for a long time in theatres and music-halls, and he thought the picture showmen could scarcely be blamed. After a lengthy discussion, a strong resolution of protest was adopted, to be submitted to the licensing magistrates in every town in which the federation has an affiliated association, appealing to such magistrates to take into consideration competition against shopkeepers and to make the abandonment of such trading a condition of the licences.

A Western Import Programme.

It would be difficult to find anyone, however severely critical, who could fail to find something exactly suited to his taste amongst the various brands of films shown at the offices of the Western Import Company. Such popular brands as the Kay Bee, Domino, Broncho, and Keystone include such a variety of subjects and such a uniform standard of excellence that the difficulty would be not to select one, but to reject any, and the exhibitor might be well advised in following the suggestion contained in the attractive "Weekly Record" of the company, and decide on an "all-Western Import" programme.

One of the strongest items on the programme is "North of 53 Degrees," a French Canadian story, in which the dramatic interest is considerably increased by the picturesque setting and the great beauty of the surroundings, reproduced by photography of magnificent quality. During the absence of 'Poleon and Francois on their winter trapping expedition Celestine, the sister of the former, is wooed by Jim Lewis, a private in the Canadian Mounted Police. She trusts too much to his honour, and finds too late that Lewis has left for the Far North, resigning the service and changing his name to avoid the vengeance of Celestine's brother. On 'Poleon's return he finds that his sister has died under the shock of her desertion, and in the company of Francois, he leaves for the North, vowing to bring his sister's betrayer to justice. Lewis finds employment with a fur company, and becomes engaged to Annie Macdougall, the daughter of the bookkeeper, much against the girl's inclination, the marriage being arranged by her father. Unable to reconcile herself to the marriage, she runs away on her wedding eve, and being overtaken by a heavy snowstorm, she takes refuge in a deserted shack, to which 'Poleon and Francois are also driven by the fury of the storm. Annie is tracked to the hut by Lewis, and the two men meeting, a fierce fight ensues during which Lewis meets his death by a shot fired by Francois.

The story is dramatic and well constructed, the interest being maintained to the very end.

SCENE FROM "NORTH OF 53."

The scenes in the snow-laden forests and the stations to which the fur-hunters bring their pelts lend an interest which is fresh and novel, while the play is remarkably well acted throughout. Some very beautiful and realistic effects are shown during the snowstorm in the forest, and every accessory contributes to the atmosphere of the play.

Another powerful drama is "The Play's the Thing," in which a somewhat similar theme is treated in an entirely different manner. Clifton Boyle, the leading man in a touring theatrical company, returns home to find that his sister is dying, having been deserted by her husband, Harold Welles, on the birth of her child. Boyle swears to revenge her death, and his chance comes later on when he finds himself in the same company with Welles. The latter denies any knowledge of Boyle's sister, but Boyle finds proof that he is the man. The two men are playing a duel scene, and Boyle obtains his revenge by killing Welles on the stage, being able to convince the spectators that the affair was an accident.

It is a strong drama, played with considerable power, and the theatrical setting, most effectively presented, is certain to ensure a great measure of popularity.

The Western Import programme is always well supplied with comedies, two short films of the Komic brand being "Wild Man from Borneo," in which an actor posing as a wild man escaped from a show involves himself in a series of disasters which make for irresistible merriment, and "A Birthday Present," which is a laughable absurdity dealing with the acquisition of a piano on terms which are by no means so easy as such a transaction is supposed to be. Both are played with infinite spirit and dash, and will be responsible for much hearty laughter.

The famous Keystone brand maintains its high reputation with "Little Billy's City Cousin," a comedy admirably played by some remarkably clever children, and "His Favourite Pastime," a typical Keystone farce of the kind which Mr. Mack Sennett has firmly established as prime favourites with the public.

The programme is unusually varied, and the standard of excellence in each of these well-known brands is maintained in a way which must keep them well to the front even in these days of strenuous competition.

SCARBOROUGH SHOWS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Two splendid feature films have been shown by Mr. Quinton Gibson at the Theatre Royal Cinema, St. Thomas Street, during the week, in addition to the variety turns. The pictures, which are changed twice a week, are an indispensable part of the entertainment, and have become firmly established. In the first part of the week the top-liner was "The Island of Terror," a 2,500 ft. drama, which was greatly appreciated. Following this was "Just in Time," a film which was by no means less interesting.

There is no doubt that the Picturedrome, the first cinema in Scarborough, originally converted from a draper's shop, but gradually developed into one of the most popular places of entertainment in the town, is still going on the high road to success, with Mr. Quinton Gibson still at its head. The pictures screened in the initial part of the week were "The Greatest Gift," "The Lure of London," "The Cattle Thieves Escape," "A Game of Pool," "It's Love that Makes the World Go Round" and "Which Way Did He Go?" For the last three days Mr. Gibson was fortunate to secure "The Joke that Kills" for the top-liner, along with "Grandad," which might be described as the "joint top-liner." "A Ray of God's Sunshine" and "A Noise from the Deep" were two others.

The Olympia has always had a reputation which compared most favourably with the leading cinemas in the country, and its name has always stood for the best and latest in the moving picture world. The bookings for this week have been great with such pictures on the screen as "The Black Panther," "The Antique Brooch," "A Race for a Million" and others, for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; and "In Peril of the Law" and "The Great Dock Catastrophe" to conclude the week with.

When Mr. H. A. Whitaker first entered into the motion picture life of Scarborough, it was at the Olympia, and he then set up the policy of introducing all that was latest in the picture world to Scarborough audiences. Now that he has moved further along the Foreshore to the Grand, he is maintaining the same principles, and he and his manager, Mr. Parnell, deserve every credit for the success which they are making of Scarborough's newest venture. "On Secret Service" and "A Fateful Likeness" have been shown to big audiences earlier in the week, and, at the time of writing, crowds are witnessing "David Copperfield." In the same programme Miss Asta Neilsen, no less a favourite in the Queen of Watering Places than anywhere else, is seen in "Up to Her Tricks."

I have already mentioned two cinemas on the South Foreshore, but there is yet another, and a beautiful one, too, the Palladium, situated at the bottom of Bland's Cliff. Than Mr. Catley, the manager, Mr. Catlin could have no better custodian of this fine cinema. This has been a week of big events, commencing for the first portion with "David Garrick." It is no exaggeration to say that with a good list of pictures supporting, seats were at a premium. Commencing with Thursday, Mr. Catley presented "A Daughter of Satan," "Love's Sunset" and others, which brought in satisfactory results.

THE COLISEUM, IPSWICH.

Plans have ben passed and a full licence obtained for the new Coliseum, a handsome picture theatre which is being erected in Princes Street, Ipswich, by Mr. Edward W. Nicholls, of Great Yarmouth and Bury St. Edmunds. The building will be equipped with its own generating plant, will provide seating for 650, being decorated and upholstered on luxurious lines, with purple as the predominating colour. Mr. Nicholls predicts, in fact, that for luxury and comfort, combined with high-class entertainment, the Coliseum will occupy a premier position. The architects are Messrs. Olley and Haward, of Great Yarmouth, and it is expected that the theatre will be ready for opening in September next.

In the Manchester District.

Business at the Victoria, Ardwick Green, continues to be good, and although the weather has been exceptionally fine, the "houses" were equal to those experienced in mid-winter. The programme contained, among others, "The Woman Thou Gavest," "Her Children," and "Justice," whilst this week "Half a Chance" is the chief attraction. Great things are expected during Whit week of "The Midnight Wedding," which is being advertised in a special manner, and "Spartacus" will follow shortly afterwards. A further attraction for Whitsuntide will be "Maria Marten."

The Shaftesbury Cinema, Longsight, has had some good programmes lately, and in spite of considerable opposition has increased its business. The children's matinée on Saturdays is a feature meeting with immense support from the juvenile population of the district. A picture to score a distinct success during the latter half of last week was "Loved by a King." This week "On Secret Service" and "The Wastrel" are the two most prominent. Next week "House of Fear," "Orders Under Seal," and some good Keystones will be the principal items of a good programme.

Mr. A. Taylor, of the Queen's, Stockport Road, manages to arrange a performance each week to suit the varied tastes of his patrons. He has been enterprising enough to secure some good topicals for the next few weeks, including a film of the Derby, which he hopes to be able to show the evening of the race, and pictures of the Whit week processions, both Protestant and Catholic. These will be shown the same evening, and continued throughout the following week. During the holidays the programme will be started each day half an hour earlier than usual, and a matinée given each day. One of the best pictures shown last week at the Queen's was "The Circus Girl." This week "A Daughter of Satan," "Rory O'Moore," "A Wrecker of Lives," and John Bunny in "Misadventures of a Mighty Monarch" should satisfy the large audiences attending.

Mr. F. H. Widdowson, manager of the Crescent, Chapman Street, Hulme, has resigned his position, and will be leaving on Saturday. Business here appears to be as good as ever, and large and enthusiastic audiences are the order of the day. Last week Asta Nielsen in "A Woman of the People," and also in "Up to Her Tricks," were the principal features, in addition to "The Mystery of Boscombe Vale." This week good results are being secured from "Sorrows of Israel" and "Woe to the Conquered."

The Alexandra, Hamilton Road, Longsight, found "The Port of Doom" a satisfactory film last week. During the present "Cupid Works Overtime" is doing wonderfully well. "Sentenced for Life" will be the principal picture during the Whitsun holidays. One of the best pictures shown recently at this hall was found in "Tragedy in the Clouds."

The Longsight Palace, Stockport Road, at the corner of Daisy Bank Road, possesses the distinction of being the oldest picture hall in the district. Considering the extent of the opposition which has of late grown up around, it manages to hold its own well. This week "The Black Spot," "The Inscription," and some Keystone comedies are the chief items on the bill.

Mr. Doff, manager of the Premier Agency, Limited, 42, Deansgate, is producing a very promising series of films to be known as the Kitchen series, featuring the well-known comedian, Mr. Fred Kitchen. A good comic is always a valuable asset to every exhibitor, and big bookings are expected.

The Deansgate Picture House was crowded last week to see "The Baby Spy," "The Intruder" and "His Grandchild" were among the other principal pictures shown.—"The Sorrows of Israel" is being shown this week at the Imperial, Brook's Bar, as well as at the Crescent.

NO CONCERTS IN CINEMAS.

At a meeting of the Cardiff City Council, the chairman of the Watch Committee asked the Council to decide whether the resolution recently passed for occasional Sunday concerts in public halls applied to cinemas. An application had been made, he said, to the committee by the manager of one of the cinemas to hold a series of ten concerts. By seventeen votes to sixteen, the Council passed a resolution that the licence for Sunday concerts should not include cinemas. Alderman J. Thomas thereupon moved that the Council leave the matter to the Watch Committee to decide, but there was no seconder, the Lord Mayor calling for the next business.

GLASGOW NEWS AND NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

A special general meeting of the Glasgow and West of Scotland Branch of the Exhibitors' Association was held at the offices of the Secretary (Mr. Ballantyne, solicitor) last week, Councillor Welsh (President) in the chair. Other members present were Messrs. Green, Bennell, Howard, Vivian, Gilchrist. Robinson, Liansky, George, and Gillespie. Mr. Welsh submitted a lengthy and interesting report of the meeting of the parent body he attended in London recently as delegate from the West of Scotland, and the members agreed to do everything possible to asist, by means of approaching local members of Parliament and otherwise, the efforts of the Association to obtain national instead of local regulation for the conduct of cinematograph theatres by pressing for an amendment of the Cinematograph Act. The Secretary suggested that all exhibitors in the area be circularised for the purpose of obtaining suggestions and complaints on which such an amendment could be based, to which the members unanimously agreed. Several matters arising out of the objections made at the recent licensing court in Glasgow were discussed.

At Cinema House the Kinoplastikon series still draws crowded houses at all sessions. Its presentation has caused a mild sensation among picture-goers, and it is in for a long run. The usual picture programme keeps up its excellence.

At the Salon, where Mr. Poulton handles the reins of office, the London Cinema Quartette of vocalists have been a great draw this week.—The W. W. Jacobs series has proved a tremendous attraction at the Picture House. "The Bo'sun's Mate" is being shown this week. "'Neath the Lion's Paw" was another strong item in the programme.

La Scala last week featured "Nemesis" and local topicals, and all were presented to excellent audiences. The entire programme was pleasing.

"Antony and Cleopatra" claimed the honours at the De Luxe during the first part of the week, this being a return visit by request. During the latter part of the week Mr. Butt screened a good general programme, which included "Let No Man Escape" and "Rival Daughters," while a local scenic, "Glimpses of Glasgow," taken specially for the De Luxe, figured in the programme and proved a fine attraction.

Mr. Matthew Waddell, at the City Picture House, has been submitting some really ideal programmes recently. With "Big Game Hunting," showing each number of the series three nights, great business was done. Last week "'Neath the Lion's Paw," "The Catch of the Season," "The Fatal Taxicab," and "Up in a Balloon" proved a winning programme. The musical programmes by Mr. Lex Holmes' orchestra are a feature of this popular house.

I have before remarked on the strength and attractiveness of the programmes submitted at the Cinerama, Victoria Road, and a recent visit found Mr. Wolstenholme again on top. "The Black Spot," "The Perplexed Bridegroom," "The Man of Destiny," "The Reward," and "The Staircase of Death" are selections from last week's bill of fare.

The Hillhead Picture Salon, in the heart of the West End, has had a change of management, and Mr. Baker is now in control. The Salon caters for best class audiences, and good programmes are the rule. At the time of my visit last week "Carmen" was being screened to the accompaniment of the operatic music by Herr Iff's orchestra. The production was perfectly screened, and met with great appreciation. The remainder of the programme was carefully selected and finely balanced.

The St. George's Cross Picture Palace maintains its popularity, and goes on its way with undiminished success. Last week "Life" and "Where the Roads Fork" were two stars. The remainder of the programme was up to the usual standard. The hall is about to undergo complete renovation, painting, decorating, reseating and recarpeting, and not a performance is to be lost. Busy days ahead for all the staff!

Mr. George Taylor, at the Partick Picture House, can always be depended on to have "the goods," and this week his programmes have been above the average. With "Antony and Cleopatra" for three days, and "The Hand that Rocks the Cradle" and "The Dagger Stroke," supported by Vivaphone singing pictures and Mr. P. S. Richardson in illustrated songs, the Picture House patrons were well catered for, and showed their appreciation by attending in large numbers. Next week's picture of special interest to Partick people will be screened in "The Speed Trials of the Aquitania."

The Eglinton Electreum (Mr. A. Gilchrist's) was last week exceptionally well attended. The star attraction was "In Mid-Atlantic," and a galaxy of comedies and dramas. Additional interest was fused into the programme by the excellent singing of Mr. Harry Brandon. His songs were illustrated, and had a good reception.

At Glasgow's "first," the Charing Cross Electric," I found Mrs. Stewart presenting an excellent programme. This theatre has the largest "throw" in the city, and the projection is equal to the best.

At the Eragraph I found Mr. Lianski screening "The Two Mothers" and "London by Night," which were the stars in a well-selected programme.—The originally worded adverts. and the excellent films compel attendance at the Pickard enterprises. The stars at Mr. Pickard's halls are Panoptican, "The Mirror of Death"; Casino, "The Grip of Iron"; Ibrox, "Fight for the Great Black Diamond"; while at Clydebank a powerful variety company is the attraction. The new Pickard Palace is being rapidly pushed forward, and the roofing will be commenced in a day or two.

Mr. Abie Lever, of the Sun Picture House, is the moving spirit in the reopening of the West End Picture House.

On a recent visit to Dennistoun Palladium I found this commodious hall doing splendid business. Mr. Ralph Carter caters in good style for his patrons.

In the Springburn district the halls are doing well, and the new system of weekly wages in the district will be a further help. Interest in the opening of the new hall is growing, and Mr. Stewart is sure of a hearty start.

At Clydebank, Mr. Percy Byatt still forges ahead, and by presenting up-to-date programmes keeps his patrons well together. Three stars a week and a fine sprinkling of comedy take well in the shipbuilding centre.

The Partick Star is at present closed for reconstruction.—Space forbids extended notices of the Bridgeton and Southside halls this week. The general report is that business is much ahead of last year.

TRADE NOTES.

The Scottish representatives of the Tyler Apparatus Company are doing record business in complete outfits and accessories. "Indomitable" projectors have recently been installed by them at Blackburn (Scotland), Perth, and Bonnybridge, while two have been dispatched to China. Messrs. Fairlie are also busy with electrical work, having three contracts for complete installations at present in hand.

Messrs. Pathé's topical department has had a busy fortnight in the North. Topicals have been taken for several local halls, while one has just been completed for Mr. Butt, of the Theatre de Luxe, Glasgow.

New Gaumont Chrono projectors have just been installed, through Mr. Booth, of the Glasgow branch at Mossend Pavilion, and at the new Assembly Picture House, Girvan, the latter of which is to be opened on the 27th inst. Gaumont exclusives are forging ahead, and the general trade of the firm has become so extensive that an enlargement of the premises has been decided on.

A visit to Messrs. Green's elicited the information that business is still brisk, and the firm's special films greatly in demand. "The Heart of Midlothian," which Messrs. Green handle in Scotland, is, for Scottish exhibitors, to be renamed "Jeanie Deans, or The Heart of Midlothian." Under its new name nothing will stop its popularity, for as a Scottish play "Jeanie Deans" only comes second to "Rob Roy."

The Ideal Film Renting Company, under the direction of Mrs. Jack, are doing excellent business with their exclusives.

TOURING THE WORLD.

A unique undertaking will soon be witnessed in a comprehensive tour which is being organised by the Famous Players Company. Following upon their great production of "Monsieur Beaucaire," in which James K. Hackett, the famous American actor, appears in the title role, a tour of the world is to be taken with Miss Mary Pickford.

This charming artiste will appear in a series of plays enacted in the British Isles, various European countries, and in the Far East. The tour will occupy a considerable period, and will form a very notable departure in the history of film productions.

PORTSMOUTH PARS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The latest addition to the roll of picture houses—the Queen's, Portsea—one of the most imposing in the town, reports satisfactory business and good prospects. The manager, Mr. Martyne, thinks of introducing a Saturday matinée for children. This prevails at many of the houses in the town. "The Masked Dancer" and "The Eternal Barrier" were very fine films in last week's presentations, and this week's programme will include "Thieves and the Cross," "The Girl at the Lunch Counter," "The Girl at the Curtain" and the "Poet Laureate."

The W. W. Jacobs series has proved a very strong attraction lately at the Speedwell, Commercial Road, but in addition to "Lawyer Quince," "'Neath the Lion's Paw," pleased greatly last week end. This week's list contanis "The Bos'un's Mate."

During the hot weather the "non-stop" continuous show at the Apollo has been discontinued, and has been substituted by exhibitions from 2.30 till 5 and 6.15 till 10.45 daily. This house has been well maintaining its reputation for new and high-class productions. "London by Night" and "Comic Golf" were strong lines last week end. This week the two principal pictures are "Chelsea 7750" and its sequel, "An Hour Before Dawn."

At the Southsea Electric "The Red Spiders" was secured as the top-liners for the first part of this week, supported by "Her Boy" and other exclusives. This week-end "Why Girls Leave Home" and "And an Angel Came" are the principal subjects depicted.

The management of the Victoria Hall are making a big thing this week with "The Midnight Wedding." This favourite resort is known as the "home of exclusives." "The Golden Beetle" was such a one last week end. Another feature for this week is "The Hopi Raiders."

At the People's Palace "The Honour of Lady Beaumont" and "Amid Raging Beasts" have proved excellent mediums for business.—At the Globe two exciting films this week are "The Fighters of the Plains" and "Eileen of Erin."—"The Fatal Invention" and "The Clown's Daughter" are the top-liners at the Eastney Cinema this week.—There were also excellent programmes at the Shaftesbury Hall, Hatton Bridge, Copnor Electric, North End, Cinerama, the Arcade, Arundel Street Cinema, and other picture houses.

REGULATIONS AT ST. HELENS.

An important matter discussed by the St. Helen's Watch Committee was the regulation which requires the cinema theatres to have a council fireman on duty at every performance. It will be remembered that the proprietors of the Hippodrome were recently proceeded against for not carrying out the regulation, and that the local proprietors subsequently protested against having to engage an official fireman. We understand that the committee have decided that if the halls had one of their own staff firemen on duty, it would not be necessary to engage a member of the Borough Fire Brigade.

A NEW EXCLUSIVE COMPANY.

The Dominion Exclusives Company, the latest addition to the list of organisations devoted to the exploitation of features, opened its doors this week at 5, Gerrard Street, W., in circumstances which indicate that it is likely in the near future to become a factor of no small importance in the exclusive market.

The Dominion Company is under the management of Mr. Ernest G. Foster, for over three and a half years the London manager of B.B. Pictures, Limited, and a gentleman who can claim twenty-one years' experience of the entertainment industry in its various branches, including a long spell of film work both in London and at the head offices of B.B. in Glasgow. He will be assisted at the Dominion by Mr. E. Cawse Morgon, who has also had considerable Trade experience in a managerial capacity.

MR. ERNEST G. FOSTER.

About the exact details of his programme Mr. Foster preserves a discreet reticence. He is at present very much engaged in "putting his house in order," and stated that he preferred to withhold details until he was ready to show his first films to exhibitors. We learned enough, however, to be able to state that negotiations are in progress for the exclusive rights of several multi-reels of quite unusual character.

By the time these lines appear the Dominion will have found its feet, and details will be obtainable from Mr. Foster, who wishes through our pages to extend a hearty invitation to friends old and new to put themselves into communication, personally or by letter, with him at his new address.

HAPPENINGS AT HULL.

By the time these notes are in print we shall be within twenty-four hours of the opening of another Hull picture palace, and three days after that yet another will have its doors thrown open to the public. These are the Tower, Anlaby Road, adjoining the Art School, and the Strand, Beverley Road, at the corner of Leonard Street. The former will be opened on Friday, and the Strand on Whit Monday. They are both practically under the same proprietorship, but will be controlled quite independently of each other. The finishing touches are, at the time of writing, being put on each place, and I shall have more to say of them when the work is quite completed. Private shows have been arranged to commence with, and a good start is being made so far as the class of entertainment is concerned. At the Tower the initial attraction will be "A Lady of Quality," and the Strand screen will be occupied by "A Great Leap."

On the top of these prospective openings, I am able to say that yet another theatre has "started on its way up." This is the Monica, which is being built on a piece of vacant land in Newland Avenue, the main thoroughfare in a West Hull residential district. The scheme, promoted by a number of local gentlemen, was first brought to my notice something like a year ago, and it will no doubt meet with the wishes of the neighbourhood when the palace is opened, which will no doubt be by the coming autumn. There is no other place of entertainment anywhere in the district, which is the farthest situated from the City. The Monica will, I understand, be built and finished on the most modern methods, and will be made to comfortably accommodate over 1,000. There is little doubt that it will become a popular rendezvous in Newland.

By the way, the weather has been so changeable at Hull that several exhibitors to whom I have spoken during the week have hardly known what to do to please their patrons. One, at any rate, told me that he had had ventilators and windows wide open one day, and that the very next the heating apparatus was being used.

Mr. J. F. Picton Thomas, of the Gaiety, Market Place, is, so I am told, seriously contemplating meeting the demands of the public for greater variety by introducing an entirely different programme every day. At the time being, however, Mr. Thomas is giving a couple of excellent programmes a week, and is running "exclusives" in each one. "The Dock Catastrophe" was one of the most successful of recent exhibits, and in the near future some of the latest films featuring Miss Asta Nielsen will be shown at the Gaiety. Two of these will be "A Woman of the People" and "Up to Her Tricks." "From Dancer to Duchess" and "The Gentleman Blackmailer" are also booked. "A Daughter of Eve" was shown with favourable results recently. Mr. Thomas regularly includes "The Warwick Chronicle" in his programme, and this is an item which always finds favour.

The boxing contest promoted by Mr. William Swan, of the Circus, Anlaby Road, was given there on Friday night, before a very large house, and the event was a huge success. I understand that Mr. Swan, who is a great lover of sport, will arrange for similar events. The special pictures at the Circus have been "'Neath the Lion's Paw" and "The Masked Dancer."

Whilst mentioning above the proposition of the Gaiety to take up the nightly change system, I might say there seems to be a tendency in this direction at several of the Hull cinemas. Mr. J. Young Brown, of the Oxford, told me some time ago that he was thinking of giving six changes a week instead of three, and there is, I believe, every likelihood of a West Hull cinema adopting a similar scheme. Mr. George Simmonite, of the Coliseum, Beverley Road, has been giving six programmes a week for a considerable time, and as the pictures are always good, business is good also.

Amongst the first of the local picture palaces to be opened, the Kinema, Anlaby Road, is still forging ahead, and I notice there is no falling off in the little crowds which nightly gather round the pay-box waiting for admission. Mr. E. Chapman, the manager, always has a splendid list of pictures, and a goodly number of people watching them from the very cosy seats whenever I call. Mr. Chapman pays a good deal of attention to the artistic side of the pictures, as well as the choosing of desirable subjects, and a beautifully clear and steady picture is always assured. Many people who regularly visit the Kinema, tell me what I already know, that it possesses a delightful orchestra, and there is no doubt that it is still very popular. In the early part of the week "A Tudor Princess's Romance" was shown as the "star" film, and in the closing half "Love's Old Dream" was found to be a very acceptable picture.

Showing forty films a week, year in and year out, one would almost think that Mr. Simmonite, of the Coliseum, would have exhausted the film supply long ago, but he still goes on, and keeps his daily programmes quite different. Last week the "star" pictures were excellent. On Monday the principal attraction was "At the Eleventh Hour"; Tuesday, "A Race With Death"; Wednesday, "The House of Fear"; Thursday, "The Joke that Kills"; Friday, "The Watch-Dog"; and Saturday, "'Neath the Lion's Paw." With such excellent lists as this one can fully realise how it was that Mr. Simmonite had to have the Coliseum seating capacity increased from 2,000 to 2,500.

This has been a special week at the De Luxe, Anlaby Road, where Mr. R. S. Comber has had a novel beauty competition. The competitors were cinematographed, and during the week the film has been shown at each performance, the audience voting for their particular favourites. Mr. Comber has also been showing a couple of splendid pictures, "'Neath the Lion's Paw" and "She Stoops to Conquer."

"The Chevalier de Maison Rouge" was the chief event of the week at the Prince's Hall. It was shown to large houses for the first three days, with "A Race with Death" replacing it for the last three days.

Some Aspects of the Art of Picture Play Writing.

By W. H. DANE STANTON.

Judging by what one reads in some articles on picture play writing, and by the wording of certain advertisements, one might be led to believe that education and culture are the last qualities required. Lately there has been placed on the market a very large number of film adaptations of well-known books and plays, the works of famous authors. In many respects a few of these adaptations have been failures. As considerations of profit and loss they may be successes—that is not my point. Stripped of the advertising assets of authors' name and the name of the play or novel from which each has been constructed, a certain number of these films would not have been profitable undertakings. It is the advertising asset which has carried them to success, a success here measured in terms of £ s. d.

The legitimate picture playwright has no advertising asset to sell. His play has to succeed on its merits.

In the great majority of cases the scenario is considered as the "idea" on which the producer will work to produce a play—and the maker of ideas is paid accordingly. This is an old complaint: granted. But it is an indictment nevertheless. In a way, the manufacturers cannot be blamed for buying ideas at a guinea a-piece. The picture playwright is wholly to blame for selling. Further, he is to blame in that his scenario, in many cases, is nothing more than an idea.

Let me illustrate: Supposing we consider a film as a building. Then, the artistes can be likened to the workmen—carpenters, bricklayers, electricians, etc.; the studio workers are the builder's labourers, and the producer is the master builder. For the good building there must be a clever architect, who must produce for the master builder a complete set of plans, detailed and adequate. An architect's work is not completed when the foundation plans are drawn. There are the plans for the ground, the first and every succeeding floor; there is a plan required for the roof and various elevations to be drawn.

Now, if the master builder is given only a foundation plan and a front elevation, he has, for all practical purposes, to be his own architect—and pays accordingly.

The picture playwright must, if he is worthy of his craft, be the architect of the film. He must give as much thought and work to his single reel play as an architect would to the drawing of a set of plans for a cottage. He must prepare a foundation plan. This must be followed by the plans for each succeeding floor (or scene), and then by his elevations.

To drop similes, the playwright must study the psychology of his characters, and set down, in each scene, what these characters do, the expressions on their faces, their gestures. He must indicate their psychological and their physical positions. To merely indicate that so-and-so tells so-and-so this, and then does that, is to prepare sketch plans, which will earn sketch plan prices.

It is here that education and culture are necessary. For my part, I make constant use of a dictionary of synonyms, so that I shall use words which give the correct "shade" of meaning. Theatrical directions are "barred," but the playwright should work with as much detail as is required for the theatre. His is a more difficult task, for he has to express the psychology of his characters, their conversations, and their feelings in terms of action. He must continually ask himself, "Now, what are my characters doing? Is that conversation translated into action? Would such feelings show themselves in action, and how?"—and countless other questions germane. To do this he must work slowly, weighing his words. The man who turns out seven or a dozen plays a month is, in my opinion, no craftsman. To describe the action embodied in a few hundred feet of film requires clear vision, an eye for detail, the genius for grouping—that is, the art of creating a picture, noble, pathetic, amusing, spectacular, dramatic, according as is required—and, most important of all, the power to describe accurately and in as few words as possible every detail as well as the broad outlines.

If the picture playwright leaves construction to the producer, he must not be surprised if he receives low pay for his work. Immaturity is never appreciated; full manhood is. Nothing could be more absurd than the well-fostered delusion that a knowledge of English is not essential, that culture is superfluous. Without these assets the picture playwright will never be worthy of his name and the profession will never rise.

One of the chief reasons why "Quo Vadis?" was such a success was, in my opinion, the fact that the producers had at their disposal a wealth of detail.

I do not think it a breach of confidence on my part if I mention that Mr. Bannister Merwin, one of the most successful picture playwrights, often writes between 6,000 and 10,000 words for a single-reel scenario. Now, if Mr. Bannister Merwin deems it necessary to write fully, to describe in great detail, to describe precisely, to hunt round for a word, a sentence, to explain a single action, how much more shall the beginner strive after the same attainment?

We are beginners in a new profession. In time to come we shall become "The Old Masters," the pioneers, if you will. Shall we?

Not if we turn out seven scenarios a month, not unless we use our dictionaries, not unless we wrestle with words, so that the vision within shall be translated into sentences. We must give, in our writing, a clear and comprehensive account of the vision. If we fail, then the work of the producer is not of our inspiring, and, being, so, how can we claim our authorship?

PICTURES IN IRELAND.

By "PADDY."

Passing through Drogheda the other day I found time to have a look at the two picture houses in that town. The first I encountered was the Whitworth Hall, situated near the St. Lawrence Gate. This spacious building is leased by the Dundealgan Picture Company, Limited, who also lease the Town Hall in Dundalk. Mr. O'Mahoney acts as manager of the Drogheda house, and he certainly appears to have obtained a good grip on the public, with the result that business is excellent. There are two houses every night at the usual hours, and popular prices prevail. Variety "turns" are popular at this house. I wish Mr. O'Mahoney every success during his stay in Drogheda.

There were good crowds prevailing at the Electric in Fair Street, and Mr. Butler, the manager, had his hands pretty full. When I arrived he had just finished putting the petrol-generating set into a better way of working. This hall is run by the same company who recently opened a picture theatre in Bray, Co. Wicklow. I understand that the Drogheda house will probably be closed during the summer months, as business in a town like Drogheda, with its river and close proximity to the sea, is not likely to be very promising while the warm weather is in evidence. The programme was an excellent one, and included "God's Way," as well as "The Diamond Makers."

My good friend Mr. Cathal McGarvey, of the Phœnix Picture Palace, always has an exceptionally fine programme for the numerous patrons who throng nightly to this palatial hall on the Quays. Recent programmes included some first-class films. A two-reel detective drama very much to the liking of the audience was "The Iron Man." "The Delayed Special" and "An Indian's Honour" also met with approval. Mr. McGarvey certainly knows how to conduct a theatre in an up-to-date manner, and I trust he will have every success during the summer months.

By the time these notes are in print the reign of the "Kinetophone" at the Grafton Picture House will be over. These pictures—singing, talking, and reciting—were very popular with patrons, and it was a difficult matter to get a seat any time after 6 o'clock without waiting for some time. Mr. R. G. Bell continues to preside over the destinies of this theatre, and in this he is very ably assisted by Mr. Richardson. Both these gentlemen are keen on having only the latest and the best.

The pictures at the Empire are always new and interesting, and there is no "turn" more appreciated by the audience than the "Pathé Gazette." Mr. A. Armstrong acts as manager here.—Mr. James T. Jameson continues to give exceptionally fine shows at the Rotunda Assembly Rooms. Throughout the two hours' programme there is never a dull moment, and comedy and drama follow one another in a manner admirably chosen. Great credit is due for this to Mr. Ernest Jameson, who manages the Rotunda, in addition to other multifarious duties. Recent films included "Hearts of Women," "A Tudor Princess," "And the Villain Still Pursued Her," and a Broncho Billy film, without which the Rotunda programme would never be complete.—At the Grand Cinema, Mr. Kay, proprietor and manager, had a fine selection of subjects. A recent exclusive was "In the Firelight." Pictures last week included "The Hardest Way," "The Magic Fountain Pen," and "Charlie's Little Joke."

At the Kelvin in High Street, Mr. Henry Pulling had an unusually fine programme, including "The Sale of a Heart," "The Schemers," and "Thieves."—"The Procession at Ardoyne" was filmed on the 10th inst., and shown at the West Belfast Picture Theatre during the week. "When the Light Came Back" and "Green Horn" were also on the programme. — The management of the Crumlin featured the first part of the week "East Lynne."

NOTTINGHAM & DISTRICT NOTES.

In these notes I referred recently to the musical abilities of Mrs. Gunn, wife of Mr. Sydney E. Gunn, manager of the Globe, Trent Bridge. It might be inferred from my remarks, however, that this lady was responsible for the musical portion of the programme. This is not so. Mr. C Marsh Hopewell, whose brilliant musical attainments have gained for him more than local renown, is the conductor, and it is in conjunction with this gentleman that Mrs. Gunn takes part in many pianoforte duets. Recent successful features at the Globe have been "The Devil's Disciples," "Hearts of Women" and "David Copperfield."

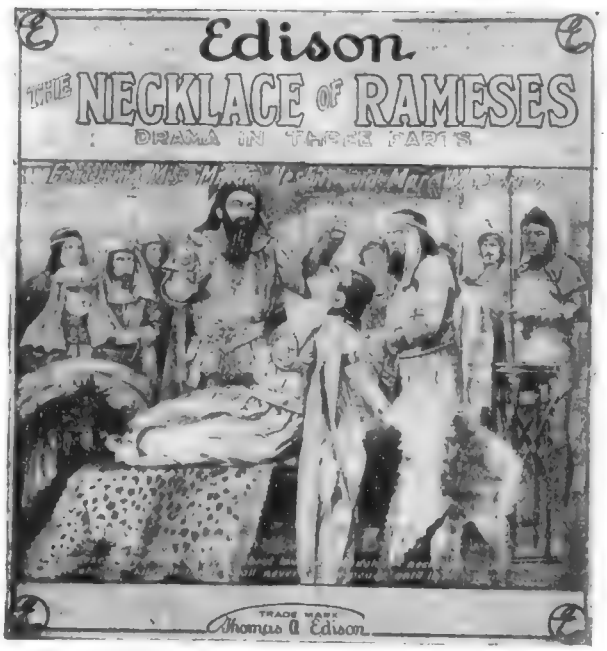
The fine series of W. W. Jacobs comedies are proving very popular at the Long Row Picture House. "Kronstadt," "The Staircase of Death" and "The Black Spot" have also been responsible for good business. This popular house is kept consistently busy in both cinema and café, and with such a perfect system of ventilation, heating and electric fans, the vagaries of our climate cause no appreciable variation in the attendance.

It is a remarkable fact that a number of blind people visited the Picture House, Nottingham, recently, and, strange to relate, appeared to thoroughly enjoy the excellent fare provided. Pupils attending the Midland Institution for the Blind sat near enough to the screen for those who could see a little to explain the films to their companions who were totally blind. The orchestra, which is one of the great attractions at this popular rendezvous, afforded the utmost pleasure to the sorely afflicted visitors. The management deserve all praise for the consideration shown.

I hear there is every probability of an up-to-date picture house being erected at Bulwell. Mr. E. Widdowson, whose enterprise is so well-known in Nottingham, is interested in the new venture, and this fact should go a long way towards ensuring its ultimate success. A private company has been formed with a capital of £10,000, of which Mr. Widdowson is permanent chairman and governing director. A site has also been secured, I understand, for another cinema theatre in Nottingham.

"Spartacus" is having a remarkably long run at the Mechanics' Large Hall, and the greatest praise is bestowed on this masterpiece.

Mr. E. C. Morley is doing well at the new Parliament Palace where the pictures, music and accommodation are really first-class. "Chasing the Smugglers," "Black Roderick, the Poacher," and "The Bride of Mystery" were recent features.—At the Regent Hall, too, Mr. Dodson maintains the popularity this house has held since its opening. "The Mysteries of Paris" attracted big crowds here last week. "The Vicar of Wakefield" was the special the first three days last week.



At the Goldsmith Street Palace, "A Tragedy of the Clouds" and "In a Villain's Grip," backed by "The Short-sighted Burglar," met with a very cordial reception recently, and at the New Electra, "A Shot in the Night" was the "star" picture.—"Sixty Years a Queen" appeared last week at the Alfreton Road Hippodrome, and attracted big business.

Mr. Frederic D. Smith is making a strong feature of Kinoplastikon at the Scala, where it is being exhibited twice daily, and from all accounts is proving a great attraction. Mr. Smith continues to screen a fine programme, "The Master Criminal" being specially successful.

Mr. E. W. Green, manager of the Victoria, filled his commodious house with "The Murdock Trial" and "Hook and Hand."

OUR POSTER GALLERY.

A particularly striking and artistic poster has been prepared by the Edison Company with the release of that fascinating drama, "The Necklace of Rameses." The colours are perfectly blended and the printing has been carried out in a very praiseworthy manner, particular attention having been paid to faithful reproduction. The story has already been reviewed at length in our columns (April 2nd, p 102), and reflects the greatest credit upon Mr. Charles Vernon, its author. Miss Miriam Nesbitt appears as the adventuress, and Marc McDermott as the detective, the author enacting the part of the master criminal. There are many magnificent scenes, the poster depicting what is probably one of the most effective in the entire story.

ACTRESS AND AUTHORS.

We are informed that Miss Florence Hackett, the famous Lubin player, offers a prize of £2 in gold for the best article of 500 words contending that the demands upon a successful film actress are greater in their variety and are more exacting than those of the stage. The only conditions attached to this offer are that the matter be typed and received by Miss Hackett at the Lubin Studio, 20th Street and Indiana Avenue, Philadelphia, not later than June 15th.

LINES FROM LEEDS.

The new film producing undertaking, of which I gave a hint in my last notes, is now practically a certainty, but details for publication are not yet permitted. Preliminary operations, however, have already commenced, and I hope to be able to say more later.—The Greta Film Service, of Barnsley, are continuing their policy of frequent Trade shows in Leeds, and held a very successful screening of "The Heart of Midlothian" at the Theatre de Luxe.—At the Savoy, Mr. Walter Reynolds, Junior, gave a Trade screening of "Hearts Adrift."—The New Century Film Service, Limited, held a private show, at the Grand Assembly Rooms, of "The Tragedy of the Three M's" (The Armless Man), "The Witch of Salem" and "Dr. Satan." The latter film has taken on remarkably well with the Yorkshire showmen. The New Century are working "The Brass Bottle" with success, having secured the Yorkshire rights from Messrs Walker's Exclusive, and they are also handling bookings for, "The Sign of the Cross," which is to be released in September. There will shortly be some definite news of the New Century Company getting back into permanent premises.—The Wray Film Agency, Limited, are doing good business in "ordinaries" and accessories, but are contemplating devoting more attention to exclusives than in the past.—Mr. H. A. Whincup, of the Yorkshire Film Exchange, filmed the recent boxing contest between Jimmy Wilde and Alderman Mansfield, at the Leeds Olympia. The picture, which is 1,000 ft. long, embodies each of the twenty rounds of the fight, and has been quickly got running in the Leeds halls. The Yorkshire Exchange have bought the sole Yorkshire rights of the Walker Films' picture of Harry Lauder and Neil Kenyon in "Comic Golf." A successful Trade screening of "Caprice," "Daughter of Eve" and "Love's Sacrifice" was recently held. Mr. Whincup has disposed of the Yorkshire rights for "Tannhauser" to Mr. Julian Clifford, of the Harrogate Kursaal. Mr. Clifford is to work the great picture up on lines similar to his recent control of "Parsifal." The picture is to be accompanied by the full Yorkshire Permanent Orchestra of fifty musicians, and Mr. Clifford is now busy fitting the Wagner music to the pictures. Mr. Whincup is carrying out the booking work on behalf of Mr Clifford. The first show will, it is expected, be in Leeds in November.

Mr. S. Firth, travelling manager for the Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Limited, has gone from the Briggate Picture House, but left behind him a reputation for geniality and courteousness which is being well maintained by Mr. Norman Robertson, the permanent manager now in charge. The series of W. W. Jacobs films are being run here with conspicuous success. Max Pemberton's "Kronstadt" and "The Man of Destiny" were also valuable features.—At the Coliseum Mr. Broughton's star pictures were "Moths" and "Hook or Hand." The appearance of "The Murdoch Trial" at the Coliseum was the first in Leeds.—Mr. Rogerson, proprietor-manager of the cosy little Savoy, in the County Arcade, was the recipient of many thanks and praises on the part of clergymen who witnessed his screening of "From Manger to Cross," which Mr. Rogerson ran for a whole wek. Mr. Rogerson found the reappearance of this famous picture well worth while.—At the Grand Assembly Rooms Mr. Harry Hogton featured "The Mystery of the Mill," exclusive to the theatre, and "The Curse of War." "For Auld Lang Syne" was also an appealing subject. Miss Greenwood's ladies' orchestra has been successful in creating a most favourable opinion, and is accorded unstinted praise by patrons here.—At the De Luxe Mr. E. B. Davies presented "Through the Basque Country" and "The Devil's Disciple," whilst on the humorous side was "Coney Ragtime," featuring George Mozart.

Classic fare was served up at the Headingly Picture House by Messrs. Brooks and Smith, in the form of "Antony and Cleopatra" and "Scrooge."—At the Harehills Picture House "The Toreador's Romance" and The Lure of London" headed excellent programmes, and Mr. Dacre screened "The Joining of the Oceans" (Panama Canal pictures) to big audience.

The pretty "Romance of Old Brittany" was one of the principal features at the Malvern Picture House, Beeston, where the top of the bill was occupied by "The Expert's Secret." "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves" was the "star" of the succeeding programme.—At the Haddon Hall, at Burley Hill, Mr. Greucock top-lined "David Garrick."—Western drama in the shape of "Indian Blood" was one of the chief attractions at the Lyceum, Burley, where a military drama, "Captain Ellesmere, "took a good hold on big houses.

At Newton, amongst the Leeds Jewish population, Mr. C. A. Higgins scored a success at the Palace with another big Jewish play, "Bar Kochba, the Hero of a Nation."—At the Alexandra, Camp Road, Mr. A. E. Roberts found a very popular subject in the pictures, by the Yorkshire Film Exchange, of Leeds, of the Wilde-Mansfield boxing match in Leeds, and had such crowded houses that the film has been rebooked for the 18th inst.

At Kirkstall, Mr. Briggs secured for the Abbey Picture House the exclusive rights of "The Money God," and made another big feature of "Thor, Lord of the Jungle."—First-class programmes also were provided at the Imperial, Kirkstall Road.

In the Wortley District, the Crown, in New Wortley, was crowded nightly by patrons anxious to see "Orders Under Seal," whilst two other big films here were "The Water War" and "Duty."—In Upper Wortley "The Magistrate's Honour" was a topliner at the Silver Royd Electric. "The Ghost of the White Lady" was screened here with success, and "The Governor" and "The Lady of the Glove" were two taking dramas.

The Armley theatres maintains attractive programmes. Mr. Metcalf is making a success of Keystone comedies at the Picture Hall, Branch Road, and in this line featured "The Champion" and "His Sister's Kids." "The Convict's Son" and "The Filly" were the chief attractions on the drama side.—Mr. Mann secured the exclusive rights of "Give Us this Day ——" for the Picturedrome, Wortley Road, and other big subjects screened here were "The Chinese Death Thorn" and "The Woman of the People." "The Expert's Secret" and "Two Mothers" were amongst the leading lines at the Palace, Stanningley Road.

The Cinematograph and Education.

CURRENT EVENTS.

By MORLEY DAINOW, B.Sc., Sec. Educational Kinematograph Association.

One of the most trenchant criticisms of our system of national education is that we do not turn out boys and girls with the gift for developing into citizens with a deep respect for morality and with a keen and intelligent interest in the affairs of the nation and the Empire. To cure this defect two remedies have been applied. One consists of moral talks or lessons about attributes of character such as honesty, gratitude, etc., and about responsibilities. The other remedy consists of training the children in certain exercises and building on these exercises ideals of character and citizenship. The former is the method of a society like the Moral Education League, the latter is the inspiration of our athletic bias in education and of the Scout movement founded by General Sir R. Baden-Powell. Direct moral teaching has the effect of turning out prigs. Sporting and Scout training turn out healthy and robust fighters, but do not give enough scope for discussions and questions by which intelligence is developed.

We need, therefore, a method which will combine the great interest of a sporting and Scout training with the intelligence of a wholesome moral talk. Teachers have long recognised this, and as a means have used the growing child's interest in current events. In most of our schools the higher class spends at least a couple of hours a week discussing the important events of the week, and by means of these discussions learning a great deal of useful knowledge and developing feelings for ideals all of which tend to strengthen personal character and citizenship.

Not a week passes by but a few incidents happen which can be used to widen a child's mental horizon and enrich his feelings. Some recent events such as the "flying train," the launch of the Acquitania, the disaster to some coastguards, the visit of the King of Denmark, can all be used for interesting and inspiring lessons.

The best way of bringing home the value of these illustrations is for the children to see them as near reality as possible. This can be done by means of the cinematograph. The ideal condition for such means is a cinematograph for every classroom. This, however, is Utopian. To be practical it would be a very good method if every week in each locality there were one hour matinees of important current events for the use of the higher classes. Thus, for instance, "the flying train" could be shown, and its mechanism and principles explained. The teacher could incidentally deal with what ought to be our right attitude to those scientists who are trying to simplify the problem of life, and how all nations lose their antagonism when they aspire to the truth. Any similar event could be used in a like manner, for the children would be so very much interested in it by the films. By this means we should be building up in the children's minds a knowledge of the world's work and a feeling for its importance which would cause them to leave school with a fine sense of responsibility. A sense of responsibility intelligently stimulated by the cinematograph and the teacher, and healthily exercised by sports and by scouting, would make a sound basis for the best citizenship.

Apart from the purely pedagogical value of illustrating current events by the cinematograph, there is the historical value. These films are recording history. What is a current event this week will be an historical event next week, next month, next year, and for all time. If a historian wished to write the social history of the twentieth century, the moving pictures would give him his best and most reliable information. It is most important, then, to devise some method of keeping these films, for they are much more than "the abstract and brief chroniclers of our time." At the Educational Cinematograph Conference, held at Olympia last year, this point was raised by E. Bruce Forrest, Esq., M.A., Headmaster of Wood Green County School, and it was embodied by him in the following resolution:—

> "That representation be made to the firms concerned of the desirability of steps being taken to keep a record and specimen of useful topical films for teaching purposes."

It is to be hoped that representative moving picture firms will give this resolution their most serious attention.

Sunderland and Wearside Sidelights.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Shall Sunderland have an Entertainer's Club? That is the question. That it is desirable is hardly open to argument. In some senses it is a necessity. Thus Mr. Montague Franklin talked to me the other night when I dropped into the Palace Theatre in High Street West. He pointed out that there are nearly a score of places of entertainment in Sunderland exclusive of a round dozen halls in the neighbouring pit villages. No social centre exists where the staffs thereof can meet. Sunday is a dull and dreary time with most entertainment folk, the majority of whom are in lodgings, whilst during the week nights everybody is too busy at their own shows. Since the advent of the two houses a night, too, the chances of a little social intercourse have been reduced to a minimum. Mr. Franklin further pointed out how greatly the Newcastle clubs were appreciated by both permanent staffs and visiting artistes. His idea is that the club should be housed in the centre of the town, and he let me into the secret that he has already "spotted" an ideal place that could be adapted as a first-class rendezvous at no great cost. There is accommodation for two billiard tables, which he reckons would soon pay for themselves, even at the hands of the local members, though, of course, the visiting entertainers would use them as well. Mr. Franklin would like to invite, through THE BIOSCOPE, all interested in the proposal to communicate with him so that a committee may be formed to go fully into the matter. This committee could, after making inquiries and getting the necessary information, call a meeting and submit the whole scheme. Such a club would be, he urged, an ideal daytime centre. At the moment, the local Watch Committee are "considering" the picture halls, and one never knows what restrictions or stipulations they may decide upon. Should these not meet with the approval of managers—and they seldom do—the club would be just the place where the matter could be discussed and joint protective action decided upon. This is apart from the social appeal which the club would make. On Sunday nights, Mr. Franklin suggested, concerts could be organised. These would not only be attended by the local men and their wives and sweethearts, but every artiste visiting the town could become a temporary member of the club for a week. Here he could meet and make old and new friends, whilst so far as the programme was concerned, concluded Mr. Franklin, we would have a score of professional artistes with us! The idea of starting an Entertainer's Club is admittedly a good one, and I have no doubt that once, through the medium of THE BIOSCOPE, it receives adequate ventilation, the welcome to it will be great and hearty.

Still harping upon Jarrow, the Gem here, where Mr. J. G. Middleton is in charge, Mr. Walter Roselle being the lecturer, had nothing to complain about last week when "Flames of Vengeance" was the leading film. It also held pride of place at the Gem at Hebburn, "Eileen of Erin" displacing it on Thursday, whilst the Jarrow Empire ran another of the Asta Nielsen series in "Up to Her Tricks."

"Everything we put on here," remarked Mr. Montague Franklin to me when I visited the Palace Theatre in High Street West, Sunderland, "is first-run stuff." And when I mention that last week's leading film was "'Neath the Lion's Paw" you will know that it is so. "The Battle of Gettys-Own-Bak" was as good as its title, and every item being also well worth its position. By the bye, Mr. Franklin, who is Messrs. Hamilton's film reviewer and responsible for all the film items on the Palace programme, asks me to give the hint to those agencies not already dealing with this firm to send him their lists and particularly details of feature.

As I anticipated, "A Winter's Tale," despite the summery weather, made good business for Mr. J. McColl at the High Street West Picture House. Its presentation appreciably enhanced the reputation of Sunderland's biggest "continuous," the accompanying music being particularly well rendered by Mr. Jennings' orchestra. "Life" took the leading position on Thursday afternoon.

At Mr. Frederic J. Hudspeth's special invitation, I went to the de Luxe to see "The Primitive Man," which noteworthy film he had secured exclusively. Mr. Hudspeth had given it most judicious advertising, but it only required to be seen by Monday's audiences to make its presentation a financial success, and crowded "houses" ruled at its every screening. There was much more than this, for "The Right and Wrong of It" and "The New Boy" were amongst the good things upon an altogether admirable programme.

Now that summer is here Mr. J. H. Tindle, of Sunderland, proprietor of the Horden Empress, is only running two houses on Mondays and Saturdays there, except on "pay Fridays," when, of course, there is always sufficient money about to keep a double show going. "Redemption of the Soul," "In the Dredger's Claw," "The Child Detective," and the usual array of Keystone comedies, together with "Dr. Nicholson and the Blue Diamond" were, it will be admitted, exceptional fare for a pit hall.

Mr. Edward Hatfield, formerly of Sunderland, has resigned the management of the South Shields Picture House to go to Ashington, Northumberland's great pit "village." He is succeeded by Mr. George W. Hunter, who last week had as his premier exclusive, "Tess," followed during the second moiety by "Was She Justified." Mr. Fred Brown, who is well known in Northern musical circles, has become the new musical conductor here.

What is described as "A Battle Picture with a Thousand Thrills," viz., "The First Law of Nature," repeated the success of 'The World, the Flesh, and the Devil," at the Sunderland Avenue Theatre, Mr. F. Sayers really "striking oil" or its equivalent with this fine Western film.—Mr. Hilton Fox also screened the film at the Wheat Sheaf Hall, and here it also went magnificently.

As I have already mentioned in these notes, Mr. George Downing, of the South Hetton Cambridge, is opening the Invicta at Seaham Harbour. The hall is owned by the local Co-operative Society, and last week the magistrates granted the necessary transfer of the licence.

TEESSIDE TOPICS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

It is of interest to picture hall proprietors and showmen in the Teeside district to note that Henderson's North of England Film Bureau, Limited, of Newcastle, have opened a branch at Middlesbrough. The branch is in Station Street, two minutes' walk from the station, and is under the management of Mr. W. E. Finch.

At the Grand Opera House, Middlesbrough, another excellent programme of pictures was shown, the "Midnight Wedding" being the principal attraction. "Lawyer Quince" was a film packed with humour, and "Thou Shalt Not" was another interesting topic.—"The Vanishing Cracksman" was the prominent picture at the Grand Electric Theatre, Middlesbrough, and was well supported by "The Doctor's Deceit" and "The Hopi Raiders."

The Mystery of the Old Mill" was a brilliant star at the Empire, Stockton. "Redemption of a Soul" and "The Tiger's Paw" were two other attractive features. —The sketch, "Always Tell Your Wife" proved very laughable farce, and was greatly enjoyed by large crowds at the Royal Cinema, Stockton. "The Elusive Diamond" was also a splendid attraction.—An exciting film, "The Open Door" was screened to large audiences at the Globe, Stockton. Included in the programme were "The Death Stone of India" and a number of admirable comedy effects.

A popular film, "Daughter of Satan," was the foremost feature in an excellent programme at the Empire Playhouse, Darlington. Other interesting topics were "Reinstated," "The Gusher," and "Her Sick Father." In the latter half of the week the management made a big hit with the exclusive feature, "Human Torpedo."—Two prominent features, "In the Hands of London Crooks" and "Orders Under Seal" resulted in good business for the management of the Court Kinema and the Arcade Cinema, Darlington.

Application was made by Mr. L. Pratt, on behalf of the proprietors of the Court Kinema and the Arcade Cinema, at Darlington, for permission to open the halls on Whit-Sunday evening. It would, he said, be the ordinary programme and commence at 8.

Councillor Crooks (a magistrate) : Don't you think that you get sufficient in six days without seven, unless there is a special reason?

Mr. Pratt: I think it would do good by keeping people out of public-houses.

Dr. C. D. Hill Drury, the presiding magistrate, said that although it was Whit-Sunday and a holiday time it did not make that Sunday any the less sacred than any other. Unless there were special reasons the conditions of the licence must prevail. The matter had been discussed by the whole of the magistrates and taken thoroughly into consideration, and they came to the conclusion that they should not grant Sunday licences and that was their opinion that morning.

The application therefore was refused.

TUITION BY FILM.

The increased use of the cinematograph in the lecture theatre is only one of many tributes to the facilities offered by the cinema, and it is interesting to note that at the next meeting of the Institution of Automobile Engineers, a lecture is to be given by Dr. Low, and the cinematograph will be used to illustrate experiments upon automobile design and construction.

BOOK REVIEW.

PLAYWRITING FOR THE CINEMA. By ERNEST A. DENCH. A. and C. Black. 1s. net.

Although not the first work of its kind to appear, this little book on writing plays for the cinematograph is as good as any that has yet been published, at any rate in this country. Much of the advice it contains seems rather obvious, but it will doubtless be useful to the novice who is without any knowledge of the subject. The book deals almost exclusively with the rudiments of the art and scarcely at all with its higher developments, but so far as it goes its teaching seems to be sound. Two of the most useful features in the volume are the list of film producing companies, and the specimen scenario.

BRADFORD BREVITIES.

(BY OUR OWN REPRESENTATIVE.)

Mr. F G. Swindon, general manager of Hibberts Pictures, Limited, tells me that the effect of the summer weather, both on the supplies' department, and in respect of the shows controlled by the company, has been remarkably inconspicuous. Quite surprisingly good business is maintained, and this is largely ascribed to the steady improvement in quality of subjects now filmed.—Messrs. Arnold M. Crowe and Walter Hainsworth, of the Exchange Film Service, have dissolved partnership by mutual agreement, and the business will be continued by Mr. Crowe. The latter gentlemen is responsible for the suggestion, which has been adopted by the Bradford exhibitors, that Miss Florence Turner, on the occasion of her week's visit to the city to give her "turn" at the Empire, should be entertained at dinner. The members of the local Trade readily responded to the idea, and Miss Turner accepted the invitation, which was extended to her in Manchester in the course of a visit by Mr. A. E. Shields, acting Secretary of the local section of the Exhibitors' Association.—The Imperial Animated Picture Company, of Thorpe Chambers, Hustlergate, with Mr. W. Phillips at "the wheel," are still forging ahead and adding new customers daily.

At St. George's Hall the W. W. Jacobs series of pictures have been secured. "Lawyer Quince" was screened to very big houses. "Training Italian Cavalry" was the picture which has appeared on a good many programmes in the West Riding recently. The St. George's Hall bill is never without its first-class scenic, and "Torquay and its Surroundings" was no exception to the rule.—"On Secret Service" was featured by Mr. H. Leacey at the de Luxe, and the cosy little hall was filled with audiences keen to see this quickly produced story dealing with the present American-Mexican situation. "Northern Italy" was Mr. Leacey's travel picture, and his inevitable corner of instruction was filled by "Making High-grade Paper."—"A Winter's Tale" proved a tremendous attraction at the new Bradford Picture House, in Victoria Square, and Mr. Clarence H. Hurst saw that full justice was done to the great subject in his magnificent theatre. The leading feature of the succeeding programme here was "The Staircase of Death."—At the Picture House, Town Hall Square, Mr. J. S. Clayton top-lined "The Midnight Mystery" and "Suzanne Comes to Stay."—Mr. Clayton goes in strongly for the educational side, and in one programme included "A Tour Among the Dauphine Alps," and a portrayal of the artificial hatching and rearing of chickens. "In Mid-Atlantic" was the chief subject of his succeeding bill.—"Suzanne Comes to Stay" was also boomed by Mr. G. B. Mozley at the Hippodrome. He also showed a Sherlock Holmes story in "The Clue of the Wax Vesta."—At the Oak Lane Cinema Mr. Frank Bentz featured "The Lure of London." He achieved a notable success a few weeks ago with "Sixty Years a Queen." So many hundreds were unable to get in that he rebooked the picture, and has shown it again this week, old-age pensioners and military veterans, as on the previous occasions, being invited to view the pictures free of charge at matinées.—"The Lure of London" was screened to bumper houses by Mr. Hamilton at the Picturedrome. A good all-round programme of pictures is supplemented by a little vaudeville at this theatre.—At the King's Hall, "A Bid for a Throne" was an outstanding feature. "Black Roderick, the Poacher," was also screened here by Mr. Butler.—At the Coventry Hall Mr. H. Coe scored a great success with "Why?" and with "The Mystery of the Silver Scull."—"The Murdoch Trial" was only one of a capital programme provided at the Queen's Hall, Laisterdyke. "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle" and "Detective Daring and the Thames Coiners" could not be surpassed to suit the taste of the Laisterdyke people.—In Upper Manningham the picturesque Coliseum is daily drawing big houses. The hall is under the charge of Mr. R. H. Adams.—At the Elite, literally next door, Messrs. Anderton and Rawnsley have found the inclusion of a concert party a valuable feature.—"Unto the Third Generation" was a picture which drew big money, I understand, to the Olympic in Lilycroft.—At Messrs. Hibberts Temperance Hall, Mr. Smith Lord secured the American-Mexican war film, "On Secret Service," which is in great demand just now. The picture was witnessed with unflagging interest by Mr. Lord's patrons.—At the Towers Hall, Messrs. Hibberts' other Bradford house, the best possible fare is served up by Mr. Collingham.—Mr. L. Boocock screened "The Murdoch Trial to big houses at the Grand Manchester Road.—The Tivoli, in Leeds Road, is one of the cosiest theatres in the city, and is always well patronised. The show is under the charge of Mr. A. Walsh.—The Regent, in North Parade, is rapidly approaching completion, and the magnificence of building and equipment which will be found there is now becoming evident to the public who can get a clear view of the progress of work.

At the Ideal, Bankfoot, Mr. Herbert Pickles is running first-class bills, and is particularly successful in his specially prepared children's matinées. "Kissing Cup" and "The Ghost of the White Lady" were particularly successful features.

The Oxford is the latest picture theatre to be completed in Bradford. Its situation is at Undercliffe, a very thickly populated district, where Messrs. Smith and Turner, the proprietors, may be certain of maintaining the good support which has been their share in the hall's early days.

Owing to a dissolution of partnership in the proprietorship of the Queen's Palace, Shipley, the theatre was recently offered for sale at Manchester, but was withdrawn with the bidding at £4,000. The shows at the Queen's are not being interrupted, and the short plays by the Royal Stock Company are supplemented by the latest in films.—Mr. Frank H. Fortune is running the W. W. Jacobs series at the Prince's Hall, and also screened "On Secret Service." The Sherlock Holmes series has proved a very popular attraction here.—High-class fare is submitted by Mr. Frederick Siegel at the Pavilion de Luxe, Commercial Street. "On Secret Service" appeared here, and also "The Murdock Trial." "Sixty Years a Queen" had an immensely successful three days' run.

At the Idle Picture Palace, Mr. C. Dyke featured "The Death Weight" and "The Throw of the Dice."

Best (Pathé Frères), Mr. A. H. Paterson, and representatives from the National Union of Teachers, the London Teachers' Association, the Workers' Education Association, the Architectural Association, the Engineers' Education Association, the National League of Physical Education, etc.

Letters supporting the formation of the Association were read from the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, and the Headmaster of Manchester Grammar School, while the Archbishop of Armagh, the Duchess of Marlborough, the Headmaster of Eton, the Lord Provost of Glasgow, Sir Horace Plunkett, Sir Albert Rollit, Mr. Charles Urban, and others who wrote regretting their inability to attend.

In his address, the Chairman reviewed the history of the movement for attempting to realise the best uses of the cinematograph. In August, 1912, he wrote an article in The Times on the subject, and arranged the Educational Conference in connection with the International Kinematograph Exhibition organised by Mr. Ernest Schofield at Olympia, May, 1913. As a result of this conference a circular was issued to local education authorities by a sub-committee consisting of Sir Albert Rollit, Dr. Lyttelton, and himself. The most practical results of this circular followed in Scotland, and some of the signatories to the circular took a prominent part in the Educational Conference of the Kinematograph Exhibition held in Glasgow in February, 1914. Continuing, the Chairman said he had good authority for saying that the Education Committee of the London County Council approved the principle of the use of the cinematograph in education, but until they received more money from Imperial sources they were not likely to make a practical departure in this direction. He concluded by expressing his gratitude to Mr. Ernest Schofield for help, to Dr. Kimmins for many wise suggestions, to the members of the Provisional Committee, and to the Secretary (Mr. Morley Dainow).

The report of the Provisional Committee, from which we quoted in our last week's issue, was presented. Mr. Charles Bathurst, M.P., in moving the adoption of this report, said that he was fully conscious of the tremendous power of the cinematograph for good and evil. In the House of Commons he asked a question on behalf of the Association, and the President of the Board of Education replied that His Majesty's Board were fully aware of the possible uses of this new instrument, and were making investigations. Mr. Bathurst suggested that in the spread of knowledge about public health the cinematograph could be of the greatest possible use. As suggested, the chairmen of local education committees should be asked to become ex officio chairmen of local branches of the Association.

Professor Gregory seconded the adoption of the report, and urged upon the Association to make it its chief work to bring the productions of the cinematograph in very close relation to the work of the schools. He had seen films lately of volcanic eruptions, and thought them educative in the best sense. These were the sort of films to encourage. The work of such an Association was to look at the positive and constructive side, and to help to turn the cinematograph into one of the most efficient educational instruments.

After a discussion, the report was carried subject to the revision of a sub-committee consisting of Mr. J. W. Bunn (National Union of Teachers), Mr. A. P. Graves, and Mr. Morley Dainow.

The following officers were elected: — Vice-presidents: Sir William Chance, Bart., Dr. C. W. Kimmins, Sir Albert Rollit, and Colonel Sir James R. Dunlop Smith.

Executive Committee: Messrs. J. W. Bunn, Jos. Best, Mrs. Chambers, Messrs. R. P. Farley, H. A. Goodman, E. F. Hitchcock, Dr. C. W. Kimmins, Albert Smith, Dr. W. G. Sleight, the Rev. W. H. G. Twining, Messrs. J. H. Jay, Jos. A. White, A. P. Graves, Miss M. Hughes, B.Sc., Miss Penrose Philp.

Secretary, Mr. Morley Dainow, B.Sc.

EVENTS AT EALING.

"The Midnight Wedding" proved a record attraction at the Broadway Cinema. A Hot Time in Snakeville.—A matrimonial "ad." leads to a mean trick on the part of Mustang Pete. The attractive widow has, however, prepared a rousing reception with the aid of a crowd of kiddies, and Slim learns with pleasure of the trick. (June 11th. 994 ft.)

GAUMONT.

Fantomas: The False Magistrate.—The fifth instalment of this famous series of mystery plays. Specially reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of May 14th on p. 772. (June 8th. 3,395 ft.)

Rocks and Waves.—Some magnificent scenes are shown as secured during storms upon the Channel Islands, at Land's End, and finally at Bognor. (June 8th. 390 ft.)

The Limpet.—The habits of this pertinacious crustacean are clearly and cleverly illustrated. (June 8th. 280 ft.)

Tiny Tim Tries to be Good.—The sudden change proves most inexplicable to his parents, but the doctor's hat arouses the imp in Tim and they soon realise that he is himself again. (June 8th. 600 ft.)

MLLE. DAVRIÈRES,
The favourite Parisian actress.

His Sense of Duty.—The struggles of a poor country doctor are ineffectual and misfortune threatens him. An act of true nobility ends in a wealthy client clearing off his debts and the passing of anxiety. (June 11th. 875 ft.)

A Sublime Deception.—Society drama, the mother's sacrifice, at the cost of her own good name, saving the honour of an inconstant married daughter. (June 11th. 1,640 ft.)

Fish Curing on the Volga.—The quaint dress of the peasants adds a picturesque touch to a busy scene. (June 11th. 415 ft.)

HEPWORTH.

The Mystery of Mr. Marks.—Circumstantial evidence plays a big part in a well-written romance of society life. The girl's dilemma, torn between a denunciation of her own father and love for her accused sweetheart, is suddenly dispelled, a second tragedy enabling a fine dénouement. (June 8th. 2,275 ft.)

A Noble Deception.—Realising that he is about to rob his brother, the vicar, of the woman he loves, the visitor feigns drunkenness and so disgusts the woman that his departure clears the way for a better understanding. (June 11th. 1,000 ft.)

A. E. HÜBSCH & CO., LTD.

MESSTER.

Her Great Sin.—Used as a dupe for the procuring of an engineering secret, the girl soon finds that love has only been used as a blind. Her treachery to her father comes near to causing her suicide, but the designing business rival is finally worsted and perishes in a fire caused by a lapse into insanity. (June 8th. 2,662 ft.)

The Lover in the Lion's Den.—Comedy of an assignation which lands the lover into the wrong house. His efforts to escape lead him among the latest arrivals for the lion tamer. The rest of the film is of an extremely farcical nature. (June 8th. 918 ft.)

SASCHA.

The Black Hand.—An angry note causes dire trepidation and a cunning capture by means of a wardrobe. The receptacle and its human burden are taken to the station. An anxious moment and prisoner proves to be but a plebeian coalman. (June 11th. 893 ft.)

Maria Zell in a Snow-storm.—A novel scenic, taken under conditions of extreme difficulty, yet excellent in its results. (June 11th. 300 ft.)

KINETO

Music Hath Charms.—The effect of gramophone records upon various inmates of a Zoo is amusingly depicted, perhaps the most comical episode being that of the five bears, who hugely enjoy the strains of the instrument. (June 11th. 250 ft.)

Estrella, the Gipsy.—The eternal triangle is once again responsible for a tearful parting, and John, joining the gipsies, meets with some dramatic adventures through his love for Estrella. Some very perilous situations are seen during the action. (June 11th. 1,380 ft.)

GLORIA.

Over the Garden Wall.—Courtship between "Uncle from America" and a neighbouring mother-in-law is rudely interrupted by a quarrel between their servants. A comical double-barrelled feud follows until first one, then another, furtively climbs over and "makes it up." (June 11th. 975 ft.)

SOLAX.

Western Love.—The love of a rancher's son for an adventuress leads to a rupture and unhappiness for a pure soul. The struggles of the man and his visions when love turns to hatred are vividly shown until a new happiness ends the romance. (June 8th. 900 ft.)

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

Elizabeth's Prayer.—Driven to desperation by the act of a wayward husband, the mother is about to poison herself when the child's prayer floats in upon the night air. Hesitation ends in a new resolve when the husband enters contrite and begs and receives forgiveness. (June 8th. 1,028 ft.)

Kid Pink and the Maharajah.—The pompous sheriff "celebrates" while the boys do his work. An Indian potentate on tour enters the hotel and the tales told to Kid have their after effect in a most fantastic dream. (June 8th. 1,038 ft.)

The Countess and the Burglar.—The nerve of a society woman is well demonstrated when she notes through a mirror a slight movement of a curtain. Her little comedy of "bluff" is well shown, also the disposal of her jewels, which results in an extreemly clever capture. (June 8th. 956 ft.)

The Better Way.—The curse of a passion for liquor sends Ogden, a merchant, into the wild. Here he forgets all, owing to a serious accident, and nursed back to health by a farm girl, becomes her lover. His wife obtains a divorce for his desertion and is loved by the doctor, who is soon confronted with a grave psychological problem when his advice is sought for Ogden's sake. The settling of this is the main theme of the story. (June 11th. 2,020 ft.)

The Smuggler's Sister.—A briskly told story of the Western coast and the indecision of the revenue officer torn between his duty and love for a beautiful girl. (June 11th. 761 ft.)

G. SERRA.

CINES.

Bloomer Yawns.—The irresistible tendency of the little "comic" to gape and grin infects all and sundry, with the most ludicrous results. The effect even spreads to the objects and pictures in an art gallery. (June 8th. 320 ft.)

Sicilian Costumes and Customs. — Delightful scenes in one of the most picturesque countries in the universe. An amusing regatta and a Saint's day festival add a unique touch, as does a visit to the historic Greek colony. (June 8th. 470 ft.)

A Sneezing Cure.—Little Peggy has a dangerous knowledge of chemistry which is soon manifested when customers rush for boxes of the famous cure. Even the stalls in the market place are seen to succumb to the cachinnatory explosions which resound in all directions. (June 11th. 380 ft.)

HILARITY.

The Assistant Commissioner's Predicament.—A really farcical tale in true Gallic style. To the delight of the feminine relatives, poor henpecked Starkey receives a new appointment. He is quickly bundled off but runs into such a set of comical predicaments, owing to his amorous chief finding an actress in his office, that further promotion is seen to be the only way in which to smooth matters over. (June 11th. 2,000 ft.)

THANHOUSER.

The Woman Pays.—Tragedy and pathos are finely intermingled in a sumptuously-staged society drama. The raid upon a gambling establishment is a striking crucial episode. Reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of May 14th, on pp. 772-3. (June 11th. 3,026 ft.)

PRINCES.

A Romance of the Rural Route.—Furious over his daughter's love for the postman, the girl's father adroitly schemes that a letter shall arrive minus certain orders, and secures the man's dismissal. A forgotten duplicate envelope and a thumb mark puts the girl on to a clue, and she aids a clever and successful investigation. (June 8th. 1,012 ft.)

TRANS-ATLANTIC FILM CO

BISON 101.

The Raid of the Human Tigers.—A military subject, the scenes of which are laid among the haunts of the lawless Afridis, or Himalayan hill dwellers. Specially reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of April 30th, p. 551. (June 11th. 2,725 ft.)

MISS MABEL NORMAND

The sensation of the year is the success of CHAS. CHAPLIN, whom trade viewers declare far funnier in Keystones than even in "Mumming Birds." One of his films is which shows how his admiration of a film beauty led to a commotion in a cinema and finally took him to the Keystone studio—and a job. All the Keystone heads are in this and it is packed with indescribably funny incidents.

Released Mon. July 13th. Approx. length 1,020 ft.

Another in which he gives evidence of unusual talent is in which all the humour centres about an umbrella, the struggle for the possession of which leads to side-splitting scenes.

Released Thurs. July 9th. Approx. length 1,020 ft.

BOOK BRONCHOS

IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR REAL FEATURES OF MODERATE LENGTH IN YOUR ORDINARY PROGRAMME. ONE AND ALL NEW STORIES, PRESENTED IN A NEW MANNER WITH PERFECT ACTING AND PHOTOGRAPHY is, by universal consent, the best Broncho for many months. The story is really idyllic and true to life in an uncommon degree, and the treatment is delightfully fresh. The story turns upon the will left by a New England lady by which her son must marry her ward or forfeit his inheritance. He gives plain signs of his hatred of the condition and the girl contemplates herself making an unwelcome marriage to leave him free. As a penniless man he soon learns the worthlessness of many of his old friends and comes to bless the condition he had at first disliked so intensely.

In its clever contrast between the peace of the country and the turmoil of the town, in its acting and in its photography this is an out of the common release which demands your consideration.

The DISTINCTIVE FILMS.

We are advertising this subject a long way ahead because we do not want anybody to be able to say they had no opportunity of seeing it. We think ita film that has only to be seen to be booked. We shall be showing it in London next week. Will you come and See it?

The Play's The Thing

In TWO PARTS.

The great world and the little world "behind the scenes" are contrasted in this story of a just revenge executed under circumstances of dramatic novelty. The leading actor discovers his sister's deceiver in the same cast as himself. The play demands that they shall fight on the stage and he makes the mimic combat a real one to avenge the dead.

A FEATURE in power of plot, in intensity of acting and in its startling novelty of staging.

Released Monday, July 20th. Approx. length 2,068 ft.

A WORTH WHILE FILM

On the open market, but with all the dramatic and pictorial qualities of an expensive feature. Every foot has its incident and the plot is one of the sort your audience like.

THE RAIDERS

This film shows K.B's novelty of presentation and strength of plot at their best. It is a tale of Kentucky in the early days when illicit spirit making was largely carried on, and the story which contains the essential love interest is cleverly centred about this illegal industry. The action is rapid and contains good fighting episodes, and the photography is magnificent. It is an open market feature which would be value for money even at enhanced rates.

Released Thursday, JULY 9th. App. Length 2,028 ft

DIVORCE

Her Father's Guilt.—The old man becomes entangled with a notorious adventuress, and steals from his son-in-law. Circumstantial evidence goes against the boy, and it is only upon the death of the father and a rascally Mexican that the tangle is unravelled. (June 8th. 1,955 ft.)

CRYSTAL.

McSweeney's Masterpiece.—The artist is so obsessed by his life-size Cleopatra that he falls asleep in the studio and dreams of the days of old Egypt. His wife awakens him to stern reality. (June 8th. 825 ft.)

Harold's Burglar.—A young detective, by a curious error, mistakes his future father-in-law for a crook. The arrest leads to an impasse, and tears for Lilian. (June 11th. 545 ft.)

Some Doings.—When the new maid is mistaken for the niece of the Parvenoos, then begin the trouble and "some" complications. (June 11th. 400 ft.)

FRONTIER.

Slim Joins the Army,—But soon secures his release when found in the company of counterfeiters. He is able, however, to console his village Molly, and becomes her hero. (June 11th. 1,018 ft.)

The Turning Point.—Lured away by a stranger, the wife finds a bitter disillusionment in the City. Visions of her husband building the hut call her West, and she hastens to him for forgiveness. (June 11th. 989 ft.)

The Fatal Card.—Drama of mistaken identity and a capture, which is about to become a lynching when the card, found in the roll of notes, reveals the real criminal. (June 11th. 995 ft.)

GOLD SEAL.

The Honour of the Mounted.—Mac leaves his sweetheart and her brother, his chum, in order to join the Mounted Police. He is sent to trail a murderer, and finds that the man is his chum, who shot in defence of his sister's honour. A great mental struggle ends in a victory for friendship. (June 8th. 1,310 ft.)

IMP.

The Box Couch.—Jealous of his wife, the new husband secretes himself in a box ottoman. The lid becomes a fixture, and the suspicious man's dilemma anything but pleasant. (June 8th. 996 ft.)

Leaves from Mayer's Sketch-book.—A resume of a number of famous drawings, which have won this artist his reputation. (June 11th. 308 ft.)

Love Versus Law.—Taking advantage of the bravado of the girl's father, King holds up the coach. He is arrested as a bandit, but the real outlaw hears of the girl's distress, and coming to the front enables King's release and her happiness. (June 11th. 1,995 ft.)

JOKER.

Fishing Industry of the Great Lakes.—Some picturesque scenes of a great feature of the American lakes in fine photography. (June 8th. 455 ft.)

The Lightweight Champion.—Ernest is ejected from the dance hall by a cowboy tough, who has stolen his girl. A prize fighting friend in disguise earns for Ernest the reputation of a hero. (June 11th. 565 ft.)

NESTOR.

A Flash in the Dark.—Blinded by an explosion, and his wife prepares to elope. The husband comes upon the runaways, and a duel, fought in a darkened room, quickly causes a change in the woman's affections. (June 8th. 955 ft.)

Scooped by a Hen-Coop.—Jim emulates Falstaff, but comes to blows with the lady's father. The latter is chased for chicken-stealing, and is forced to consent to a marriage. (June 8th. 1,070 ft.)

POWERS.

Almost a White Hope.—Wouldby Strong is a terror at home, but when matched to fight the champion succumbs to the wiles of Bacchus, and almost loses the society of his better half. (June 8th. 955 ft.)

REX.

Woman's Burden.—Deserted in the hour of trouble by a student, Peggy leaves her child with a sister and becomes a wanderer in the city. The girl grows up, and the student, on learning her identity, makes amends for the past. (June 11th. 996 ft.)

VICTOR.

The Dread Inheritance.—Told by a false doctor friend that he is physically unclean, the youngster breaks off his engagement, and sinks to dissipation. His clean spirit, however, is scourged to rebellion, and when he learns of the duplicity of the doctor he seeks a reconciliation. (June 8th. 1,730 ft.)

Love's Victory.—Keeping her identity a secret, the wife works in the same office as her husband. A forgery, by the employer, is fastened upon the husband, but a woman's wit discovers its author, and a big reward enables a happier home life. (June 11th. 1,970 ft.)

EC-KO.

Snooks as a Fireman.—Snooks' efforts prove more amusing to the spectator than profitable to the insurance people. His mix-up with the hose does not even damp the fire of mistaken zeal. (June 8th. 576 ft.)

HERON.

A Cataract Gorge in Flood.—Wildly picturesque scenes of a rugged and dangerous locality. A well selected series of views. (June 8th. 414 ft.)

A Man's Cross Roads.—At the mercy of vile plotters, the henpecked hero engages in a great and thudding burlesque of Transpontine melodrama. (June 11th. 573 ft.)

URBANORA.

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

Specimens of Strange Fish.—A visit to the noted museum of M. de Vissier, at Nogent-sur-Marne, enables a film of rare educational value, some very curious specimens being revealed. (June 8th. 380 ft.)

A Model of Perseverance.—Peter determines to have his portrait painted, but wherever he poses meets with some unexpected trouble, finally disappearing over a huge precipice. (June 8th. 415 ft.)

Persistent Peter.—Following Dupin and a lady into the train, Peter enacts the role of spoil sport until thrown on to the line. Even when at sea Dupin is forced to adopt "stern" measures, and Peter is left to swim home. (June 11th. 575 ft.)

URBANRADIOS.

Wonders of Hindustan.—Life in the principal cities of the great Empire, and views of the great mosques, including the Jumna-Masjid, Delhi, the Amoritsar or golden temple, and the glorious Taj Mahal, the finest building in the Universe. (June 1. 410 ft.)

VITAGRAPH.

Iron and Steel.—In a stirring drama the falsity of a fellow workman puts the great manufacturer in possession of the plans of a clever invention. Fate takes a hand and the sweetheart of the magnate's daughter, himself an engineer, comes across the ruined workman. A cute scheme results in the magnate being forestalled at the Patent Office and being forced to bestow his daughter's hand. (June 8th. 1,954 ft.)

Fatty on the Job.—His aspirations as a farm hand run more in the direction of "shirk." Hiding in a chicken coop causes him to "capture" a thief, and Lucy finally votes him a hero. (June 8th. 649 ft).

Lumbering in Sweden.—The tremendous scale upon which the timber trade is carried on is shown in an interesting manner. (June 8th. 370 ft.)

Sawdust and Salome.—The barrier of arrogant pretence is set up against Grey's wife when his family find that she has been a "mere circus rider." A fancy dress ball and his sister's appearance as Salome, opens Grey's eyes to hyprocrisy, and he leaves the house with his loving wife. (June 8th. 1,049 ft.)

Back to Broadway.—In the course of a delightful comedy the plight of a stranded millionaire is cleverly relieved by a little manicure girl. He rushes off in order to foil his scheming enemies, then remembers the girl who had saved him and repays the debt by a timely munificence. (June 11th. 1,993 ft.)

His Little Page.—Fearful lest he should incur the displeasure of his rich uncle, Foster keeps his marriage a secret. A visit causes wifey to be disguised as a page. Some humorous incidents, and Peggy's heroism is finally revealed, also her sex, by a fire. The delighted old fellow soon alters his will. (June 11th. 1,010 ft.)

The First Endorsement.—Told by the adjutant of a military prisoner the colonel is aghast when confronted by his scapegrace son. The reasons for the young soldier's downfall are well depicted. He dies by his own hand rather than face an innocent sister. June 11th. 1,049 ft.)

The Haunted Hotel.—This really wonderful trick picture is reissued and will appeal as strongly as ever. (June 11th. 500 ft.)

WESTERN IMPORT CO.

The Colonel's Adopted Daughter.—Anna is adopted as a papoose by the colonel. In after years her father, the Indian chief, leads an attack, and Anna gives up her life in order to save him after his capture. (June 8th. 1,050 ft.)

The Arrow Maker's Daughter.—Picturesque scenery and a magnificent battle scene are features of a drama of Indian life, the friendly Reds helping the Whites in return for a kindness done to the heroine. (June 11th. 2,008 ft.)

KEYSTONE.

Love and Gasoline.—Ingenious and very funny comedy with a wild and sensational motor chase. Reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of April 30th, on pages 552-3. (June 8th. 1,040 ft.)

Mabel's Bear Escape.—Two half-grown cubs give Mabel a busy time and appear to enjoy the fun of the pursuit very much more than the lady. (June 11th. 995 ft.)

KOM.

Won by Strategy.—The use of make-up enables a lover to change the girl's opinion as to her latest admirer, who comes in for a rough reception. The count is "counted out" on his next visit. (June 8th. 565 ft.)

Walt's Photograph.—Boarding-house comedy, a star boarder's dodge, that of bestowing a signed photo upon all the ladies, leading to a lively scrum. (June 11th. 548 ft.)

IN THE METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

(NOTES ON THE LONDON HALLS.)

Military visits were paid to the King's Hall, Tooting, in connection with the filming of "The British Army" last week. There were two representations per night, and the spacious hall was thronged on each occasion. On the first two evenings the drum and fife band of the East Surrey Regiment of the Territorial Force attended from Wimbledon, and on the Thursday the full band of the battalion came over and marched into the hall. During the showing of the film they played appropriate selections. On other evenings Mr. West's orchestra showed their ability. Also included in the programme were such items as "The Face of Fear," "The Baby Bride," and "Declaration Day at the Soldiers' Home, California." There has been a change in the managership of the above hall in consequence of Mr. C. Fox having, three weeks ago, received an appointment as manager of the Picture Playhouse, Berkhampstead. His successor, Mr. James Bollen, has already become well known to the patrons of the house. He brings to his task experience gained as acting manager and secretary of the Brighton Alhambra and manager of the Middlesex Music-hall, followed by five years with the New Bioscope Trading Company, in which capacity he has been brought into contact with many halls throughout the country.

Visitors to the Tooting Broadway Palace are warm in their approval of the fare provided by Messrs. Browning and Hiller. Last week the leading items were "Give Us This Day—" and "Classmates." This week there are "The Children of Captain Grant" and "The Black Flag" as the top lines. The orchestra has been strengthened, and Mr. F. Nassau, late of the King's Hall and Balham de Luxe, has been appointed conductor.

With weather that made people inclined to visit the river or to take a country drive, the past two weeks have proved the excellence of the accommodation afforded by the spacious Tooting Pavilion recently opened by Mr. Pearse. The programme continues to be first-class, comprising this week such pieces as "The Chinese Death Thorn" and "In Peril of the Law."

June 22nd will be the date of the opening of the Brixton Colours Week at the Brixton Palladium, on the occasion of a week's screening of "The British Army." Following "A Terrible Night at Sea," this week's programme here is headed by "A Master of the World."

"Classmates" was at the top of the bill for the first half of the present week at the Balham Pavilion, and it is followed by "The Red Club."

At the Palais Cinema, Chiswick, last week the principal films were "Dare-devil Detective" and "Secret of the Black Mask" for the first part of the week, and "Officer John Donovan" and "Mistake of Her Life" for the second. For stimulating attendance at the children's matinées on Saturday, Mr. S. F. Hanks, the manager, finds the distribution of a little pasteboard advertising ticket useful.

At the Ellstree Theatre, Chiswick, Mr. P. Twitchin presented "A Terrible Night at Sea" during the later part of last week. Earlier films were "The Man Who Lied" and "In the Days of Napoleon."

Attractions last week at the Broadway Cinema, Hammersmith, included "'Neath the Lion's Paw," "The Bo'sun's Mate," "The Great Turf Sensation," and "Saved from a Living Death."

At the Park Cinema, Hammersmith, last week's star films were "The Black Ship," "A Romance of Old Brittany," "The Dock Catastrophe," and "The Filly."—The Putney Picture Playhouse has a strong programme for the present week, when it was arranged to present "David Copperfield."

The Prince of Wales Picture Playhouse, Harrow Road, had a big attraction last week in "The Lights o' London." A popular addition to the performance of this house is the giving of organ recitals.—Last week, at the King's Picture Palace, Kensal Rise, Mr. Dudley Benda screened "The Murdoch Trial."

The Gaisford Cinema still continues on a prosperous career. "The Miracle" recently paid a return visit to this hall, with special chorus and musical "effects."

which has been reseated with plush tip-ups for over 600. The performance is from 2 till 11, and "exclusives" are a strong attraction.

Success still attends the Palace Cinema, Kentish Town Road, one of the most recently erected halls in this district. Hepworth's singing pictures and "The Lights o' London" were two of the most interesting features of a well-chosen programme.

Calling at Mr. R. P. Beck's Alhambra, Kentish Town Road, I found that Mr. E. P. Ferber has taken over the management of this hall. "Exclusives" and a capable orchestra, under the direction of Professor Wallace Walters, have been successful in attracting large numbers to this hall.

With "The World, the Flesh, and the Devil" topping the bill at the Camden Hippodrome last week it is not surprising that the seating accommodation was at a premium.—The strong dramatic programmes which the manager of the Stanley Cinema submits to his large audiences keep business on the up grade. A recent innovation is the children's matinée on Saturday.

The Avenue Picture Theatre, Camden Town, is under the direction of Mr. Tudge. The recent extended seating accommodation has readily been taken advantage of.—At the People's Picture Playhouse excellent programmes and comfortable seating accommodation are responsible for a big increase in business. A capacity house was enjoying "Discovery of America."

"Fisher Girl of Skagen" was a big attraction at the Fan Cinema, Camden Town. "The Speed Kings" and "By Taxi to Fortune" were equally well received.—At the Grafton Electric "United in Danger" was successful in gripping the attention of a big audience, while "Teaching Pa a Lesson" and "A Friend in Need" were two other interesting subjects. Good business continues to be done at the Euston Palladium, where the programme is invariably well received.

AN OUTFITTING ORDER.

The Bioscope, Film and Supply Company, Limited, report excellent business at their Lisle Street premises, the "Model A" projector proving an unusually good line since the acquisition of the business of the Brockliss Cinemachinery, Limited. The firm have just secured the order for ticket-issuing machines, programme boards, feature frames and prismatic signs for the Picture Playhouse, Dalston. The progress of this new firm is typical of the rapid advance of some of the most successful of our Trade houses. In Messrs. De la Cour, Facey and Thearle there is an unusually strong trio, to whom success should undoubtedly accrue.

GRASSO ON THE SCREEN.

The enterprising Italian company known as Morgana Films are losing no time in following up their achievement in securing the especial services of the world-famous Sicilian actor, Giovanni Grasso. Although the initial production, that of "Captain Blanco," has not been released, they are already at work upon a second subject. The company have just issued a fine series of posters, of which the following is but one. As is usual with Continental posters, the colouring has received very special attention.

The new film mentioned above also contains, it is said, some superb acting, and is rich in emotional incidents. Its title will be "Lost in the Dark," and the subject is a film version of a famous comedy by that distinguished author, Signor Bracco. The new films should speedily become popular with the public, and we hear that all posters are to receive a very notable attention at the hands of the firm.

FOR THE MAILING LIST.

Will firms in the Trade kindly note that the Atlas Educational Film Company of Chicago, have removed their offices from 1024 Van Buren Street, to 5, So. Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.—Mr. J. J. Cotter is this week, as lessee and manager, opening the Stanhope Gate Cinema, Finchley, N. Pending further arrangements, he requests that all communications be addressed to 56, Davis Road, Acton, W.

SNIPPETS FROM SOUTHPORT.

(By Our Own Correspondent.)

It is particularly pleasing to be able to record that, despite very exceptional counter attractions in the amusement world at Southport during the last fortnight, the cinema theatres, without exception, have fully held their own, and all report very good business. Indeed, it would be no fault of the respective managements if such a report could not be presented, for the excellence of the many programmes is kept well before the public eye. Anyone who has been in Southport during the last six months must have noticed a tremendous change in the posting stations. Formerly the pictorial ones were chiefly devoted to tradesmen's advertisements and the theatre. Now the picture palaces claim an amazing amount of space. There can be no doubt Southport managers, particularly those of the Picture Palace, Picturedrome and Neville Street Picture House, believe in this particular form of placing their announcements before the public. Competition has become very keen, but it is quite evident the controlling forces in the cinema world will successfully cope with it.

It will be recalled that a Southport and District Branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association was formed at the time of the Sunday cinema controversy, and did good and successful work in connection therewith. The other afternoon I had a chat with Mr. H. Kennedy, the secretary, and asked him if they were having regular meetings now. "No," he replied, "but it would not be safe to assume that we are asleep. We have formed the Branch, and rest assured when occasion arises we shall not be found wanting." All of which is true, and the Trade here can rest assured its interests will be closely watched.

There have been some really brilliant programmes during the last two weeks. Not only has the high standard been maintained, it has been surpassed. Take the Picture Palace, Lord Street, so capably looked after by Mrs. Parker. Mr. H. Kennedy, the secretary, has had some films for "top-liners," including "The Lure of London," "A Fateful Likeness" "She Stoops to Conquer" and "The Cricket on the Hearth."

It proved a happy thought on the part of Mr. Geoffrey Hill at the Picturedrome, to have a return visit of Mr. Fred J. Hudson, as lecturer for "Round the World in Two Hours." Last week he had a Dickensian film as the premier attraction in the "Old Curiosity Shop."

For week after week Mr. William Walker, who tells me that the numerous new patrons the Kinetophone secured for him at the Nevill Street Picture House, has consistently continued. The patronage has billed excellent exclusives, including the Wells v. Blake fight film. Mr. Walker is, too, establishing quite a reputation because of the thrilling detective pictures he has been able to secure. Incidentally, he says he finds these meet the wishes of those who visit his house to a nicety. In this connection I might mention "Her Scorn Repaid" and "Fight for Millions," which have had the place of honour, as have "The Filly" and "The Black Spot" for the fortnight.

Mention of "The Were-Wolf," "The Hour and the Man," "Jerry's Uncle's Namesake" and "Fitzhugh's Ride," which Mr. Frederick M. Jones has had as "stars" at the Empire Picture Theatre, indicates that he also specialises in that type of film which arrests the attention at the very beginning, and holds it throughout. When I looked in the other evening I found Mr. Jones serenely admiring the well-filled seats in every part of the house. "Business," he remarked, "is good. There has been no diminution in numbers, but a notable increase."

Mr. Frederick Clive at the Palladium, has been running a W. W. Jacobs series of films. They have been highly appreciated.—At the Pier Pavilion, Mr. Eric Longden has had in the bioscope department "On Their Wedding Eve," "Hawkeye as Hall Porter," "Cascades and Torrents" and "Right of Way."—Programmes as good as ever had characterised the performances at the Birkdale Picture Palace.

PLYMOUTH AND DISTRICT NOTES

(By Our Own Correspondent.)

There has ben no outstanding incident in connection with the cinema life of Plymouth and district, and from what I could gather the business done was satisfactory.

Everyone who patronised Mr. Knowles at the Theatre de Luxe must have felt more than pleased with the programme. "The Carbon Copy" was a play of great interest, and those who failed to get their risible faculties touched by "Fatty's Flirtation" and "Diana's Dress Reform" would indeed be hard to please. The sporting fraternity, of course, greatly enjoyed the boxing contest between Wells and Blake. In a naval centre like the Three Towns, a film depicting the Naval branch of the Services was certain of such a cordial reception as that accorded "Life in the British Navy."

The management of Andrews' Picture Palace were very generous, their programme containing as it did "The Murdock Trial" and "A King's Romance." The entertainment was consistently good, both in comedy and drama, and this much patronised house had a prosperous run during the week.

Capital success attended the production of "In the Bishop's Carriage" at the Cinedrome.—Mr. Rundle can be congratulated in so well focussing the requirements of his patrons at the Theatre Elite, where he had on view the sensational film "The Bird of Prey." The Wild West was admirably depicted in "The Harvest of Sin," and the Indian drama, "The Penalty," was worthy of the high appreciation which found expression at the conclusion of its presentation. For fun, "Jerry's Uncle's Namesake" would be difficult to beat.

The greatest satisfaction could be heard expressed by the audiences dispersing at the Electric Theatre, Devonport, with the programme submitted by Mr. Boultwood, and no mistake, the pictures were of a high order. Detective stories have a big hold upon the cinema public, and "Dare-Devil Detective" was indeed a splendid representative of this class of film. "Daniel" made a capital impression. "Mid Kentucky Hills" and "A Bunch of Flowers" were also very pleasing. Mr. Harry Haynes in his song scenas, and the orchestra under Mr. Charles Jeffery, are also contributory factors to the high reputation of this theatre.—"The Lure of Gold" proved a good draw at the Tivoli, Devonport, where Mr. Cecil Frost was complimented upon his fare. "When an Angel Came" and "The Harvest of Sin" were on view, in addition to some good comedies, including "Simon and the Pelican."

THE PICK OF THE PROGRAMMES.

WHAT WE THINK OF THEM.

A Deal With the Devil.

The author of this striking film has made use of the theme which is the basis of the legend of Faust, and which has recently been turned to good account on the screen in that remarkable drama, "The Student of Prague." In this instance, however, the author has somewhat varied its treatment by making the events the subject of a dream, thereby minimising the full extent of the tragedy and allowing the hero the opportunity to profit by his warning.

Walter Fabre, a young medical student, is so much engrossed by his studies and his determination to become rich and famous, that he steadily refuses to join in the revels of his fellow students, but worn out by a long night of study he falls asleep at his desk. The Spirit of Evil appears to him and offers the full realisation of all his ambition in return for ten years of his life. Walter, though fully aware of the identity of his visitor, is willing to accept the terms of the bargain, but demands some proof. He is informed that the king is lying dangerously ill, having been given up by his physicians. Walter is to go the palace and offer his services. If the Spirit stands at the foot of the patient he will recover, but if at the head, death is inevitable. Walter accepts the challenge, and effecting what seems to be a miraculous cure, his fame spreads over the country and his position is secure. His practice becomes enormous, for with the assistance of the Devil he is able to tell at a glance how the case will terminate. He falls in love with a beautiful girl whose mother has a serious accident. Being hastily called in, Walter is horrified to find Mephistopheles standing at the head of the bed. For the sake of the girl he implores the fiend to grant him this one life, and the devil consents, though he warns Walter that he must pay tenfold later on.

Five years pass and Walter, rich and famous, is happy in the love of his wife and child, when the little girl falls suddenly ill, and the distracted father rushing to her bedside, is confronted by the Satanic figure standing immovable at her head. He resorts to every trick to change her position, but his master is inexorable, and Walter experiences his first great grief. Broken down in health he sees the sinister figure at his own bedhead, and as the fiend covers him over with black wings, he wakes. When he has recovered from the shock he calls in his young companions and aknowledges that fame and wealth are not life's greatest gifts.

The piece is superbly played and mounted. Mr. Olaf Fouss, who has made so many successes with the Nordisk Company, is wonderfully impressive as the student, Walter. His manner and bearing, particularly on his return from the funeral of his child, a fine piece of emotional acting, are dignified and expressive, and his personal qualifications are exceptional. The mounting and photography are of a high standard, but we cannot help feeling that the Devil, who is generally credited with the faculty of assuming any disguise, would gain in dignity and impressiveness if clothed in the dress of modern civilisation. His dress inevitably suggests the Demon King of Pantomime, and his sudden appearances have more suggestion of ingenious trickery than mysterious horror. The part is exceptionally well played, and the actor may be said to triumph, in spite of a somewhat severe handicap. (Nordisk Film Company. Released June 22nd. Length 2,230 ft.)

Old Reliable.

This fine drama shows how the trusted caretaker of a bank, known for his sterling integrity as "Old Reliable," takes the blame of an attempted theft on to his own shoulders, and serves a sentence of five years, to shield the son of his employer, who is the real thief. On his release "Old Reliable" can only find employment as a waiter in a restaurant. While serving there he discovers that his daughter, now a typist at the bank, is placed in a position of great peril by the unscrupulous attentions of the banker's son, and in protecting his daughter's honour the old man is enabled to vindicate his own innocence and regain his old position in the banker's establishment.

The drama would have been stronger had the old man tried in vain to prove his innocence, for we cannot think that a husband and father is justified in sacrificing his good name and ruining the future of his family merely out of consideration for the feelings of his employer, no matter what his obligations might have been. Otherwise, the play is admirably constructed, and the incidents are plausible and effectively introduced. The character drawing is remarkably true, and the sturdy honesty of the old porter presents an effective contrast to the gradual deterioration of the pleasure-loving man-about-town. In this repect the author is greatly indebted to the company engaged in the representation of his work, and it must be considered as a triumph for three popular members of the Vitagraph Company, who here give us some of their very finest work. Mr. Van Dyke Brooke has never appeared to greater advantage than in the part of Old Reliable. He looks the character of the trusted retainer to the life, giving a delightful picture of well merited content in the early scenes with his wife and little daughter, and showing genuine pathos when, after his release from gaol, he seeks humble employment rather than reveal himself to the daughter on whom his presence might bring a slur. Miss Norma Talmadge, who passes gracefully from a most engaging "flapper" to bewitching and dignified girlhood, gives a very sweet and womanly performance. Her handling of a scene in which the young banker thinks to take advantage of her instinctive innocence marks Miss Talmadge as an actress of rare discretion and unusual charm. Mr. Leo Delaney gives a clever study of the profligate young son, and the smaller characters are faultlessly played by members of a stock company which is unequalled in its perfect balance.

The piece is mounted with the care and taste that distinguishes the productions of this studio, and the photography is flawless. Vitagraph Company, Limited. Released July 9th. Length 1,998 ft.)

The Story of Venus.

Officially described as "a modernised mix-up of the ancients," one cannot help feeling that this novel little film suffers somewhat from being a trifle too much of a "mix-up." The idea behind it—the illustration of various well-known mythological situations by means of a modern love story on parallel lines—is an excellent one, but at times the old is so much entangled with the new that the elaborate symbolism intended becomes rather difficult to follow and appreciate. In short, the film offers an example of an original and interesting conception somewhat marred by imperfect execution.

The mythological scenes are not always carried out with the care for detail and accuracy of costume which should have characterised them, and it is something of a shock to behold a troupe of Roman deities entering into a palace of an obviously Oriental design. On the other hand, these numerous references to famous tales and ancient gods and goddesses render the film unusually attractive, as well as extremely novel, and if one or two of the scenes are inclined to resemble glimpses of a classical fancy dress ball, this does not lessen their picturesque effectiveness. Originality and imagination in film plays are always welcome, and although the present picture may not be entirely without its faults, it nevertheless contains a large number of uncommon merits, which should be quite sufficiently strong in themselves to secure for it considerable success. "The Story of Venus" is decidedly a picture quite out of the ordinary run. (Selig film. Released July 2nd. Length 955 ft.)

The Afghan Raiders.

Here is an excellent Anglo-Indian military melodrama which, in spite of certain crudities of plot, is as thrilling as one could desire. There are any number of magnificent fights and exciting situations, and from a spectacular point of view the film is as good as anything of the kind that has been done. One might, of course, find fault with certain details of the story and of the setting without great difficulty, but it would be as unfair as it would be unnecessary to peer too closely at the texture of what is, as a whole, a first-rate entertainment. The acting is very good throughout the rather lengthy cast, that particularly charming actress, Miss Bessie Eyton, giving an especially sympathetic and intelligent performance as the heroine of the piece. There is not a great deal more to be said about the film, which is frankly a melodrama, but a thoroughly excellent one. Such pictures as this are always welcome with a large majority of picture theatre audiences, and in the present case the Indian setting lends the production rather unusual novelty. "The Afghan Raiders" should be very successful. (Selig film. Released July 2nd. Length 2,147 ft.)

Broncho Billy and the Rattler.

There is very little need to extol any film in which Mr. G. M. Anderson appears, for this famous actor's playing is as consistently excellent as it is consistently popular. Mr. Anderson could carry any story through by sheer force of personality, and any picture in which he is seen must always be a personal triumph.

When one has said that Mr. Anderson plays in it, one has said nearly everything there is to be said about "Broncho Billy and the Rattler," which, for the rest, is just a good little drama of Western life of a type which is perfectly familiar to everyone. From the title of the film one is inclined to expect the "rattler" (which our American dictionary tells us means a rattlesnake) to figure in the story rather more prominently than it actually does. Its appearance on the screen is limited to about half a minute, but although the incident is at first sight apparently of trifling importance, one realises, in view of subsequent events, that it was a sufficiently essential part of the plot to justify its inclusion in the title. There is much beautiful scenery in the film, and many glimpses of that lusty, manly open-air life of the prairies which the cinemato-

Black Jack, the Cracksman.

Messrs. Pathé Frères have now given us so many wonderful films of every type that one visits their showrooms with a pleasant feeling of certainty as to the excellence of the picture one is to witness. In fact, these delightful Friday afternoon gatherings at Wardour Street have become quite a feature of the Trade week, and the Pathé private theatre in these days is a regular cinema club.

"Black Jack," the film with which we were entertained last Friday, is a picture thoroughly worthy of Messrs. Pathé's high ideals and reputation. It has not perhaps quite the many-sided interest of the Rocambole picture recently reviewed in these columns, but then, although in general character it is a film of the same type, in particular details it is quite different. Although in some respects coming under the heading of "detective drama," we should prefer to describe it as a drama of passion and jealousy into which crime and the detection thereof enter rather as incidents. For it is certain that the most striking and noteworthy feature of the production is the wonderful performance given by Mme. Erna Morena as Héloïse, the passionate and unhappy heroine of the piece, round whose strangely attractive personality the chief interest of the drama centres. Héloïse is the mistress of a bullying "swell mobsman," who uses her as his tool in his nefarious operations. Growing weary of her beauty, he transfers his affections to another woman member of the gang—a coarse creature of an altogether lower nature. Already inflamed by the sharp pricks of petty slights and infidelities, Héloïse is tormented into a frenzy of hatred by this last brutality, and is driven by the bitterness of her jealousy to take revenge upon her lover, a revenge from which her fine soul would otherwise have recoiled. There is also a very important and ingeniously devised counter-plot showing the manner in which Black Jack's gang steal a pearl necklace, and afterwards depicting the stratagem by which a clever detective recovers it and brings the culprits to book. It will be seen that there is any amount of sensational incident in the film beside the deep human interest of the unhappy woman's love tragedy. Personally, we find the chief attraction in the latter, but so well is the plot constructed and balanced, there may equally be many who will consider the former more fascinating. In any case, it may be said with entire honesty that "Black Jack" is a first-rate picture, very considerably superior to the average film of the kind both in dramatic interest and in human appeal. And in so many of these detective stories the human element is sadly lacking.

The staging of the film is quite beyond reproach, and apart from Mme. Morena's performance, the acting is excellent also. Mme. Lotte Neumann gives a wonderfully vivid study of the light-o'-love, Froufrou, and Mme. Lehmann is remarkably clever as the old hag, Mother Miericke. The smaller parts are all magnificently done, and there are several extraordinarily finished studies of characteristic criminal types. The film is the work of a German firm, the Literaria Company, who have been responsible for many notably fine productions in the past. (Literaria film. Pathé Frères Cinema, Limited. In three parts.)

How Pimple Won the Derby.

The inimitable and all-popular Pimple is too well known to need any introduction, nor is it really necessary to make comment upon his latest film. It is sufficient to state that a new Pimple comic has arrived; readers will be able to imagine for themselves the fresh instalment of wild merriment which is in wait for them. Although, however, there may be no need to eulogise the art of this most humorous comedian, one cannot refrain from remarking upon the originality displayed in the selection of subjects for these excellent films. We do not know who is responsible for their authorship; possibly Pimple perpetrates them personally. But it is quite certain that no other brand of comics is characterised by so unceasing a supply of first-rate new ideas. One is interested in a Pimple film as much by its subject as by the fame of its chief comedian. And it is certain that no topical skit or burlesqued drama could be more widely attractive, so far as its subject was concerned, than the present parody of the world's greatest horse race.

Pimple's Derby is likely to arouse more attention than the legitimate event itself. At any rate, it is quite certain to prove a great deal more entertaining. For no one could conceive unless he were acquainted with them the joyous humours of Pimple's ride to glory upon "Tea Tray," positively the worst horse ever known. The very spirit of fun is in this film. To see Pimple start hopefully upon his awful steed, to watch him confer seriously in mid-course with the sympathetic horse as to how they are going to defeat their speedier rivals, and to see how they solve the problem by taking a mean advantage and a taxi-cab to the winning post—it is all, in popular parlance, simply a "scream." The sub-titles, too, are a great feature of the production, being really funny and not merely vulgar.

Wise exhibitors who want a "good thing" for Derby week will put all their money on Pimple. (Folly film. Phœnix Film Agency. Released May 18th. Length 660 ft.)

The First Nugget.

The American Standard Company have given us many excellent films, and almost all their work is of a distinctive, individual nature. Particularly good are their "open-air" films (if one may use such a term to distinguish them from those which are more particularly studio productions), and for the manufacture of these pictures, which are quite different from ordinary "Western" films, they seem to have found a district abounding more than usually in natural beauties of every kind.

"The First Nugget" is characteristic of the American Standard Company's "open-air" stories. It is notable for the strikingly lovely natural scenery it contains, and its plot, although perhaps rather conventional and lacking in originality, is thoroughly effective throughout. Although a method very often favoured, it is always rather a fault in the construction of a picture to refer back to incidents which should have been placed at the commencement. In such plays as the present, where the main story is framed, as it were, in a narrative, the method is more admissible, but even here we have a second example of this system of referring back which is virtually a story within a story within a story. In an ordinary play, of course, it is quite common for a character to narrate in words some incident necessary to the plot which took place before the scene opened, but in such cases the method seems perfectly natural. It is only in the picture play where actions have to take the place of words that the method seems clumsy and unnatural, and for this reason it is our opinion that the action of a picture play should always be consecutive wherever possible.

To return to "The First Nugget," the murder of the brother seems rather unnecessary to the plot except in so far as it helps to "pile on the agony." For the rest, the story is very well told, and very interesting and dramatic in itself. The acting of American Standard Films is always excellent, and this company's latest picture is no exception to this very happy rule. A phrase in one sub-title—"Discovery of a fabulous gold mine"—seems rather a bull, but to comment upon it is perhaps somewhat hypercritical. Altogether, "The First Nugget" makes a most acceptable entertainment which should give pleasure to any audience. (American Standard film. Eclair Company, Limited. Released June 22nd. Length 1,823 ft.)

THE MISER'S REVERSION.—A film quite out of the ordinary. It deals with Darwin's theory. The old miser dreams he becomes a subject for scientists to demonstrate an Elixir of Life. He greedily takes an overdose and successively changes from an old man to a young man, a baby, back through the ages, until he is an ape. His reinstatement and his adventures prior to it are most interesting. (3,023 ft. July 9th.)

A WORD ON THE PROGRAMME.

In his interesting address on the development of the cinematograph industry at the second annual meeting of the Exhibitors' Association, Mr. F. W. Ogden Smith emphasised the generally accepted opinion that the larger, more costly and luxuriously fitted theatre is in a better position to meet the severe competition existing to-day than its smaller and somewhat old-fashioned rival. It is, of course, a point which has received the attention of many interested in the industry, and though we are far from denying that there is good and sufficient reason for such an assertion, we cannot refrain from pointing out that the patronage bestowed on the modern picture theatre is not accorded solely by reason of the latter's magnificence, but, to a very large extent, by reason of the superior class of entertainment it should offer to the public.

We use the words "should offer" advisedly, because the very obvious truth is that in many of our most up-to-date picture theatres the programmes screened are by no means in keeping with the appearance and general appointments of the house. Unfortunately, some proprietors, while sparing no expense in the erection and equipment of their halls, appear to neglect the most vital point in their success—that of providing the public with the very best entertainment obtainable—with the result that, attracted at first to a gorgeous new hall, with its magnificent appearance and comfortable surroundings, the public quickly tires of all this display of luxury without its accompaniment of amusement, and patronises the smaller and perhaps less comfortable hall, where at least the "pictures" compensate for some slight lack of comfort. Picture theatres cannot live by magnificence alone.

More than ever to-day it is the programme that counts. It is not only the theatre proprietor who forgets this fact—too many film manufacturers, in their anxiety to outpace their rivals, sacrifice quality for quantity. It is manifestly impossible to maintain a high reputation when unlimited production is allowed to displace the moderate output which was in years gone by found to be sufficient—and would be now—for the needs of every exhibitor.

Not only has the manufacturer to be convinced of the necessity of limiting his output, not only has the exhibitor to realise the importance of screening the pick of the market, but the buyers have also to be persuaded that the public really desire less sensationalism and fewer crude melodramatic situations than are offered in many of the films selected for their amusement. A film buyer is born, not made. He must be fully acquainted with the industry and the public for whom he has to cater; he must be independent, his selections and his judgment must be above suspicion, and perhaps, above all, he should recommend those films, which, in his honest, impartial opinion, appeal as strongly to the intelligence of the public as to their emotions. Surely it is not impossible to find men who can do this?

TRADE TOPICS.

In view of the many great masterpieces which they have produced during recent years, it has been a matter of surprise to most people that the Vitagraph Company have been able consistently to maintain their well-known policy of placing all their films on the open market. Although their belief in this latter method of doing business is in no way shaken, however, we learn that their forthcoming production, "Agnes," is to be sold as an "exclusive," owing to the fact that its qualities as one of the biggest and most wonderful films ever created, render it quite impossible to handle in the ordinary way. For an exceptional film, an exceptional system of marketing is inevitable, and, in view of the staunchness with which the Vitagraph Company have adhered in the past to the open market, the news that "Agnes" is to be the first Vitagraph "exclusive" will at once suggest to everyone that this picture is of an absolutely unprecedented nature.

A Trade show of "Agnes" is to be given at the West-end Cinema, Coventry Street, on Wednesday, June 17th, at 11 a.m. In connection with this it is interesting to note that Mr. Smith is inviting only legitimate members of the Trade, whose object in attending the exhibition will be strictly a matter of business, and not merely idle curiosity or the desire to enjoy an entertainment free of cost. What has become known as the "Trade Show Nuisance" has frequently been the subject of forcible comment of late among those whose duty it is to attend these exhibitions, and we congratulate Mr. Smith very warmly on his decision to take firm measures to render complaints of this kind impossible at the Vitagraph Trade show. The admittance of hundreds of lay visitors, including noisy children, to what should be strictly business functions has often given cause for real grievances to legitimate buyers and selectors, who have been compelled to do their work under conditions of the greatest discomfort as a result. We trust that Mr. Smith's action will be followed by others in the future.

Further consideration was given to the question of Sunday opening at the monthly meeting of the Middlesex County Council, held on Thursday of last week, Alderman Regester presiding, and after a lengthy debate a recommendation was carried that legal proceedings be authorised against cinema proprietors who had, it is said, infringed the regulations of the licences granted last November. The discussion arose on a report by the Licensing Committee, who drew attention to the fact that a large number of proprietors were opening on Sundays contrary to the conditions imposed on the licences. It was recommended that the Committee be authorised to institute legal proceedings in cases where the provisions of the Statutes or of the regulations had been infringed. An amendment was moved by Mr. Attenborough (Staines), seconded by Mr. Ainslee (Feltham), that no such proceedings should be instituted in any district or place the District Council or Corporation of which might by resolution request the County Council not to take proceedings. The debate was opened at the previous meeting, but adjourned on the proposition of Mr. H. Neild, M.P., who pointed out that such an important matter should not be hastily considered.

At Thursday's meeting the member for Ealing initiated the discussion, which developed into a lengthy debate, eventually leading to the appeal of the Chairman, who drew attention to the constant reiteration of the same arguments. Practically, representatives of every division in the county spoke on the subject, who ranged themselves on one of two sides. The Tottenham members spoke strongly in favour of Sunday opening, others supported their views, and there was also the extreme attitude adopted by the Sabbatarians. Another section argued that matters should be left as they were, and that the supporters of Sunday opening should abide by the majority of the Council, and not attain their object by a side issue. A prominent speaker was Mr. Montagu Sharpe, the Chairman of the Quarter Sessions, who pointed out that local authorities had nothing to do with licensing matters, and to suggest that the opinion of district councils should be considered as contrary to all ordinary practice. He ventured to express the opinion that applications would be considered on the merits of the evidence produced, and local authorities, he argued, had no locus standi. Eventually the amendment was declared lost by the chairman by an overwhelming majority. A further amendment was defeated that the question should be left to the decisions of the representatives of the districts concerned. Several other amendments were sought to be discussed, but as they were more or less a varied version of that submitted by Mr. Attenborough, the Chairman ruled them out of order. There was another recommendation that the County Solicitor be instructed to institute proceedings against the licensee (or any other person liable) of at least one cinema in each petty sessional division of the county, but Mr. Beasley (the Chairman of the Licensing Committee) withdrew it.

On Saturday afternoon last a private inaugural performance was given at that magnificent new theatre, the Electric Pavilion, Marble Arch, W., the doors being opened later in the day to the public. The theatre, which contains seats for 1,500 persons, together with standing room for another 300, is beautifully decorated in bronze gold and pink, a semi-Egyptian style being followed throughout. At the back, immediately inside the lofty entrance doors, is a spacious carpeted promenade, embellished with palms, whilst adjacent thereto will be tea-rooms, now in course of construction. Two Simplex machines are installed in the operating room upstairs, at the sides of which are six private boxes. Perhaps the most notable feature of the theatre as a place of entertainment is the wonderful orchestra, containing no less than twenty instrumentalists, and the beautiful organ. We have never heard finer playing in a picture theatre than that which we enjoyed on Saturday last, in common with many well-known members of the Trade who had come to assist at the opening, and we can imagine that the Marble Arch Electric Pavilion will rapidly become famous for its music. Mr. P. Scott is the manager of the theatre, and Mr. Fradkin, the well-known violinist, the leader of the orchestra. We wish this most delightful and distinguished house of amusement all the success imaginable.

Mr. H. M. Lomas, the author of our latest publication, "Picture Play Photography," is a man with a wide experience of life in many lands. As a youngster he began chemistry under his father, who was one of the old members of the Society of Chemical Industry, and had been a pupil of Bunsen, also learning the rudiments of art and studying tone-values under J. A. Mease Lomas, R.B.A., then recently a student of Julien's, Paris. In 1888 he took up photography, and for some years had leisure time to devote to the pictorial, and also the scientific and theoretical sides of the new but rapidly advancing art-science. He designed and had made numerous cameras, and in 1894 specialised in hunting, photography, writing and illustrating various works on hunting, winning two medals offered in open competition by Photography, and being elected a member of the Royal Photographic Society.

When in 1900 cinematography began to attract notice, Mr. Lomas suggested to Mr. Charles Urban the possibility of securing genuine and not prearranged hunting films; he then made the first wild stag hunting film, and subsequently many others of a similar character, which were widely exhibited and very successful. In 1902 Mr. Lomas took up cinematograph work as a profession, meeting Mr. A. S. Newman, who was then working at the mechanical side, and studied dark-room work. In 1903 he accepted the task of illustrating the territory of British North Borneo, for the Government of that country, and secured a wonderful series of ordinary photographs, as well as cinematograph pictures, which he presented to the Cambridge Ethnological Museum and the Royal Geographical Society, subsequently being elected a Fellow of the latter body.

In 1905, Mr. Lomas managed the Urban Company's dark-rooms and works, where, in connection with Mr. Newman, the accurate perforating of film was specially considered. The allowable error they worked for was three times as fine as that allowed at Greenwich Observatory, i.e., 1-6,000th of an inch. This exacting work temporarily injured his eyes (it was before the micronometer adjustment was added to the machines), so in 1905 he resigned and went to Burma, afterwards returning to do experimental work in connection with trick photography and to make various films, including Dutch and hunting pictures.

In 1908, Mr. Lomas undertook a second expedition to British North Borneo, going on to Japan and China. Since then he has taken cinematograph films and ordinary photographs in Ceylon, North Africa, Turkey, Dalmatia, Herzegovina and Bosnia, these travels providing many adventures, some amusing, others of a decidedly exciting nature. In 1910 he fitted up his working cottage for the purpose of developing and printing his own films, and in the following year made several sporting films, and then he turned his attention specially to studio work, trying to find the reason for certain peculiar difficulties met with in that work.

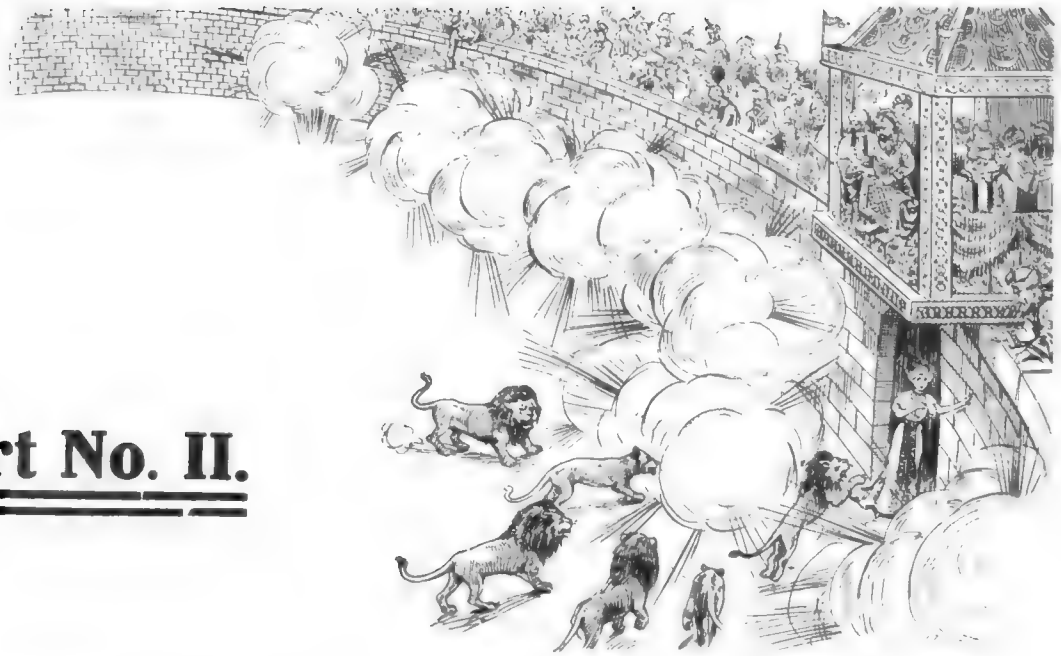
We learn from Mr. E. G. Foster, of the Dominion Exclusive Company, that he has secured two important American films, "The Mutual Girl" and "The Battle of the Sexes." "The Mutual Girl" will be issued as a serial, in fortnightly two-reel parts, which will be continued for at least a year. Many celebrities will appear in this film, including Mr. Carnegie, Commander Evans, Miss Billie Burke, Mr. John McCraw, the baseball player, and the District Attorney of New York. It also promises to supply the very latest fashions of the moment, and for this reason should make a special appeal to the ladies.

"The Battle of the Sexes" is the first film to be produced for the Mutual Film Corporation by Mr. D. W. Griffiths, who was responsible for "Judith of Bethulia," "The Battle of Elderbush Gulch," and other important films for the Biograph Company. It is a problem-play dealing with the varying moral standard for men and women, and is played by a strong company, including Miss Lilian Gish, Miss Mary Alden, Mr. Donald Crisp, and Mr. Owen Moore.

Owing to increase of business and the numerous important new "exclusives" which they will be handling in the near future, the L. and Y. Films, Limited, have decided to remove their headquarters from Liverpool to London, which city will doubtless prove a more convenient centre for their rapidly extending operations. Mr. A. T. Stainsby will remain in charge of the London office, the address of which is 30, St. Martin's Court, Charing Cross Road, W.C. In a chat which we had with Mr. Stainsby the other day we learned that he has some very wonderful pictures coming shortly. Among these will be a magnificent version of Robert Louis Stevenson's famous romance, "Treasure Island."

The patrons of the Hastings Cinema de Luxe had a pleasant surprise the other night. It was a fine house, one of the chief attractions being the first local representation of Edison's "Kinetophone." Between the second and third parts the manager, Mr. Lincoln Wright, announced the fact that their distinguished townsman, Mr. Harry Furniss, happened to be "in front," and had kindly consented to say a few words about this interesting development in this branch of cinematography. Mr. Harry Furniss stepped on to the stage and complimented the managership on its enterprise in being the first to introduce Edison's "Kinetophone" to the town. It was, he said, an educational treat, and perhaps this fact would be better appreciated if those he was addressing knew of its difficulties. His object in stepping on to the stage was not to entertain, but to briefly explain to his friends in front that hitherto the gramophoned voice and the filmed picture were separate. This wonderful effort of Mr. Edison, who, by the way, was one of the greatest and most wonderful men he had ever met, was to get them both in one, and, as they had demonstrated, in perfect synchronisation. He had just heard Mr. Edison regret, continued Mr. Furniss, that this contrivance did not exist in the days of George Washington, so that he could have had a record of his voice and gesture. We might equally regret the absence of any record of the grand old man, Gladstone, or of "silver-tongued" John Bright. He looked forward to yet showing what it could do in his own particular line, when his other work allowed him—he trusted shortly—to make his long delayed start in earnest in the cinematograph world.



Mr. Neighbour, of Renters', Limited, who has successfully handled many important all-British films, has acquired the entire rights of Messrs. Hepworth's magnificent film version of "The Cloister and the Hearth," undoubtedly the greatest of Charles Reade's novels. This film, which has already been reviewed in our columns, is now being shown at the offices of Renters, Limited, 18 and 20, Wardour Street. W.

We have much pleasure in announcing that, provided their professional engagements permit them to do so, Miss Marie Hall, Mr. Mark Hambourg and Mr. W. H. Squire have kindly consented to act on the Judging Committee at the "Final" of the Pianists' Contest which THE BIOSCOPE is organising in connection with the forthcoming International Kinematograph Exhibition at Olympia. Further details will be announced in due course. Meanwhile, any suggestions, etc., with regard to this contest should be addressed to us.

Calling the other day to see Mr. F. Waters, of the Hepworth Manufacturing Company, we had the pleasure of inspecting some very interesting advance photographs of this firm's forthcoming version of Dickens' "Chimes," which has been produced for them by Mr. Bentley, whose other wonderful Dickensian films have proved so enormously successful. The picture will be 2,300 ft. in length, and will be sold as an "exclusive." Mr. Waters also informed us that his firm have completed a version of "The Dead Heart," the well-known play produced at the Lyceum Theatre by the late Sir Henry Irving.

On Saturday last that very popular member of the staff of the Williamson Kinematograph Company, Limited, Mr. Christopher Wishart, who is a step-son of Major-General Corrie, was married to Miss Margaret Brodie-Mills, daughter of Colonel Brodie-Mills. Mr. Wishart is a keen sportsman in his leisure hours, and is the secretary of the Williamson Football Club. Amongst the guests present at the merry little luncheon which followed the ceremony on Saturday were Miss Wishart, Miss Paterson, Mr. and Mrs. Cleland-Hollamby and family, Mr. T. H. Williamson, Mr. V. Walker-Smith, Mr. Guy Allen and Mr. J. Walker-Hicks, of the Williamson Kinematograph Company, Limited.

We tender to Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Wishart our very warm wishes for their future happiness.

The General Film Agency, Limited, inform us that the release date of "The White Spectre" has been altered from May 28th to June 25th.

Having withstood the test of ephemerality, educationalists are now beginning to extol the many virtues of the cinema, and hold out sanguine hopes that its utility will before long become part of the daily routine in public elementary schools. The other day, a member of a northern Education Committee, expressed himself very enthusiastically as to possible developments. "The time is coming," he said, "when every school will have an efficient cinema equipment, including a set of progressive films, dealing with various subjects. There can be no doubt that by the introduction of cinema pictures into the life of a school, children will be able to grasp more readily than hitherto, the difficult parts of a subject. Another thing is children like the cinema."

Dr. George Cunningham, whose lecture to his first series of dental films was so interesting a feature of the Medical Matinée at the West-end Cinema last year has now completed a new one-reel film, entitled "The New Dentistry; or Caries Conquered," composed and produced by him. This picture, which explains itself by means of clearly worded sub-titles, thus dispensing with the need for a lecturer, deals with the paramount importance for health of sound natural teeth, and includes pictures taken in countries as far apart as England, France, Sweden and Holland. It is Dr. Cunningham's intention to place this film upon the ordinary market.

The Optical and Photo Supplies Company, the well-known firm of Perth, Western Australia, have started in the film hiring business, and are open to buy films, particularly long feature subjects of exceptional merit. They also desire to have their name placed on the mailing lists of all firms interested in machines, accessories, etc. Their London office is at Messrs. G. Shrimpton and Sons, Leadenhall House, 101, Leadenhall Street, E.C., to whom all communications should be addressed.

After studying the motion picture field for six months, Mr. David Belasco has conferred upon the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, of New York, the entire cinematograph rights of all his productions. The company, whose offices are at the Longacre Theatre, New York, will immediately begin the construction of a large studio at Sag Harbour, L.I. In all of the Belasco plays on the screen the parts will be played by the actors associated with the original production, and Mr. Belasco will actively participate in all productions.

Mr. A. C. Gore, who, amongst other things, controls the publicity and press work of the Tyler Film Company, Limited, the Cosmopolitan Film Company, and the James Starr Exclusive Film Company, has moved into new offices at 12, Archer Street, Shaftesbury Avenue, W., where he is developing some new business.

On Wednesday of last week a Trade show was given at the Shaftesbury Pavilion of the Trans-Atlantic Film Company's immense and wonderfully advertised serial picture, "Lucille Love," or rather, of as large a portion of this colossal production as time permitted. Among the members of what was an unusually distinguished audience were the editors of the Daily Mail and the Weekly Dispatch. Lord Northcliffe was unable to be present on Wednesday, but we understand that as soon as he returns to town he will personally receive "Miss Love" at Carmelite House, whither she is to pay a special visit. The earlier portion of "Lucille Love" has already been reviewed in this paper, and a visit to the Trade show on Wednesday revealed the fact that the interest of the story is increased rather than diminished in succeeding sections. One of the most notable features of the picture is the very clever arrangement of the South Sea Island scenes, in which a very large number of "supers" are employed. The unprecedented manner in which the film is being advertised is, of course, known to every reader of THE BIOSCOPE, and we learn that in addition to the novel "publicity ideas" already in circulation, others equally as striking are in course of preparation.

We learn that Mr. C. T. Bowden has joined the Yorkshire Sales Agency as provincial representative.

"FLYING A."—YOU WANT THE BEST FILMS—WE HAVE THEM—"BEAUTY."

PICTURE THEATRE FINANCE.

By FRANK W. OGDEN SMITH.

In an article under this heading published in THE BIOSCOPE, March 27, 1913, I gave the results of considerable research into the Board of Trade returns, and the figures for the period 1908 to 1912 were: Picture theatre companies 171, with a gross capital of £7,831,122; film and apparatus companies 133, with a gross capital of £1,940,825; as the registered amounts of public companies, and after consulting several leading members in the Trade, counting up the private firms, and estimating as near as possible their capital, I considered an accurate figure for the United Kingdom would be £12,871,947 as capital sum embarked in the business at that time.

Now we have the figures for the period April 1, 1913, to April 1, 1914, during which twelve months there were registered 453 picture theatre companies with a gross capital of £3,298,285; film and apparatus companies 118, with a gross capital of £630,995. Taking the sums invested privately on the same basis as last year—viz., one-third of the registered capital, say, additional film and apparatus £200,000—therefore we reach for this year:—

Picture Theatre Companies	£4,298,285
Film and Apparatus	830,995
	5,129,270
Add years 1908-12	12,871,947

It was anticipated that the year 1910 would retain the record, for picture theatre capital registered £3,055,951, but 1913 exceeds even that period by no less than £262,334. As regards the number of companies registered—453 this is nine less than in 1912, and the capital gives an average of over £7,000 per company, as against £4,000 last year. This increase per company will no doubt be considerably higher next year, as the tendency to erect buildings of larger dimensions and seating capacity is manifestly a sound policy.

Dealing with the film and apparatus side of the business, we find the number of companies registered to be 118, with a gross capital of £630,995, as against fifty-nine companies, with a gross capital of £771,475 for 1912, a decrease of over £140,000 for 1913, yet double the number of registrations. This may be explained to some extent by the number of film agencies developed during the past year, particularly those devoted to "exclusive pictures," a side of the business that appears to be highly remunerative. The amount of capital registered per company is well over £5,000, as against an average of £15,000 per company in 1912. This side of the business has been most consistent year by year, and from a strictly commercial point of view does not appear likely to suffer from over-capitalisation and reckless competition.

From this gross capital of £18,000,000 we must deduct the uncalled capital of the various companies, etc. It is manifestly impossible to give figures of the strictest accuracy, and beyond striking a fair average we can do nothing more than assume such sum to be deducted as over £1,000,000, thus leaving £17,000,000 as the actual money invested in this industry. Critics will no doubt come forward and doubt the accuracy of such figures, but they must admit to the capital sum registered.

As regards the stream of charges and debentures given on the various concerns almost concurrent with the capital issues, there is no abatement; in fact, the reverse. For many years the attention of the Board of Trade has been called to the folly of allowing company directors the power to create these charges without first obtaining the sanction of their shareholders. It may be admitted that the known existence of debentures acts as a safety valve when creditors are too pressing with their claims, but the principle is not a sound one when associated with a business of this nature, although in cases the creation of such charges may be the alternative to bankruptcy.

Having thus shown as near as possible the amount invested, it follows that a few words on the question of dividends must of necessity be added, but here we come up against forces that are overwhelmingly against forming even an estimate as to the capital returned to the public under the heading of dividends. The majority of this sum is held privately, and whilst it is a simple matter to name the amounts declared by the public companies, we cannot ascertain what is being paid by the private company or individuals. The reasons are obvious. Given a paying concern, the shareholders do not wish the public to know, and if unprofitable it is wisdom not to allow the creditors to know too much. Now, notwithstanding this reticence in disclosing profits, it must be evident to every thinking man that there is money being made, and in no small sums. We know in every business that the pioneers suffer, but the public reap the benefit by securing efficiency. This is being proved daily in the Trade, for the small show becomes more difficult to maintain every year, and undoubtedly will in time be forced to give way to the modern halls of large capacity. When this business started its wonderful career 6d. was considered the top price for a seat, and one hour an ample programme, but to-day we know that conditions are altered, and we ask ourselves—is it for the better?

Now we come to the number of theatres open in the United Kingdom, and as this is nearing 7,000, against a capital of £13,000,000, the average cost per theatre is £1,855. Assuming these to pay in rates and taxes an average on rental value £200, net £80 per annum, the various local rates thus secure £560,000, and for electric lighting an average of £7 per week, £2,548,000 per annum.

In wages the sum averaged per hall is not less than £12 per week, or a gross total of £4,368,000.

The average amount paid for film hire is not less than £12 per week, so again we have £4,368,000.

These figures do not take into consideration the film and apparatus companies' expenditure in any way. We can assume that the English railway companies carry no less than 16,000 to 20,000 boxes of films every week at an average charge of 1s., thus giving them some £45,000 per annum, which sum their various managers might well keep in mind when parcels have gone astray and the carrying company refuses to accept responsibility for late delivery—an incident not unknown to managers.

And what of the film-producing side of the business?—mostly American and mainly cowboy stories says the daily Press; but this in actual practice will not hold good, for our English companies are slowly coming along, and in due course we shall not be absolutely bound down to the foreign market. During the past few years the printer has found this business provide him with considerable work, for in posters alone many theatres spend £2 per week, which, together with the cost of printed matter descriptive of films, cannot be less than £60,000 per annum for the printers. How much of this sum is represented by foreign labour and materials remains to be proved; but in these days of free trade it is usual to deal with the matter as being good for business irrespective of nationality.

To-day the Trade is finding employment on the theatre side alone for no less than 75,000 people, and if we estimate those employed by the film and apparatus companies, we have quite a total of 130,000. This is irrespective of those employed in painting and decorating existing halls, or those erecting and fitting up new theatres.

The whole of this colossal business has been built up within the past seven years. If these figures were placed before presiding magistrates and those ever-increasing watch committees who have the power to place such harassing restrictions upon the licences granted to theatre proprietors, no doubt as sensible business men they would be more considerate in their demands, for it is a fact beyond dispute that the progress of the small hall proprietor has been most effectively killed to the advantage of the wealthy company or rich private owner. Reforms were undoubtedly needed, but in almost every case where the discretionary powers were given to local bodies, the men into whose hands these powers fell have, owing to want of knowledge, insisted upon forcing picture theatre proprietors to obey stringent laws laid down without a proper study of the subject, in many cases leading to the closing of the hall and the ruin of the proprietor. Further, such powers have been eagerly embraced by the faddists and the local busybodies who desire to point out the road to everyone irrespective of the damage done.

The future of the business is a problem to some extent, but of this point we can be assured—that picture theatres have not only come to stay, but to fill a want that has been existing for all time. We know in many towns it is considered necessary to add variety turns in order to attract the crowd; but that is more a question of meeting severe opposition than a proof that pictures alone are insufficient. There have been so many doubts expressed by various people that the business is only a passing craze that it is but fair that we should point out facts occasionally to prove our argument; there are halls open to-day that have been running without a break daily from 2 p.m. till 10.30 since 1906—over eight years—and in many cases business to-day is better than ever. Conditions will improve both as regards the class of film presented and the comfort of the theatre; but the prosperity of the business will depend upon giving the public an entertainment that will interest and amuse them at a sum they can afford. No doubt there will always be a willing crowd to see the long masterpiece at enhanced prices; but the business that will pay best will be the mixed programme, because of the consistency of the returns. It is the "programme" that will count. Gambling in long exclusive masterpieces may suit some of us, but it is as dangerous as engaging high-priced turns for local music-halls. The danger of the future is in large combinations or trusts, either in films or halls, and that is one of the great reasons for supporting the Exhibitors' Association to prevent any combine that may work to the detriment of the exhibitor, and, further, to secure legislation to protect your Trade interests from undue oppression.

IN THE METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

(NOTES ON THE LONDON HALLS.)

An innovation, and a successful one withal, was witnessed on Whit Monday and subsequent evenings at the Brixton Palladium Playhouse, when Miss Lily Hanbury recited "The Newsboy's Debt" while the film was screened. From Monday until Wednesday there was a splendid exclusive in "The Curse of War."—"For Another's Crime" and "An American Citizen" are the main features in a first-class bill of fare at the popular Brixton Pavilion.

Lambeth's proposed recruiting week, with the aid of the exhibition of the British Army film at the Palladium, Brixton, has been postponed by Mr. C. S. Walker, the manager of the house, until September next. The time available for organisation on the scale that such an event deserves was too limited to permit of it taking place during the present month. As far as the Territorial Force is concerned, June is too late in the year to allow of men joining it at that time putting in the number of drills necessary to qualify for attendance at the annual camps. Recruits who are secured in September will have the best portion of a year before them for that purpose.

The Theatre de Luxe, Balham, and the Broadway Palace, Tooting, both billed "'Neath the Lion's Paw."

While many of the theatres devoted to the "spoken play" are about to close for the summer vacation, the light evenings make no apparent difference to the attendance at motion picture performances. Although the weather last Monday was most favourable for outdoor enjoyment, one had the suspicion that there were fewer people than usual on the glorious commons and parks of south-west London. This impression gained some support if one turned to the nearest picture palace, for all the afternoon it was crowded, no matter what district one visited. The way that the people sat out the programmes was evidence of the hold that the cinema has obtained. Thus, at the Electric Pavilion, Tooting, nearly three hours were occupied by a single show of six items of the programme. Attention was chiefly devoted to the drama, "The Rogues of Paris." Everybody also was interested in the Kinemacolor film of the Niagara Falls. Other capital screenings were "The Love of Towika," "Misplaced Foot," "Scotland for Ever," and "The Doctor's Deceit." Pride of place during the rest of the week is held by "The Black Spot."

Popular holiday fare at the Queen's Hall, Newington Butts, was "Love or a Throne," and it is succeeded by "Officer John Donovan" until Saturday evening. Like most of the South London houses on the road to Epsom, this theatre gave a film of the Derby last Wednesday evening. In the street outside one could see until 9 p.m. the medley of vehicles returning from the races, and a few steps into a picture house gave the visitor a representation of the great race.

The Theatre de Luxe, Hammersmith, claims to be the oldest established picture house in its neighbourhood and one of the oldest in London, having been open for something like ten years. There is accommodation for nearly 400. Last week patrons enjoyed the sight of "The Fatal Enchantress" and "The Mystery of the Three Faces."

The principal attraction at the Broadway Cinema, Hammersmith, last week was "The Road to Ruin," featuring George Gray, of "fighting parson" fame. Other star films were "The Enchantress" and "Caprice."

On visiting the King's Hall, Shepherd's Bush, last week, I found that Mr. H. Leonard, resident manager for the United Electric Theatres, Limited, was showing as star films "The House of Fear" and "The Midnight Wedding."

At the Cinematograph Theatre, Shepherd's Bush, last week, Mr. H. Iverson was attracting patrons with "Auld Lang Syne" and "Conscience," followed by "Night Shadows of New York" and "On Secret Service."

Among other attractions arranged for this week at the Prince of Wales' Playhouse, Harrow Road, was a special film of the National Union of Railwaymen's Annual Sports. Last week "The Lights o' London" was drawing crowds.

A special draw for this week to the King's Palace, Kensal Rise, was the announcement that Harry Buss, of the Hepworth stock company, would appear personally in a new scena, assisted by Miss Elsa Brettingham, also of Hepworth's. The scena was entitled "On and Off the Film," and was given by permission of the Hepworth Company.

At the Kensal Rise Picture Palace last week Mr. W. H. Parker attracted patronage by showing films of the Derby besides other star films such as "The Dare-devil Detective" and "Broncho Billy."

Calling at the Frognal Bijou, where Mr. J. Milne has taken over the reins, I found him delighting his comfortably crowded house with "The Iron Man," "Indian Blood," and a couple of Keystones.—The residents of the garden suburb of Golder's Green are well catered for at the Golder's Green Picture Theatre, which is under the direction of Mr. Weller.

The Bohemia Cinema and Winter Gardens is under the management of Mr. R. H. Vallis, late manager of the Majestic, Tottenham Court Road. Opening on May 21st, this hall has speedily "made good." Accommodation is provided in the tea gardens of over two and a half acres, while in the winter garden is the Van Bruen ladies' orchestra, under the direction of Miss Muriel Jack, which performs afternoon and evening.

The Hampstead Electric Theatre, under the proprietorship of Mr. T. Hatley, featured "Woman is Like a Shadow." Comedy was well represented by "High Game," while "The Preparation of Milk" was also on the screen.

The management of the Hampstead Picture Playhouse continue to attract the residents of this suburb into their comfortable hall. "Antony and Cleopatra," I heard, resulted in record business here, where the performance is enhanced by "effects" and a capable orchestra.

Calling in at Mr. P. M. Beck's Ideal Cinema, Holloway, where Mr. Wyatt is in charge, assisted by Mr. Wagstaff, I found "The Woman Who Dared" and "Harvest of Sin" being well received by a large audience.—Mr. Phren, at the Electric Pavilion, Holloway, featured "The Red Club." One of the principal features of the entertainment is the organ recitals, which are justly very popular. "Pendulum of Justice" was also included in the programme.

At the Electric Palace, Highgate Hill, "Love, the Victor" and "When the Light Came Back" represented the dramatic side of the programme, while "Love and Dynamite" was to the front in comedy. — Biograph's Parkhurst Electric Theatre continues to do good business.

Mr. Lewis, manager of the Holloway Grand Pictures, delighted his numerous patrons with "Heroes of the Mine" and "The Great Python Robbery."—The Highbury Imperial is holding its own, and putting on good programmes.

FILM PRODUCTION IN INDIA.

Since one of the greatest and most valuable possibilities of the cinematograph is the circulation throughout the world of plays dealing with national life and characteristics, acted by native players amidst local scenes, it is with no small interest that one awaits the appearance in this country of Mr. D. G. Phâlke's first Indian films, some details of which were given in last week's BIOSCOPE. In spite of its wonderfully beautiful and distinctive qualities. Indian mythology is practically unknown in this country, with the exception of a few stories which have reached us through rather inadequate translations, and one feels, therefore, that Mr. Phâlke is directing his energies in the best and most profitable direction in specialising upon the presentation by film of Indian mythological dramas. In a film version of a story, the whole beauty of the original may be retained so far as its action and characterisation are concerned, whilst it is possible to realise local colour and scenic detail in a manner which would be quite out of the question in any purely literary form, or even in the most lavish stage production. One feels, in short, that the cinematograph is the ideal medium for the presentation of all such stories, in which, if they are to be fully understood and sympathised with by foreigners, vivid realism of atmosphere and setting are essential considerations.

Mr. Phâlke's first film, "Harishchandra," was received with the greatest enthusiasm in India, the leading Bombay newspapers having reviewed it very favourably and at considerable length.

In Liverpool and District.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Since my last visit to the Palladium, West Derby Road, a change in management has occurred. Mr. Leonard Harcourt left about two months ago, and Mr. S. A. Eaton, from the Seaforth Palladium, is now in charge. As at many other picture houses at the present time of year, redecoration is the order of the day, and a colour scheme of Wedgewood blue has been decided upon. Mr. Eaton is extremely proud of the handsome place under his control and is full of optimistic enthusiasm with regard to the future. Last week he did exceptionally well with "Antony and Cleopatra," which ran for the six days. This week an exclusive, "The Money God," and "The Harp of Tara" are the chief items shown, whilst among the bookings to follow shortly is "Joan of Arc." The orchestra, which is under the direction of Mr. Ernest Rumbold, maintains its reputation for playing good and appropriate music.

The Picture House, Belmont Road, has several distinctive features, and has been constructed upon quite a novel plan. The entrance hall and lounge are exceptionally fine, whilst in the building itself in place of a balcony the back is raised to a corresponding height. Mr. William A. Leak, the manager, well known in theatrical circles, is exceedingly popular and indefatigable in his efforts to secure the comfort and convenience of his patrons. As an instance of this, in order to determine whether a continuous show or two houses a night was the more popular form of entertainment, he sent out 10,000 circulars with a postcard enclosed requesting residents in the vicinity to vote upon the subject. The response was remarkable, no less than 4,785 replies being received, representing a majority of 1,823 in favour of two houses a night. Splendid business was done last week with "Traitors to the King," and "A Lady of Quality" this week promises to be equally successful. "Hearts Adrift" is to be shown shortly.

The Picturedrome, Kensington, is being extensively beautified, and has been newly painted in dazzling white. Mr. Rex Dooley continues to maintain the entertainment at the high level of former excellence, and reports business as quite satisfactory. Last week the principal items shown were "Romance of the North-west" and "Children of Captain Grant." This week special crowds are anticipated to see "A Winter's Tale."

The King's Hall, Oakfield Road, is a substantial building with a seating capacity of 1,200, and under the charge of Mr. C. M. Rowley. Like the majority of the best picture houses in Liverpool, a speciality is made of good music. This hall possesses a particularly fine orchestra of six performers, constituting a high-class musical entertainment in addition to the pictures. Very good houses were secured last week, when "The Midnight Wedding" was shown, and the large holiday crowds were entertained with "The Golden Beetle" and "The False Bride." Among the pictures recently shown, "Orders Under Seal" was one which scored a more than ordinary success.

The Electric Palace, London Road, has a continuous performance from 2 o'clock until 10.30. Last week "Lincoln, the Lover," "Love and Dynamite," "The Black Spot," and "The Derby" were the principal films to be seen. This week "The House of Temperley," a favourite wherever shown, is bound to create exceptional business. In addition there is "The Story of the Willow Pattern" and an exclusive, entitled "The Pitfall." Among the forthcoming pictures to be shown are "Protea II." and "White Lilies of Repentance."

The Premier, Smithdown Road, announced special Whitsuntide attractions starting on Monday with "The Antique Brooch," "Railway Jack's Redemption," and "Fanny's Conspiracy." These will be followed to-day (Thursday) for the remainder of the week with "The Iron Man," "On the Great Steel Beam," "Cohen Saves the Flag," and several others. Mr. R. Andre Byland is expecting great business during the present week, and his expectations are usually realised.

The Majestic is on the point of opening, whilst among the many new houses in course of erection, work has been started on the Grand Savoy Cinema in West Derby Road.

The Queen's, Poulton Road, Seacombe, has for the star picture this week "Heir of the Lagarderes," followed later by "Eleventh Hour" and "Jane Eyre."—The Lyceum at Egremont is running "Absinthe" and "Moths," and the Royal, Egremont, "A Faithful Likeness" and "First Law of Nature."—The Old Court House at Seacombe during the latter half of this week is showing "The Girl and the Tiger."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

OPENING AT LIVERPOOL.

The Walturdaw Company, Limited, announce that their new Liverpool branch, under the management of Mr. S. A. Jones, late of Cardiff, is now open at 116, Dale Street.

NEW HALLS.

It is proposed to erect new picture theatres at Cockermouth (Cockermouth Grand Theatre and Cinema Company, Limited); Clayton-le-Moors (Mr. J. Yates, Oswaldtwistle); and Sowerby Bridge.

UNDER M.P. SALES' BANNER.

The M.P. Sales Agency, Limited, 86-88, Wardour Street, W., inform us that all films produced by Mr. F. Burlingham will in future appear under his own trade-marks—"Burlingham Special" and "Wanderer Films."The film will be handled by the M.P. Sales Agency.

A SOUTH WALES SNIPPET.

The Workmen's Hall, Ferndale, is maintaining its reputation for high-class films. The management is to be congratulated upon securing "The Midnight Wedding," which proved a great draw for three nights. For the latter part of the week "The Murdoch Trial" was screened to most appreciative audiences.

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN RIGHTS.

We are informed by the B. and C. Kine Company, Limited, that the United Kingdom rights of their latest production, "Black-ey'd Susan," have been secured by the Kinematograph Trading Company, Limited, the American and Canadian rights having been acquired by Garner's Features, 99, Charing Cross Road, W.C.

SWEET CHARITY'S SAKE.

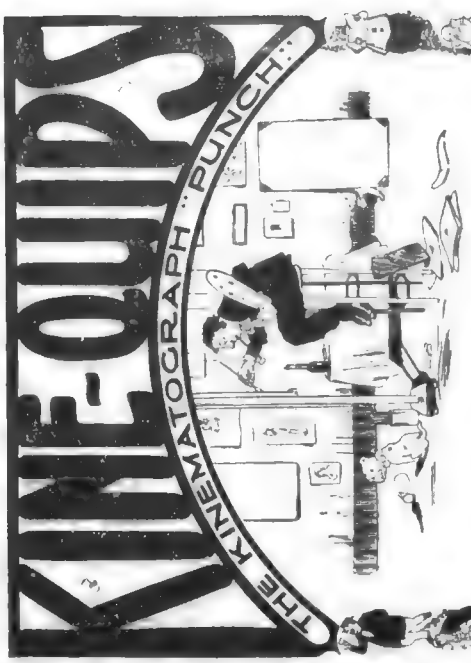
Councillor George Prince obtained the exclusive rights for filming the Bootle May Day Demonstration, which is held every year in aid of the charities. At North Park, where the carnival took place, Mr. Prince provided high-class cinematograph entertainments. The management of the Bootle Picture House have shown their sympathy with the objects of the carnival by offering to give a benefit.

CHILDREN AND THE CINEMA.

At the annual meeting of the Victoria League, held at the Central Hall, Westminster, S.W., under the presidency of the Countess of Jersey, Mr. Albert Smith (chairman of the Education Committee of the London Teachers' Association) introduced a discussion on the use of the cinematograph in connection with the work of the League. Mr. Smith said that the reading habit was being destroyed, for, as a boy said, "It was much more interesting to see it on the pictures, which left out all the uninteresting parts." He asked the League to help in "raising the standard of pictures," and improve the hygienic conditions under which they were shown.

CINEMAS IN SINGAPORE.

A correspondent informs us that Singapore rejoices in five picture palaces, and a new theatre has just been opened. Mr. Tan Cheng Kee, who owns several picture shows, will shortly be the owner of another, the new Alhambra. This new building will be capable of holding 4,000 people. It is an interesting feature of Singapore cinemas, continues our correspondent, that the poorer natives view the pictures from behind the screen, these parts being cheaper. Of course, the titles appear backwards, but this does not worry the natives, who derive their enjoyment from the setting of the pictre, plot being to them of secondary importance.



CHANGE AT RAMSGATE.

Shanly's Theatre, in George Street, Ramsgate, has changed hands, being taken over by Mr. A. Waldock. Closed for a week and in the hands of painters and decorators, it has been given an attractive appearance. Several alterations and improvements have also been effected which should add to the comfort of patrons. Renamed the Star Cinema, it opened its doors last Saturday with a specially selected programme. A Kamm 1914 model has been installed and a clear, steady picture is projected. "Mystery of the Stolen Documents" and "Stolen Tapestries" were the principal dramas. Mr. Waldock has secured many big subjects for the future, and under his guidance a busy season should be expected.

DERBY JOTTINGS.

Mr. F. Walker, manager of the Alexandra Theatre, is ever ready to help a deserving case, and on Wednesday afternoon last he gave a special matiné performance, the whole of the proceeds being handed over to the funds of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution. "Lasca" was a much-appreciated item at the Alexandra, and a splendid variety was added by "The Cry of the Blood" and "He Would a Hunting Go." "'Neath the Lion's Paw" and "The Armless Man" are the latest successes.—Mr. J. H. Pearman followed the great draw of "The Road to Ruin" with "The Iron Fist," and the popular Cosy received its usual generous support.—Programmes of a very high order have been conspicuous at the Victoria Theatre of late, including "The Heart of Kathleen," "On Secret Service," "The Curse of War" and "A Footballer's Honour," and the humorous element has been supplied by Love and Dynamite" and "A Misplaced Foot," etc. Mr. F. T. Studd runs excellent variety turns in addition, and the musical items are first-class.—Despite the warm weather, large crowds attend nightly at the Normanton Picturedrome. Here are a few of the latest successes: "The Grip of Circumstances," "The Measure of a Man," "Fitzhugh's Ride," "The Doctor's Deceit," "The Black Spot," 'He Would a-Hunting Go," and many other comedies.—The latest features at the Babington Lane Picture House were "The Narcotic Spectre," "True Irish Hearts," "The Bride of Mystery" and "Love and Dynamite."—Special holiday programmes are appearing at all the local picture houses this week. "The Lights o' London" is screened at the Alexandra and "The Master Criminal" at the Cosy.

A MEXBORO' CHANGE.

The sole proprietorship of the Cosy Cinema, Mexboro', Yorkshire, has been taken over by Mr. E. Gelder. The hall was previously controlled by Mr. Gelder and Mr. H. Mills in partnership. It is to be continued on first-class lines and attractive selections of pictures will be presented.

EXAMPLES FOR CINEMA CRITICS.

A special Sunday night concert at the Carlton, Goole, on behalf of the local St. Bartholomew's Hospital realised over £3. A number of talented artistes rendered the music and the programme included selected pictures.—At the Picture Palace, Mirfield, near Dewsbury, a special performance was given for the benefit of a local youth who had met with an accident. The local "Buffaloes" were present, and a selection was rendered by the band from the Calder Farm School.

MORE MILITARISM AT OTLEY.

Following the visits of the local artillery and of the Northumberland Hussars to the Picture House, Otley, to see the British Army film (reported in THE BIOSCOPE last week), the proprietors of the King's Hall, in the second week of the Hussars' camp, extended their own interest in the stay of these troops in the Wharfedale market town. Special cinematograph pictures were taken of the camp in Farnley Park; the manœuvres of these mounted troops and the Church parade on Sunday was also taken, and the series of films was screened at the King's Hall to crowded audiences of Hussars and the public.

THANET TOPLINES.

Although the weather is cold visitors are numerous and business is remarkably good. Only three theatres were open at Ramsgate last week, and with the Yeomany encampment there all were kept very busy. Mr. W. J. Attack had a special picture week with variety at the Royal Palace Theatre, "The Vanishing Cracksman" and "Her Hand" being especially well received. "He Would a-Hunting Go" and "Fatty's Flirtations" amongst the lighter element were all that could be desired.—Mr. Reg. V. Crow knows how to cater for the numerous patrons of the King's, and with his usual foresight screened "The Three Musketeers," which filled the bill for the week. Excellent selections were rendered by an augmented orchestra under the direction of Mr. Will D. Coleman. —Mr. Bert Parker, who controls the Queen's, has given further indication of his enterprise by installing two of Ernemann's "Jubilee" projectors. "'Neath the Lion's Paw" and "The Convent Gate" stood out amongst a long list of features.—The special features at the Cinema, Broadstairs, were "Life of Georges Carpentier," "The Blue Rose" and "The Cricket on the Hearth."—The attractions at Margate are many, but pictures take their full share of support.—"In the Shadow of the Throne" and "On Secret Service" drew large numbers to the Parade Cinema, "Broncho Billy, Guardian" also making a strong appeal. "The Perplexed Bridegroom" was a pleasing comedy, and hearty laughter greeted "A Strong Revenge."—Mr. C. W. Ellis had an exceptionally strong programme at the Clifton Cinema, and satisfaction was expressed on all sides. The "Cleek" series have caught on, "The Vanishing Cracksman" causing considerable interest. "Cutey's Vacation" was the chief mirth-provider, while "Crime in the Tunnel" and "Under the Mask" topped the bill.—"The Staircase of Death" was a big attraction at the Lounge, Cliftonville, full approval being also accorded Diana's Dress Reform" and "Fatty's Flirtation."—The Lourdes film and educational subjects were an innovation at the Town Hall, Westgate, which gave pleasure to appreciative audiences.

ANOTHER ALBION EXCLUSIVE.

Mr. W. E. Pride informs us that he has added a big feature to the Albion exclusive list in the Domino production of "For the Wearing of the Green."

THE ELECTRIC, WALTHAM CROSS.

One of the most successful theatres in Herts. is seen in the Electric Palace at Waltham Cross, where Mr. Robert C. Clayton has achieved a big reputation for his luxurious theatre by the provision of some remarkable attractions. The popular lessee and manager has recently shown, among many other excellent pictures, since the opening in October last, "Quo Vadis?", "Les Misérables," and "Last Days of Pompeii," "The Miracle" and "By the Cross." He was one of the first to feature the works of the late Sir Hubert von Herkomer in film production, and has on several occasions given goodly aid to local charities. The Palace is one of the finest theatres in the district and good business is the rule at this luxurious house.

ESSAYS ON FEATURE.

A very pleasing side of the arrangements made in connection with the recent screening of "Sixty Years a Queen" at the Picture Playhouse, Beverley, was an invitation to children to take part in an essay-writing competition. Nearly 300 children sent in essays on the film, and prizes were distributed at the Playhouse last week by the Mayor of Beverley (Mr. M. W. Westerby), who complimented the managers of the schools for having allowed the children to witness the film. Nothing had pleased him better than to read the winning essay, and he had been surprised with the writing and composition generally. Mr. Symmons, on behalf of himself and Mr. Holderness, as proprietors of the Playhouse, moved the vote of thanks which was accorded the Mayor.

BRADFORD MANAGER'S DEPARTURE.

Mr. H. Leacey who has won "golden regards" during his long service as manager of the de Luxe, Bradford, has been appointed to the management of the Crescent Cinema, Hulme, Manchester. Recently Mr. Leacey was the recipient of a presentation and an illuminated address by the proprietors, who were represented by Mr. W. Firth. Mr. Firth spoke highly of Mr. Leacey's work and of the high class of patrons whom he had gathered round him. Mrs. Leacey was presented with a good watch bracelet, Mr. and Mrs. Leacey with a silver fruit dish, and their child with a silver serviette ring. Mr. Gillen, of Hibbert's Pictures, Limited, also paid tribute to the personality of Mr. Leacey. Among the signatories to the address was Chief Officer Scott, of the City Fire Brigade.

NORTH DEVON NOTES.

Picture houses in North Devon have been putting on some excellent programmes during the past fortnight, and in every case results have been most gratifying. At the Hippodrome, Barnstaple, the special "star" picture was "Parsifal," and proved an immense draw, the theatre being crowded at every performance.—In Ilfracombe, the houses have been doing good business.—At the Palace the star pictures were "Susanne Comes to Stay" and "The Black Gang," while the Ilfracombe Picture Hall featured "The Wreck" and "The Winner."—At the Gaiety, the star film was "Saved by a Horse."—At the Bijou Palace, Bideford, there was an exceptionally good programme with "The Foreman's Treachery" as the feature, and at the Electric Palace, Bideford, the big picture was "Lord of the Jungle," which proved a great draw during the week.

IN ANOTHER SPHERE.

Mr. V. Taylor, who was associated with the advertising department of Messrs. J. F. Brockliss, Limited, has taken over the duties of publicity manager to Messrs. R. Prieur and Co., Limited.

PICTORIAL PERSHORE.

The Electric had a visit during the past week of Miss Chrissie Capell, the "River Girl." She was a great draw and had a splendid reception. Mr. Spiers screened some fine films, the features being "An Actress's Romance," and for the latter portion of the week the feature was "Little Dorrit." Mr. Spiers put on a fine holiday programme, which met with the reward it deserved.

PICTURES AT MORECAMBE.

The Morecambe "season" opened with a flourish at Whit-week end. All the houses of entertainment presented tip-top programmes, and those which have been closed during the winter period reopened their doors to the crowds who reached the popular Lancashire and Yorkshire holiday resort, despite unpleasant weather prospects. At the Alhambra, "The Golden Beetle" proved to be an enormous catch, and similar success was gained with "Lord of the Jungle."—At the Winter Gardens, Mr. A. H. Read screened "Eileen of Erin" to big houses, and another attractive film was "In the Dredger's Claw."—At the Tower pictures were intermingled with vaudeville and carnival dancing in the big theatre and grounds which Mr. H. V. Addenbrooke has under his care.—Mr. Ernest Price has been running variety and revue at the Royalty Theatre.—The White Hall Picture House at the West End was opened finally for the season by Mr. Howson, who featured "On Secret Service" and "The Opium Smoker," though the great attraction for Whitsuntide week-end was "Old St. Paul's."—The Albert Hall was reopened by Mr. Harry Hargreaves, with an uncommonly big bill of fare in pictures. A star subject was "The Lost Treasure," and an interesting film was "Hare Shooting in the Baltic." Pictures figured on the fare provided at the West End Pier Pavilion, in addition to concert parties and the Red Viennese Orchestra.

SCARBOROUGH SHOWS.

With a very large number of visitors in the town for Whitsuntide, the cinemas have again had a good holiday week-end, with very little to complain about, despite the fact that several of the summer entertainments have now commenced their season.—Mr. Parnell, managing the Grand for Mr. H. A. Whitaker, has had "Traitors to the King" for the first part of the Whitsun week-end, and on Saturday, there were large crowds to see it. Another which scored a success, and which was shown in the same programme, was "Lieutenant Rose and the Sealed Orders," whilst "The Derby," the usual daily events, and "Polidor's Moustache" made up the remainder of the fare.—At the time of writing Mr. G. Gibson is doing big business at the Picturedrome, Newborough, with "The Mystery of the Castle" and "Thy Will Be Done" as the two principal items, with "Tweedledum as Jockey," "Light on Troubled Waters" and "Naples" supporting.—At the Theatre Royal Cinema, St. Thomas Street, the top-liner is "Saved by the Enemy."—Commencing this week, Mr. Will Catlin, the famous amusement caterer, has now got three places of entertainment on the South Foreshore, two of them picture palaces, and all up to full season pitch. The Olympia has been newly-decorated at the front, and its appearance has thus been greatly enhanced for Whitsuntide. The principal films for the week-end at the Palladium were "True Irish Hearts," and a very good picture of the Derby. The Olympia had "The Wrecker of Lives" and "When Passion Reigns."

BOGNOR BREEZES.

Some splendid pictures have been shown during the holidays at the Pier, Bognor, notably on Whit-Sunday, when the Picture Hall was well filled with visitors, the town being crowded. The array of good things included "A Woman of the People," "Lieut. Rose and the Stolen Bullion," "Baby's Joy Ride," "The Outlaw," "The Diver" and "Honesty."

PRESENTATION AT BRADFORD.

Mr. H. Leacey, late manager of the de Luxe, Bridge Street, Bradford, who has received a similar appointment at the Crescent Cinema, Manchester, was recently the recipient of an illuminated address, presented by Mr. Frith, proprietor of the de Luxe. Mrs. Leacey received a gold watch bracelet, while their baby was presented with a silver serviette ring. A further gift to Mr .and Mrs. Leacey took the shape of a silver fruit dish.

LEICESTER EXHIBITORS' OUTING.

At a meeting of the Leicester Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, held at the White Hart Hotel on May 20th, it was resolved that the first annual outing should be held on July 26th, to take the form of a motor run via Whitwick, the Monastery, and across the Charnwood Forest to Longcliff, where lunch will be provided. The party will start from outside the Palace Theatre at 10 o'clock sharp.—Business continues satisfactory. "The Battle of Manila" will be an exclusive attraction this week at the Silver Street Electric, another important feature being "Caught with the Goods."—At the Floral Hall "Chelsea 7750" takes prides of place, while at High Street "Scotland for Ever" promises great things.—Two very telling features at the Picture House, Granby Street, for the week just concluded have been the 1914 Derby, and—of especial local interest—the Leicestershire Agricultural Show at Coalville.

ROUND THE CAMBRIDGE CINEMAS.

A fine Whitsuntide programme was offered at the Playhouse for the holidays. "A Crime in the Night" was exclusively booked for this hall, and it proved a great draw.—On Monday a special picture of the Cambridge Horse Show and Parade was taken, and shown to large audiences on Tuesday and the following nights. For to-day (Thursday) the entire programme was changed, "The First Law of Nature" heading the bill, supported by "The Delayed Special," "Fatty's Flirtation," "The Conquered," and "Hunting the Hunter." The managing director (Mr. A. P. Jordan) has secured the services of Mlle. Katrina, a wonderful young violinist, and M. P. Van de Vyer, a pianist composer, who will give performances each afternoon and evening for one week, commencing June 8th.—Last week the Electric featured 'Ten Nights in a Bar-room," "The New Housekeeper," "Golden Heart" and "Aida." For Whitsun week the management secured a powerful series of films, including "The Brigadier's Stripes," "Lady Mary Saves the Flag," "In the Wilderness," "Backed by Influence" and "Aching Hearts."—"The Wreckers" and "Trapped in a Forest Fire" were the two star films at the New Palace, East Road, last week, and large crowds are this week witnessing "A Woodland Paradise" and "The Rajah's Jewels."—At the Empire, Mr. Fred Hawkins, lessee and manager, has provided his patrons this week with an exceptionally fine bill, the feature films being "The Human Torpedo," "A Dangerous Woman" and "The Three Sisters."—The Palace Rink reopened on Whit-Monday with an excellent programme. The variety entertainment is being supplied by the "Flashlights" Company, whilst the pictures take an equally prominent part on the programme.

MANCHESTER TRADE SHOWS.

On Tuesday next an important Trade show will be held at the Victoria, Ardwick Green, under the joint auspices of the Exclusive Film Supply Company, Limited, 83, Bridge Street, and the Dispatch Film Agency, 37, Cannon Street. The latter film will show among others "Woe to the Conquered" and "Stolen Honours," and the Exclusive Film Supply will have on view "Destinies Fulfilled," "An Actor's Downfall," "A Legacy of Vengeance" and "A Military Judas," for which they are sole owners for Lancashire, Yorkshire, Cheshire, Derbyshire and Staffordshire.—Beresford's, of Hippodrome Buildings, Oxford Street, have the sole rights for Lancashire, Yorkshir and Staffordshire of The Judgment," "Should He Forgive?" and "Wrongly Accused." This firm gave a Trade show at the Grand Theatre, Peter Street, on Friday last, when "Jim, the Fireman," for which they control the Lancashire and Staffordshire rights, was presented. "Was it He?" was also shown.

CHANNEL ISLANDS CINEMAS.

The consecration of a new colour presented to the Guernsey and Alderney Battalion of the National Reserve last week gave Mr. J. M. Nisbet an opportunity to film the proceedings, and the picture was subsequently shown at the Rectory Hall. Mr. Nisbet has the "taking" of a locally written play, which will be acted by local people in some of the best parts of the isand. The film will take a month to prepare. At the Rectory Hall the Derby was shown on the day following the race. Other films have been "The Queen's Jewel," "The Mirror of Death," etc.—At the Jersey Opera House "Traitors to Their King" led a programme of excellent features for the evening, "India" being the travel picture.—Variety has been the strong feature at the Alhambra, whilst the pictures have been "The Antique Brooch," "Love Will Find a Way" and "The Coveted Prize."—"Cora, the Temptress," was an easy first at West's Picture Playhouse, the other principals being "A Miracle of Love," "The Carbon Copy" and "Fatty's Flirtation."

BREEZES FROM BRIDLINGTON.

Bridlington has again been invaded by visitors this Whitsuntide, and as the evenings are still very chilly the cinema managers have come in for the plums rather than the open-air entertainers. Mr. Forman quite prepared himself for the unsettled weather by issuing the following poster: "In fickle weather the Picturedrome in the old Town is just right: cosy in cold or wet weather, always refreshing in warm weather, and always entertaining." One of the best of recent successes here has been "Confederates in Crime," whilst others have been "The Fruits of Vengeance," and Pimples's Humanity."—At the Royal Victoria Rooms, Mr. Palmer, the Corporation's manager, showed "Her Old Teachers" and "The Four Million Pounds Dowry" to big houses last week. —Messrs. Fields Café Cinema made a good start for the season with "The Chevalier de Maison Rouge" —The Picture Hose, for which Mr. J. Austin is responsible, has been repainted and given a very spic-and-span summer appearance. The Whit-week-end was commenced with "The Chinese Death Thorn," a picture which brought excellent results.

EXETER ECHOES.

The picture season at the Theatre Royal, Exeter, is now in full swing and continuous programmes are screened nightly. The educational matinées at the Palladium, instituted by Mr. Aderley when he took over the local reins of office for Mr. Albany Ward, are increasing in popularity, and every Tuesday afternoon large audiences gather in the spacious hall for the purpose of witnessing such films as "Sixty Years a Queen," "Hamlet," "The Three Musketeers," etc.—Business continues to be brisk at the Empire, Exeter. One of the chief films last week was "King Charles." This week the programme includes "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves."—Mr. Harold Mock has good reason to be satisfied with the attendance at the City Palace. The star film for the first half of the week was "A Daughter of Satan."—"The Tower of Terror" was the star exclusive at the Empire, Newton Abbot, for the first half of the present week.—Special holiday programmes have also been arranged at the Imperial, where the previous week the British Army film and "Midst Raging Beasts" proved so popular.—"The Three Musketeers" was the special attraction at the Public Hall, Exmouth, for the first half of the present week.

AT BREEZY BLACKPOOL.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Blackpool this week is enjoying one of the best Whitsuntides on record, and the managers of the different picture houses have done really excellent business. Always to the front, Mr. Blackburn, of the Princess Theatre, on the North Promenade, is screening this week, one of the best programmes in town. "The Grit of a Dandy" proved a huge draw for the first three days, and "Master of the Mine" and "The Filly" for the rest of the week should be equally successful.

Exclusive dramas always figure in the high-class programmes submitted at the Palace, "Temptations of New York City" and "How God Came to Sonny Boy" being the special bookings for Whitsuntide.

I have several times referred to the excellent and varied programme to be found at the Waterloo Picture House, and last week was no exception to the rule, the principal item being "Lights o' London," which drew crowded houses.

A subject of special interest to picture lovers was shown at the Royal Pavilion last week in "The Master of the Mine." This week the principal subjects are "The Accusing Skeleton" and "The Mystery of the Dover Express." The attendances at this popular house are always good.

The best programmes for the busy man in a busy thoroughfare are always found at the Clifton Palace, in Church Street, and Mr. Holgate has earned a reputation in this respect, which places his hall in the forefront of Blackpool houses. The principal item on last week's programme was "From Out the Depths"; this week, "Absinthe" and "From the Beyond" top the bill, while topicals and comedy make up a pleasing programme.

A very much improved place is the Imperial, Dickson Road, and the residents in the vicinity have no cause to go further afield for their entertainment. This week the continuous stream of people is chiefly attracted by "A Cigarette-Maker's Romance." Next week Asta Nielsen in "Vengeance is Mine" should prove a rare draw.

The Central Cinema provides "The Colonel's Wife," "The Woman Thou Gavest" and "A Judge's Vindication." Next week "Sapho" has been secured and should fill this cosy theatre to overflowing.

THE LASKY FEATURE PLAY COMPANY.

Mr. Samuel Goldfish, general manager and treasurer of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, who is due to arrive in London to-day (Thursday), is bringing with him the first three releases of the company, "The White Man" (six reels), "Brewster's Millions" (five reels), and "The Master Mind" (five reels), and proposes to offer territorial rights for all Lasky productions. Mr. Goldfish will, of course, open branch offices in London, and his wide experience of the entertainment world should enable him to handle his company's releases to the very best advantage.

MR. JESSE L. LASKY.

Mr. Jesse L. Lasky, the president, is a well-known and popular figure in the American Trade, while Mr. Oscar Apfel, who has been associated with the Edison Company and Pathé Frères, is the director-in-chief. The three releases mentioned above have achieved a distinct success in the States. Among future productions are "The Call of the North," "The Ghost Breaker," "The Man on the Box," and "The Only Son."

It may be mentioned that at the Strand Theatre, New York—the largest moving picture theatre in the world, seating, as it does, 5,000 people — where the Lasky films have been screened, the house was sold out at every performance.

PRESTON'S PICTURES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The Preston magistrates renewed all the cinematograph licences within their area last Friday, no comment being made on any of them. That surely testifies to the satisfactory way in which proprietors run their businesses. There were also issued during the week the new regulations under the Act. These provide that there shall be no exhibition on any Sunday or on Christmas Day, Good Friday, or any day appointed for "a public fast or thanksgiving." Exhibitions are allowed to commence at 10 in the morning on days of public holidays, but on other days at 2 in the afternoon. The attendance of children apparently under fourteen years of age is limited at the latest to 9 o'clock, unless accompanied by his or her parent or guardian. In cases where two performances nightly are given, this rule applies to the second performance.

One of the particular attractions of the holiday week is "Joan of Arc," showing at the Cosy Cinema. It is a certain draw.—At the Alexandra, there is an exclusive, "The Wastrel."—Bennett's Theatre reopened on Whit-Monday with "Locked in Death" and "'Neath the Lion's Paw," both first-rate pictures. Then at the Queen's there is "David Copperfield."—At the Imperial, "The Lure of London," and at the Prince's, "Out of the Depths" and "Master of the Mine."

The management of the Queen's have secured interesting bookings right up to the end of July. With the advent of summer and long evenings, two nightly shows are given on Monday and Thursdays only. Last week there were shown "The Burden Bearer," "A Heavy Sleeper" and "Calamity Ann Takes a Trip."

The Imperial reports gratifying attendances. Its central situation and strong programme make a successful combination. The manager had a taking exclusive drama, "The Grip," during last week, and other dramas were "The Witch of Salem" and "Gambler's Ruin." The comic element was also well represented.

The Prince's Head showed "'Neath the Lion's Paw," and other subjects were "The Diver" and "The Rawhide Queen," while the humorous items were "Bloomer's New Dance" and "The New Boy."

The headlines of the films at other places are:—Embee Hall, "Love or a Throne," "The Passing of Black Peter" and "Her Love Letters"; Marathon, "In the Coils of the Python" and "The Death Weight"; Alexandra, "Blind Fate" and "Confederates in Crime"; Temperance Hall, "The Coffin Ship"; the Cosy Cinema, "The Soldier's Home"; at the Picturedrome there was the uncommonly interesting picture illustrating the process of film-making.

A PETERBOROUGH PAR.

"The Witch of Salem," in two parts, was the title of the feature film at the Broadway Kinema for the latter part of last week. The resident manager (Mr. J. E. Draper) secured "Orders Under Seal" for the holidays.

GIVES MORE LIGHT.

These lenses are made of specially prepared glass of extreme transparency, which passes 20 per cent. more light than the material generally used for condensers.

They are put through a process which makes them heat-resisting.

The curvature and polishing are done at our own works, on new machines, which ensure the same accuracy and finish as in photographic lenses.

For these reasons the GUIL LENSES pass more light, are subject to less breakage, and have correctly ground curves.

SCOTTISH NEWS AND NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Few halls had the auspicious send-off accorded to the new Assembly Picture Palaca, Girvan, on Tuesday evening last, when Mr. McCreadie, proprietor, gathered round him a company of nearly 100 of the principal residents in the town and district, to join in a cake-and-wine banquet to commemorate the occasion. Provost Smellie presided, and congratulated Mr. McCreadie on the transformation he had made with the building, and wished the venture every success. A lengthy toast list followed, the speakers eulogising the new hall and predicting for it the brightest future. The theatre has been enlarged, deepened, renewed in every particular, provided with a new stage, balcony, private boxes, and roomy stalls. The seats are tip-ups, and are upholstered in blue corduroy. The first performance was given on Wednesday afternoon, when there was a good attendance, and in the evening the hall was crowded. The pictures screened at the opening included "The Iron Trail," "Green Eye of the Yellow God," "The Little Hero," while comedy was represented by "The Misadventures of Mike Murphy" and "A Chip of the Old Block." The whole of the projection apparatus was supplied by Messrs. Gaumont, Glasgow, and Mr. Light (of the Glasgow branch) attended and supervised the arrangements.

Mr. Arthur Howard, of the New Electric Theatre, Dundee, continues to do excellent business, and for many weeks past has been making a speciality of local topicals, which find much favour in the city by the silvery Tay. Apart from topicals, Mr. Howard is screening some excellent features, and this week, commencing to-day (Thursday), the attraction is "His Neighbour's Wife," while a whole week's star was found in the 1914 Derby.

I now experience no surprise when something exceptional occurs at Motherwell, for I have come to the conclusion that one never knows where Mr. D. Mundell's advertising energies will break out. This week his achievement has been the feat of getting the editor of the local paper to print the full story of Messrs. Pathé's "Germinal," which he is screening this week, and needless to say, the result of this fine advert. meant full houses.

Nestling at the foot of Britain's highest mountain, Ben Nevis, Fort William is a popular resort for holiday-makers. The Viewforth Pavilion, where Mr. George Kay always has a good programme of pictures, is well patronised, and this week he is showing "The Woman of Japan," "From Pen to Pickaxe," "Hero and His Blind Master," and some excellent comedies. Business in Fort William continues to be very good.

The various halls in Ayr are doing very good business, and the programmes presented are up-to-date in every respect. At the Palace the week-end star was "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves," and at the Pavilion, where variety is included, a good, all-round programme is always presented.

At La Scala, Perth, Mr. Mullholland seems to have the knack of picking out the best films going. This week, among other items, are "No Place for Father," "The Red Spiders," and "The Bride of Mystery." Comedy is well represented.

It's a far cry to Wick, but even in this remote northern town pictures are now a feature of the people's amusement, and the Breadalbane Hall is nearing its first birthday as a picture house. Programmes are changed three times weekly, and those being screened this week include "Fruits of Vengeance," "A Hundred Years Ago," and "A Fatal Invention." Varieties also find a place in the bill.

The Falkirk Burgh magistrates, in granting renewals of licences on Friday, made it a stipulation that only films which bear the endorsement of the British Board of Censors shall be exhibited in the halls under their jurisdiction.

Stirling, the City of the Rock, is certainly up-to-date in pictures, and the local managers have no reason to complain of the business resulting from their efforts. At the Alhambra the bit-bit was "Kronstadt," from Max Pemberton's novel; the Olympia screened "Held to Ransom," "The Burning Train," "Love-sickness at Sea," and "White Feather"; and the Electric featured "Detective Finn" and a strong programme of comedy.

At the Cosy Corner, Dunoon, Mr. Dick Sutherd has commenced his summer season, and in addition to the Merry Geishas is presenting a sketch in which the artistes perform in conjunction with the cinematograph.—At the Picture House the attraction last week was "The Wastrel," and its sequel, "Ten Years Later," while next week "Black Roderick the Poacher" will be shown.

Commencing on Monday, the performances are continuous from 2 till 5.30, and 6.30 to 10.30. Dunoon is rapidly filling with visitors, and a good season is anticipated.

The St. Andrew's Hall, Stanraer, has been leased by the Palace Cinema Syndicate, and on Monday evening last opened to a splendid audience. The hall, which is lofty and commodious, has been completely reseated with "tip-ups," and everything has been arranged for the comfort of patrons. Programmes are to be changed three times weekly, and the management have made a hit by securing a well-known local artiste as pianist—Miss Mussett. Mr. George Richardson is the resident manager, and can be depended on to keep things up-to-date in the Galloway town. The selection of pictures for the opening week was excellently varied, and the projection was of a high-class character. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of this week the Derby was screened, and proved a great draw.

Lord Provost Scott performed the opening ceremony of the King's Cinema, Perth, on Monday, in the presence of a large and distinguished audience. The King's (which was formerly the Empire) has been entirely remodelled, and is now quite a palatial picture hall. A pretty entrance, with up-to-date offices, pay-boxes, and a nicely appointed waiting lounge, leads to the more expensive seats in the hall, with plush and leather-covered tip-up seats to accommodate close on 500 persons. At the opening matinée the Lord Provost said the proprietor was Mr. W. B. Macallum, backed up by a syndicate of London gentlemen, who had been fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Edward F. Hunter as resident manager. It was the intention of the management to provide pictures of a healthy and educative character, and he wished the King's Cinema every success. An interesting programme of pictures, including "The Murdoch Trial," was shown. The orchestra is under the direction of Mr. Harry Wadsworth, and the accompaniment to the pictures was quite a feature of the programme.

On Monday evening last I had the pleasure of visiting all the picture houses in Coatbridge, one of the principal centres of the iron and steel industry in Scotland. Here the whole of the houses report "no reason to grumble." At the Cinema House Mr. Dickenson has a seating capacity of 1,400, and at the time of my visit had a well-filled house. The "special" was "In the Shadow of the Throne," while other items included "Love and Dynamite." An orchestra of four performers supply appropriate accompaniments. The Cinema is an ideal house, comfortably seated and well managed.—At the "B.B." I found Mr. J. May entertaining a good audience with "The Black Spot," "'Neath the Lion's Paw," and "Mabel's Strong Love." The seating capacity of the "B.B." is 1,000, and judging from Monday's audience it is often taxed to its full extent.—The Empire, which has had a very successful run since its opening in January, still continues to please, and apparently has secured a high place in the good opinions of the inhabitants. Mr. A. V. Taylor, who manages the hall for the Coatbridge Picture House, Limited, puts on exceptionally good programmes, that which I witnessed on Monday including "In the Hands of London Crooks," while during the week-end "The Mystery of Boscombe Vale" was starred. The Empire is "self-contained," special plant being installed, thus making the management independent of the town supply. The screening of the films is ably handled by Mr. J. Crooks, and Mr. Blackwood and his orchestra submit fine musical programmes.—At the Pavilion, Mr. Hayes is the proprietor-manager, and here the quality of the programme submitted is all that can be desired, while the manner in which the films are screened would do justice to any hall. "When the Earth Trembled" and "A Quiet Little Wedding" were among the items being presented, and were accorded general approval by the large audience present.

A visit to the Fife-Douglas Company's factory found the process of manufacture of the "Arandee" board in full swing. Special frames have been fitted at the Salon, Sauchiehall Street, at the City Picture House, Union Street, and look remarkably smart. Many orders are in hand, and I was shown an inquiry from Mexico.

Three new halls opened in Scotland last week were all furnished with tip-up seats, etc., by Messrs. Paterson, Limited, Howard Street. In addition to these halls, Perth, Stranraer, and Girvan, Messrs. Paterson are at present engaged on contracts for furnishing halls at Dundee, Broughty Ferry, Peebles, Fauldhouse, and Coatbridge, in Scotland, and for Mr. McEvoy, of the Masterpiece Theatre, Dublin. The list of halls already furnished by Messrs. Paterson would fill a page of space, but when a manager in the north is asked, "Who supplied the seating?" the almost invariable reply is "Paterson's."

The Royalty Theatre, Glasgow, one of the oldest and most fashionable homes of comedy and drama in Scotland, will shortly be opened under the new name of the Lyric, and will be devoted mainly to high-class pictures and varieties. The Lyceum, Govan, also commenced a programme composed chiefly of pictures on Monday evening, the films being supplied by Messrs. Gaumont. The pictures at the Lyceum are being run by Mr. Milne, who already owns one of the most successful all-picture houses in Govan.

HELP IN TROUBLE.

FOR PROPRIETORS, MANAGERS, AND OPERATORS.

"C.A." is a Colonial correspondent who seeks advice regarding the erection of a small cinematograph theatre in his district. "C.A." has two existing theatres as opposition, but from one of his questions we rather gather that if projection be a criterion the competition will not be a serious one. Our correspondent's proposal is to erect a small brick building to seat about 400 people in the body of the hall, and between 100 and 200 people in the gallery. "C.A." asks, amongst other things (1) Which machine do you recommend, the Silent Empire or the Pathé? (2) How shall I prepare the wall for use as a screen for projection (3) What is the cause of an unsteady picture? "Some demonstrations I witness have pictures very unsteady, while others appear very streaky. Any advice on management will be appreciated."

Your suggestion, "C.A.," appears to be a very good one, but we should think that you would be well rewarded for your labours in erecting the class of house you contemplate.

As you propose building you would be recommended to have a well raked floor in the body of the hall. An incline of about one in twelve would be quite sufficient to give all your patrons a good view of the screen, the height of which should be about 8 ft. from the floor line, measuring from the bottom of the screen. We suggest a picture in the region of 16 ft. in width to be ample for your requirements. This is assuming the source of light used for projector to be the electric arc. You have, however, not mentioned the nature of the illuminant you propose using. Should you, by virtue of the fact that no electricity supply is available, have to put up with limelight, then do not attempt a picture more than 12 ft. in width.

Regarding the preparation of the wall. Whilst not necessarily recommending the use of the wall for projection, owing to the fact that in a new building, sweating is certain to occur with effects detrimental to the picture, the best mode of preparation is as follows:—Treat the surface with clean cement, taking care that the plane of surface of the screen is parallel with that of the film or at right angle in every way to the optical axis or line of projection. Finish off by using three or four coats of flat or "dead" distemper. The final coat had better be stippled to give a depth to the surface. However, as before suggested, the use of the wall, whilst being an economical picture screen, is not without its disadvantages, and a better arrangement in our opinion is to use a screen with a canvas base. There are a number of speciality screens on the market, which, possessing a comparatively high reflective power, can be recommended both to give an improved picture and more economical projection. Failing the purchase of a ready-made screen, one can be made up as follows:—Fine grained canvas or sail cloth of the required width (height of picture) should be obtained and mounted and stretched upon a well-seasoned wood frame. Both sides should be well-sized, the front surface being afterwards treated with three successive coats of a mixture of size and whitening. Alternatively to this, the surface of the screen might be treated with one of the special preparations that can be obtained from the accessory houses for the purpose. The home application, however, of some of these preparations—metallic paints for the most part—is not always successful, some considerable care and not a little skill being required in their use. To obtain a "finished" appearance, the picture should be framed with a velvet mask, which should fall inside the light line an inch or two. Although the gate of the projector acts as a mask to the film, and is most carefully and accurately machined, nevertheless under the huge magnification a very ragged edge is displayed unless some such means as framing on the actual screen be adopted. We particularly mention these points, "C.A." as you require to go one better than the existing houses, and we appreciate that it is, to a most considerable extent, attention to minor details that makes for pleasing and effective projection.

Regarding the make of projector, either of those you mention can be recommended. They are both first-class products of the projector manufacturers' art, and can be relied upon to give good and lasting results. The only essential is to engage an operator who not only knows the elementary duty of actual projection, but also the important knowledge of the projector's construction. Only by the employment of such a man can long life of the machine and continued good service be assured.

A man must "feel" his machine the whole time it is in operation. He must know the tune of every part of its anatomy, so that at the least sign of disarrangement he can place his finger at once and with certainly on the offending part. The human element plays a most important part in successful picture projection, and we think if you require to take a lead and to maintain it in your district you should engage a first-class operator.

Digitized by Google

You ask the reason for unsteady projection. This may be due to either mal-design or maladjustment, or abnormal wear of the projector. Most probably wear or incorrect adjustment of certain parts is the actual cause. It would take too long here to deal with all the factors that make for unsteady projection. They are, however, fully dealt with in our publication, "The Modern Bioscope Operator," which we can with every confidence recommend to you.

Regarding the streaks appearing on the screen. We hardly know whether you refer to rain due to scratches appearing on the surface of the screen or if by "streaks" you mean the "ghost" due to the actual change of successive pictures being projected on the screen. If the former, there is no remedy so far as the user of the films is concerned. At least his only remedy is to obtain films that have had less use or greater care bestowed upon them. The streaky effects of "ghosts" noticed more prominently in the film titles and announcements by the dragging up or down of the letter is due to the shutter not operating in time with the film-moving device. The action of the shutter is to cut off the light during the whole time the intermittent mechanism is in operation. If it should be in advance or behind, a "ghost" results. This is a matter entirely for rectification by the operator. The method of resetting the shutter is dealt with in the book previously referred to.

Regarding the management of the theatre. We would suggest that you retain the services of one having experience of the business. Failing this, carry out your own ideas on entirely business lines, and profit by the mistakes you will undoubtedly make.

ECONOMISER writes as follows: "I have a picture theatre now undergoing erection, and the architect has arranged for the following installation: Four arc lamps outside, a line of twenty lights under the entrance arch, six four-light ceiling fittings in the auditorium, and about twenty-four wall, passage, and office lights. The projector arc lamp will run direct off the mains. The supply is 110 volts, and the electricity is supplied on a flat rate of 3d. per unit. I should like to know the approximate weekly cost of runnings, also what saving will be effected by the installation of a gas engine generating plant?"

Instead of averaging the weekly cost it would be better to work on a full load hourly basis. Your projector arc will probably burn 50 or 60 amperes, making the consumption of electricity 5 or 6 units per hour. The outside four arc lamps will probably burn two in series, so that the total current will be 20 amperes. For these, 2 units an hour will be consumed. You have a total of sixty-eight incandescent lamps, and their candle-power must be considered. If we take each lamp at 30 watts, that is about 25 candle-power, your incandescent lamp installation will consume a little over 2 units per hour. Your total electricity consumption, therefore, will be, with everything burning, 10 units per hour, costing, at 3d. per unit, 2s. 6d. It must be remembered, of course, that the outside lamps will be switched on only at sunset, whilst many of the auditorium lights will be on only between pictures, the regulation lights alone being on continuously. Due allowance therefore must be made for this.

Comparing, however, the cost of generating one's own electricity with that of the supply company, one must consider the cost of gas. This you do not mention. If we take an average figure of about 2s. 9d. per 1,000 cubic ft., and remember that a modern gas engine consumes about 22 cubic ft. of gas per brake horse-power hour, or, say, for the overall plant at about three-quarter load, 40 cubic ft. of gas per unit of electricity generated per hour, we find that fuel costs will equal about 1½d. per unit. To this must be added an allowance for oil, etc., making a probable total of 1¾d. per unit. This is half the price of your supply charges, and would make the hourly full load running cost 1s. 3d. A 50 per cent. saving, therefore, would result.

CAPE TOWN CHAT.

The showmen of Cape Town have been very much disturbed by the announcement made by the Union Government of the new Customs Tariff which includes a duty on imported films of 5s. per 100 ft. This tax is cnosidered to be most excessive and, as will be expected a protest is being raised. Several prominent M.L.As. have been approached and have promised their support. Should this new duty hold good it will mean that the prices of admission will have to be increased. Good business was done at the Alhambra with Cines' "Antony and Cleopatra" recently, this fine production being highly appreciated by Cape Town picture-theatre goers.—Excellent use is mode of the bioscope at the Tivoli Theatre.—Wolfram's bioscope, which up to the present has been a "continuous," has now turned to one session per evening except Saturdays and holidays. This change has met with instant success. The films shown this week include "Martin Numa," while "In the Grip of a Villain" will shortly make its appearance.—The Majestic Theatre has been doing very good business of late and has screened some fine productions, including "Doctor Satan," "An Hour Before Dawn" and "Detective Finn." The "Mirror Screen" shows the pictures up wonderfully. Picture producing has already commenced in Cape Town.

NEWS OF THE THEATRES.

How the Late Mrs. Sydney Drew's Success Came Too Late.

Her Play, Which Was a Failure, Scores a Great Triumph as a Film.

It's a long time since the Irony of Fate has given so tragic a demonstration of its idiosyncrasises as in the case of Mrs. Sydney Drew, who died a few weeks ago.

Some years ago, under the nom de plume of George Cameron, Mrs. Drew, an actress herself of distinguished lineage, for her father was McKee Rankin and her mother Kittie Blanchard, wrote a play. She called it "Agnes." This play was the pride of her life, the joy of her heart.

It was produced at the Majestic and, although it did not fail outright, its run was short lived. Its reviewers admitted the strength of its story, but said truthfully that it was too talky. In dramatic form too many of its incidents had to be enacted off-stage; the characters had to talk about them instead of enacting them. The play's run was very, very short.

A year or so ago Mrs. Drew fell a victim to a desperate malady. As much to amuse her as anything else some of her friends, including Mr. Ralph Ince, who has since produced it, suggested that she should "picturise" it, or in other words, make a five-film scenario of her play for the movies. A few weeks ago, just about the time her play was to go into rehearsal in its new form and under its new name—"A Million Bid"—Mrs. Drew died. She did not live to see her despised "Agnes" develop into an extraordinarily sensational success—for that is exactly what it is in its new form.

EXHIBITORS' ASSOCIATION.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The second annual meeting of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain and Ireland was held at the Grand Central Hotel, Leeds, on Tuesday last week, when Dr. W. Fowler Pettie presided. The Secretary (Mr. Gavazzi King) presented the second annual report, which stated that the membership during the year had increased by 550 and the Association had attained recognition as a power both in Parliament and in local government departments. In the department of legal advice of the association much good had been achieved, and assistance and advice had been given in more than forty cases, involving important principles which had been brought before the committee. The committee had taken counsel's opinion on the subject of charges for electric current for projectors and might in the future have occasion to enter into litigation to compel suppliers of electricity to charge on power rates only. A table of rates in different parts of the country had been drawn up and branch associations had in many cases taken the question up with local authorities with conspicuous success. The Edinburgh branch had by this means gained a reduction of a 1d. per unit, an action which would save the Edinburgh and East of Scotland exhibitors many hundreds of pounds. The report made special reference to the subject of Sunday opening and drew particular attention to the circumstances in Middlesex, where the Association has advised its members to open on Sundays without regard to the condition forbidding such opening upon their licences recently endorsed by the Middlesex County Council, the Association contending that the Council's action was illegal according to legal advice. The demand for Sunday opening was persistently growing all over the country, despite the fact that opponents of Sunday opening were becoming increasingly strongly organised and had in many cases been successful in closing cinematograph theatres where they had previously been opened on Sundays. The association was only waiting for greater strength in its own ranks before taking up this subject nationally. Strong condemnation was expressed of the unjust and harrassing restrictions imposed upon the Trade by magistrates in some parts of the country, showmen having been frequently terrorised into making costly and needless alterations. The Northern Central Districts had been particularly notable in this regard. At Liverpool a most peculiar position had arisen. After interviewing the Secretary of State for Home Affairs the General Council of the Association had decided to challenge the power of the Liverpool magistrates to enforce certain of their regulations, and expensive proceedings were instituted. The Liverpool justices agreed to state a case for the Higher Courts, but when the matter came before the Divisional Court the Liverpool magistrates were successful in a plea that they had no power to state the case which they had already stated, maintaining that they acted upon delegated authority and not in a judicial capacity. The committee of the association had decided to take another case at the next Liverpool licensing sessions. The work of the association was to be spread to wider channels, and a resolution had been adopted calling for amendment of the Cinematograph Act, 1909, in which "licence" would be substituted by "registration," and the necessary conditions for public safety should be uniform throughout the country. The committee trusted all members of the Trade to rally round the association in numerical and financial strength to carry out this wider campaign. The Trade must not be content to be slaves to the varying whims of local constituted authority, and in many cases to be ruined financially.

Mr. F. W. Ogden Smith delivered an address on "The Trade—Past and Future." Mr. Smith remarked that although the year 1910 had been spoken of as being likely to retain the record for picture theatres, the capital registered for which had then been £305,551, the past year's registrations had exceeded that sum by £262,334, and there had been 453 picture theatre companies established. This latter figure was nine less than in 1912, but the capital had averaged £7,000 per company instead of £4,000 in the previous year. The tendency was now to provide bigger and better equipped buildings than formerly, and the capital per company would doubtless be even higher in the coming year. He thought the erection of better buildings was a sound policy. No less than 118 film producing and hiring companies had been registered during the past year, with a gross capital of £630,995. He thought a fair estimate of the amount of money invested in the industry in total would be some £17,000,0000 sterling. Assuming a total of 7,000 theatres open in the United Kingdom with a capital of £13,000,000, the average cost would work out at £1,855, and assuming these to pay an annual average rental and taxation of £200 the sum expended in this direction would total £560,000, and the electric lighting total, at an average of £7 per week each, would be £2,548,000 per annum. The wage bill of the theatres averaged £12 a week, making a total of £4,368,000, and something like the same amount might be put down as cost of film hiring. The railway companies carried no fewer than from 16,000 to 20,000 boxes of films every week, on an average charge of 1s. each, making £45,000 per annum. He fancied the railway managements did not quite realise this fact to the full, and might bear it in mind when they refused to accept responsibility for delayed delivery of film parcels which had gone astray. The printer, too, had found the cinematograph industry a valuable feature of his business, said Mr. Smith. Something over £60,000 could be put down to the printer. In the theatres alone no fewer than some 75,000 persons were employed, and those employed in the film supplying and accessory concerns would bring up the total to something like 130,000 people. They should remember that this colossal industry had been built up practically within the past seven years. He thought such figures might with advantage be placed before licensing magistrates and watch committees, who, as business men, would perhaps then be more reasonable in their demands and restrictions. In the bulk of cases where local authorities had discretionary powers they had, owing to lack of knowledge of the subject, persisted in the making of laws which were of a stringency which suggested that they could not be adopted by men who had made a proper study of the questions involved. Such discretionary powers had been eagerly seized upon by the faddists and opponents of the Trade. Many reforms were urgently needed, but it was certain that on the part of the Trade the future would show much improvement in the type of pictures put before the public and in the comfort of the theatres.

The delegates were entertained to lunch as the guests of the Yorkshire Branch of the Association.

NEWS FROM HERTS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Watford and the neighbourhood had numberless attractions for the public on Whit Monday. Local picture managers were not one whit behind in enterprise, and whichever hall was visited told the same story of large and appreciative audiences. The fine afternoons have kept a good many people away from the matinées, but enough still find the pictures so attractive that they provide consistently good houses. At the Watford Horse Show on Monday the Central Hall photographer was busy recording the incidents of the day, and the film was shown in the evening to a crowded house. The management here got the film of the Derby on the evening of the race, so that the Central has figured prominently lately in the local picture world. The film programmes here have been very successful, including such features as "The War of the Lilliputians," "In the Grip of a Villain," "The Salvage of the Third Floor Back" and "The Golden Beetle."

Very appropriately one of the principal films at the Coliseum has been "Film Manufacturing." On no previous occasion has a picture of this type been seen in the town, and Messrs. Giffen and Moore did good business with it. The public always enjoy a glimpse at "how the thing is done." "The Discovery of America," "Jack, the Wolf," "The Diver" and "The Wreckers" have brought good audiences into this popular house.

For last week's entertainment at the Kinetic Company's house, Mr. Palmer scored a success through the engagement of a local comedy artiste, Arthur Ling. The principal pictures have been "Mistaken Identity" and "Margaret Catchpole."—Both musical selections and films have got a splendid reputation for the Empire, and Mr. Andrew Schomar's orchestra and the films have had no lack of appreciative audiences. "The Brand of Cain," "The Death Weight," "The Prodigal Son," and "The Next Generation" have all had successful exhibitions.

Since the death of Sir Hubert von Herkomer I have made references to the exhibition of his films, and credit must be given to Mr. Robert C. Clayton for being the manager outside Watford to show one of these productions. The film chosen was "The Grit of a Dandy." Since the opening of the Electric at Waltham Cross the exhibitions of films have been well patronised by the local public. Mr. Clayton has had as exclusives for the district "Quo Vadis?" "Les Miserables," and "Last Days of Pompeii." Local charities have benefited considerably from the special performances given by Mr. Clayton, who has made the Electric the centre of entertainment in a wide district.

People who stayed at home in Hemel Hempstead were able to see the Derby at the Princess's on the same evening, and a full house waited with great eagerness for the arrival of the film. "Fast Lynne" was extensively advertised locally. This, together with "The Seneschal's Diamond," was last week's principal feature at this house. "The Man Who Vanished" and "The Boomerang" have also had successful screenings.

The Hitchin Picturedrome management gave a very welcome opportunity to local playgoers last week by booking the famous comedy "Oh, I say!" Messrs. Blake Brothers were anxious to show the local public what their large, new stage is capable of, and for the first time a Hitchin audience have been able to see a play produced on an up-to-date stage whilst seated in comfort on a properly elevated floor.

The flow of generous entertainment that Mr. Parry gives at the Playhouse, Hitchin, does not slacken. During last week Mr. Parry packed into his programme four first-class variety turns, and a selection of pictures which included "Master of the World," "The Derby," and "Irish Hearts," a picture of Ireland in the days of the great rebellion. "The Curse of War" and "Devil's Gap" have been among the films recently shown.

After the national 20-miles road-walking championship, held at Clarence Park, St. Albans, the film of the event was shown at the St. Albans Cinema. This topical proved a great attraction. Mr. Dunkley put on the screen last week "The Diamonds of the Duchess," "Shon, the Piper," and has also shown with gratifying success "Widow Maloney's Faith" and "The Story of the Rosary."

At Harpenden White Palace the bookings of "Antony and Cleopatra," "Margaret Catchpole," "Victory or Death" and "The Dagger's Stroke" brought good business. At each of the three exhibitions given daily there have been uniformly good houses.

At their warehouse Messrs. W. Skipp and Sons have been showing "The Girl and the Tiger," "The Rajah's Jewels," "The Escape of Jim Nolan," "The Curse of Greed" and "Where the Road Forks," which last feature contains a notable film in the jewel scene from "Faust."

A striking film was given by Mr. Hatrick to patrons of the Hoddesdon Cinema in "The Gunmaker of Moscow." "Jack, the Wolf" and "Three Shadows" have also received exhibition at this well-known house.

BOOK REVIEWS.

"THE WORLD, THE FLESH AND THE DEVIL," by Laurence Cowen. Everett and Co., Limited. 1s. nett.

A very ably written version in story form of the author's well-known melodrama of the same name, which has had and is still having so successful a career both on the stage and on the screen. The book is well produced, and is, unquestionably, one of the biggest shillingsworth of "thrills" obtainable. The dedication appears to us in somewhat questionable taste.

"LES LAMPES A ARC," by E. Kress. Charles Mendel, Paris. 1 fr. 25.

This excellent little work represents the eleventh of the series of conferences on cinematography organised by the Syndicat des Auteurs et Gens de Lettres. It is an exhaustive treatise on the subject of arc lamps, including those used for projection purposes, for studio lighting and for illumination of theatre exteriors. The subject is dealt with in a clear and authoritative manner, and there are numerous diagrams, tables, etc. The only thing lacking in the work is an index, the addition of which would prove an advantage.

NORTHERN NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Never before has there been in Newcastle-upon-Tyne such a large gathering of military as took part in the church parade to St. Nicholas' Cathedral in celebration of Empire Day, and it was an event which possessed great historical value, and as such was worthy of being recorded by the modern historian, the cinematograph. Both Messrs. Henderson, of the North of England Film Bureau, and Messrs. Gaumont secured excellent films of the event from good positions, and these were in great demand at the principal picture theatres in the city, where they were a strong attraction throughout the week. The Newcastle public dearly love topical pictures, and particularly so when they have a local touch about them, as these had, and no small amount of interest is taken in going to see exhibitions of this character with the idea of trying to pick out one's friends or maybe one's self on the screen. "The Derby," too, was another good topical, and many went to see this production at the theatres where it was put on in the second half of the week.

It requires something really good and fetching to fill the houses on the warm, summery evenings, such as we have been having in the North for the past few weeks, but the task was easily accomplished by Messrs. Baker Brothers at the Gaiety, in Nelson Street. But then, they had the something good in "The Necklace of Rameses," which had a most popular reception. Added to that was "Out of Evil Cometh Good" and "Alcohol: Its Preparation and Uses." A coloured film of the valley of the Yonte, and "A Flirt's Mistake," together with the "Topical Budget," completed the bill for the first half of the week, whilst in the revised programme "Mother" and "Life" were the leading features. There was also a variety turn, so that visitors to this place of amusement got very good value for their money and thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

The use of the Gaiety Theatre was kindly granted by Messrs. Baker Brothers last Thursday for the purposes of a complimentary benefit performance for Mr. J. C. Scatter, a well-known and highly thought of Tyneside comedian, who has toured some of the local halls in preference to the music-halls since the pictures and varieties sprung into such favour. A good show of pictures was put on, and items were contribted by a large number of artistes who were performing in the city and district halls. This was not only a great compliment to Mr. Scatter, but also an evidence of the good feeling that exists amongst those who are associated in the work in the cinematograph halls and theatres. The theatre was crowded in all parts, and the function was gratifying and successful in every respect.

At the Brighton and at the Olympia the top-liners were "True Irish Hearts," "On the Minute," and "An American Citizen."—The Queen's Hall's leading lights were "Classmates," "A Daughter of the East," Out of Evil Cometh Good" and "A Romance of the North-West," with the "Pathé Gazette" and "Warwick Chronicle."—The Empire Cinema had starred "On the Minute," "A Trip Through North Wales" and "The Story of the Willow Pattern."—A very successful week's run was experienced at the Grainger, with "The Life of Verdi"; at the Newcastle Picture House there was "The Bo'sun's Mate" (W. W. Jacobs) all the week, and a fine selection of first-run films; and at the Westgate Picture House "In the Fall of '64" and "Adventure of Copper Beeches" were the principal dramatic films. "The Derby" was common to them all.

The cosy little Union Road Theatre, the Bamborough, has lately had a run of good films, which have had the desired result of attracting large audiences. "Through Fire and Water," "In the Shadow of the Mountains" and "The Traitress" were among last week's features.—The popularity of the wild animal film has become firmly established, and the several productions in which the denizens of the forest fill a prominent part never fail to draw in Newcastle. At the Sun, Long Row, "Lord of the Jungle," was a particularly good booking, and in the same programme were "Reinstated," "The Filly" and "The Jewel."

The Grand Palace, in Condercum Road, Benwell, owned and managed by Councillor John Grantham, meets with great favour from the people in that district, and there is little cause for complaint in the amount of business done. Mr. Grantham sustains the public interest in his place of entertainment by reason of the class of picture he screens, and he does his best to gratify the desire of his patrons for the long story film. Last week he put on the screen "Give Us This Day- —" for the first three evenings, and followed that up with "Spartacus." Added to these two particularly fine features were dramas and comedies of shorter length but of commanding interest, and the show was in every way a most enjoyable one and very satisfying to those who supported it.

At a time when the whole world was sorrowing for the loss of the intrepid English aviator, Gustav Hamel, pictures dealing with the science of aviation had a pecular appeal to the public taste. "Lieut. Daring and Air Scouting" promised something of this nature, and it was shown at the Minerva, Byker Bank, to full houses, along with an excellent assortment of leading productions.

The passing reference to the loss of Hamel calls to mind the great initiative shown by the up-to-date film producers. As soon as the rumour reached Newcastle last week that Hamel had been landed at South Shields in a sailing vessel, cinematograph photographers were dispatched in specially hired motor cars by Mr. Jennings, the manager of the Newcastle Branch of the Gaumont Company, and by Messrs. Henderson's North of England Film Bureau, but unfortunately it was only a rumour, and one that apparently had no foundation in fact.

Messrs. Henderson secured the exclusive rights to cinematograph the proceedings at the annual Whitsuntide Meet of the North-Eastern cyclists, held at Barnard Castle, and their representative was present over the week-end and secured some excellent pictures typical of this happy gathering. It is a film that will be bound to bring the people to see it, and it is being freely booked by local halls. The cyclists contemplate giving a "cyclists' night" at some of the halls where the film is showing, when they will turn up in force and endeavour to bring their friends with them. An added incentive to exhibitors to screen the film, surely!

THE SOUTHAMPTON SHOWS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Excellent holiday programmes have been submitted this week at all the local halls, and the anticipation of good business has been generally realised. Messrs. Hood and Bacon still command a big following at the Portswood Palladium. In addition to providing the best of pictures, they have spared no pains to make their hall comfortable, and the installation has now been completed by a patent multi-bladed electric fan, capable of changing the atmosphere of the hall nine times in an hour. One of the films to be screened at the Palladium is "The Story of the Willow Pattern." One of the tips which Mr. Urquhart has picked up during his travels in the East is that of perfuming the curtains, and this practice is regularly pursued at the Palladium and helps to keep the hall fresh. Among the Whit Monday attractions were "Where is Colletti?" and "Child of the Desert." On Sunday "The Great Leap" was filmed, and "True Irish Hearts" headed the bill during the week-end.

A capital holiday picture was shown by Mr. Kuntze at the Scala, St. Denys, this week in "The Boomerang," and "Her Lover's Honour" has been secured for to-day (Thursday). "Love's Triumphs" and "In the Clutches of the Ku Klux Klan" are booked for next week.—At the Shirley Electric Mr. Massey has been featuring "The Battle of Elderbush Gulch," and "Orders Under Seal" went equally well under the direction of Mr. Apperley at the Carlton on Monday. "Old St. Paul's" was the leading film at the latter hall during the week-end, while "Miriam, the Gipsy" and "The Golden Chords" start to-day (Thursday). Mr. Apperly, by the way, accepted a swimming challenge by Young Britt, of Wolverhampton, last week. The race took place in Southampton Water, over a 2-miles' course, and Mr. Apperly, who has done much swimming in South Wales and Australian waters, won a fast race by six minutes.

Mr. W. Buck is making the Atherby appear quite new again. The hall is being entirely redecorated, and as the result of a reseating arrangement the accommodation will be increased to about 700. Mr. Buck has certainly no reason to complain of bad houses, and his programmes are uniformly good. "The Winter's Tale" made a big hit during the week-end, and "True Irish Hearts" was shown on Monday, with a laughable Keystone comedy, "Troubles of a Flirt."

An exceptionally fine Russian drama, "The Black Spot," attracted attention at the Southampton Picture Palace last week, and it was followed by another good film in "The Eternal Barrier." On Sunday Mr. Lambert led off with "The Half Breed Scout" and "The Little Burglar." The holiday programme—an extra long one—included "The Tragedy of Ambition" and "Madam Destiny," while this week-end "The Staircase of Death" and "Stanton's Last Fling" are billed.—At the Standard Electric Mr. Turner did very good business with "A Stolen Inheritance" and "Master of the World" was screened as Monday's special. It was backed up by an excellent selection of smaller runs and will be followed to-day by "Under the Mask."

I found Mr. Lewis very well satisfied with the business at the Shirley Cinema, where "The Runaway Freight" and "The Reckoning" were very well received during the week-end. "On Secret Service" was shown on Sunday. The Bank Holiday feature was "The Open Door," backed up by some good comics, and the second programme this week contains another first-class film in "The Dungeon of Steel."

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

EREWHON (Carlisle).—The film was withdrawn from the market shortly after it had been announced. Consequently it has not been exhibited at any picture theatre, nor do we fancy that it will be in the future.

A.G.B. (Stoke Newington).—You are probably referring to the surgical films made by Dr. Doyen, of Paris. We believe they are in the possession of the Charles Urban Trading Company, Limited.

HORRIFIED (London, W.).—We believe there is a great deal of truth in what you say, but it is obviously very difficult to gain precise information on matters of this sort, and to take any action without more definite knowledge would inevitably prove futile.

L.M. (Liverpool).—The nearest foreign equivalent to "The Bioscope Annual" that we know of is the excellent Annuaire "Cinema," published by Charles Mendel, 118, rue d'Assas, Paris. You could make up a very good French mailing list from this.

S.R.T. (Hampstead).—The demonstration was postponed. Particulars will appear in this paper in due course.

Q. (Wandsworth).—As far as we know, no British agents have yet been appointed.

FIBS (BERLIN).—(1) We certainly have had no information of such an occurrence. He is surely a Gaumont not a Pathé artiste. (2) The Walturdaw Company, Limited, 46, Gerrard Street, W., who hold the exclusive rights, would doubtless be able to tell you. (3) Don't quite follow your question. Excessive haste in the action of a play is usually due to limitations of space and the inartistic practice of making films to measure. We quite agree with your remarks concerning the absurdly unrealistic fashion in which actors write letters in film plays. Doubtless they imitate the convention of the ordinary stage in this matter.

FELIX.—You might write to Zenith Films, Limited, Charing Cross House, 29A, Charing Cross Road, W.C., and also to Cunard Films, Limited, 234, Wood Street, Walthamstow, E. "Picture Play Photography" is now on sale, price 5s., or 5s. 6d. post free.

A Charming "Bioscope" Reader.

Bubbling over with vivacity and the possessor of a charming personality, Miss Funk is, indeed, as attractive as her photograph depicts her to be. An ardent reader of THE BIOSCOPE, Miss Funk is a member of the famous stock company of the Theâter au de Wien, Vienna, where she has appeared in many of Franz Lehar's world-renowned musical comedies. During the winter season she has been the leading star at the Revue Femina Bühne, and recently at the Jardin d'Hiver, Budapest. A clever moving picture artiste, she has taken important rôles in many Austrian and German productions, notably those of the Sascha Film Company, Vienna. But while her past efforts in that direction are quite noteworthy, it seems safe to say that a much more brilliant future awaits her in view of the fact that early next autumn Londoners will have an opportunity of seeing Fraulein Kate Funk under the management of no other than Mr. George Edwardes. The almost simultaneous "discovery" of the actress by the great London impresario and Mr. Lee Shubert, of New York, was due to her performances at a little carbaret show in the Austrian capital. The Revue Bühne is an all-star show, and curiously enough every star is a picture player; even the secretary has appeared in a number of picture plays.

Miss Funk has English blood in her veins, hence her extreme interest in the British film world.

"I am overjoyed at the prospect of visiting London," Miss Funk told our Continental correspondent, "and I'm awfully keen on seeing the London kinos and how they make films over there. I think the cinematograph is wonderful. Why, isn't it amazing to have the world for your stage and all the people in it as your spectators!"

"Why, yes," she added laughingly; "that's Shakespeare cinematographed!"

PLYMOUTH AND DISTRICT NOTES.

During last week the local picture palaces had a good week's run, the weather being of such a wintry character as to induce persons to again seek indoor amusement. I notice "Sixty Years a Queen" is revisiting the town for Whitsun week. It is being shown in the Plymouth Guildhall.

When I looked in at the Elite on Friday night, I found a splendid audience enjoying Mr. Rundle's delightful programme. "The Kissing Cup" was found additionally interesting in consequence of Miss Chrissie White, the heroine of the story, being a native of Plymouth. The picture was enthusiastically received, and "Mabel's Stormy Love Affair," another Keystone film, provided plenty of amusement, and altogether the films were excellent.

Mr. Knowles, at the de Luxe, regaled his patrons with a superb bill of fare. A film of great historical interest was "The Rose of Thebes," which was "exclusive" to this theatre. There were innumerable other enjoyable subjects, including "The Return of Jack Bellew," and "The Adventures and Hardships of an Arctic Expedition," the latter proving a very interesting film.

Over at Devonport the programmes were equally as entertaining as in the sister town, Mr. Boultwood, at the Electric, making a feature with "Falsely Accused." His other principal attractions were "The Ring and the Rajah," and the amusing "John Bunny Plays Golf."

HAPPENINGS AT HULL.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

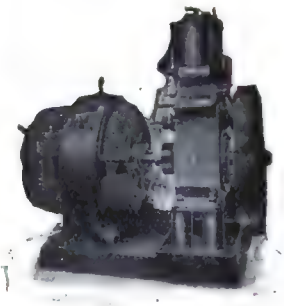
Once again the question of further restrictions as to the attendance of children at picture palaces has arisen at Hull, and has been considered by the Education Authority, who, however, decided that they could not take up certain suggestions made by the Hull Head Teachers' Association. Already the Hull exhibitors are saddled with very stringent restrictions as to their licences, one of these being that no child under the age of fourteen be allowed in any place where cinematograph exhibitions take place after 9 p.m. The Head Teachers' Association sent a resolution to the Education Committee asking them to consider the advisability of recommending the Licensing Committee to make it a condition in granting licences that no children under the age of sixteen should be admitted to any cinema after 6 o'clock in the evening, and that they should only be admitted to the afternoon performances on condition that purely educational programmes were submitted, altogether devoid of any suggestion of immorality or crime. The Education Committee informed the Head Teachers' Association that they were not able to take any further action in the matter, but at the same time they thanked the members of the Association for the interest they had shown.

That section of the community who are for ever talking about there being "too many picture palaces," and the "advisability of not increasing the evil," must have been greatly surprised with the response which has come to the management of the Strand and Tower Picture Palaces on the opening of these two halls this week. Already, in less than a week, they have proved the justification of their existence, but it must be acknowledged that time will reveal the truer case. So far as the Strand is concerned, it is interesting to note that at the two performances on the opening day, the Thursday before Whitsuntide, there were no fewer than 2,800 people present, and all expressed great appreciation of the care that had been used in fitting up the cinema in such a cosy manner. As to the very up-to-date building itself, a description will be given later. The programme on the opening day included "The Great Leap," "The Cape," "The Three Children," "Why Reginald Reformed," and others.

The Tower was also an instantaneous success. On Saturday, when an invitation performance was given, the luxurious cinema was crowded, and in this case also, much favourable comment was passed as to the pains that had been taken to provide for the comfort of patrons. The programme was an excellent one with "A Lady of Quality" as the "top-liner," and a number of other excellent subjects supporting. The actual opening to the public was on Whit-Monday. The Tower possesses features which will commend it to the picture-loving public, and it is safe to predict for it a successful future.

The Hessle Road Picture Palace, as I believe I have said before, is one of those places where there is always something going on, thanks to its very "live" manager Mr. Walter R. Nicholson. A large bill with the words "£10 for Whit" caught my eye the other day, and I soon learned that Mr. Nicholson was showing the Lucrative Film Company's nameless film, featuring Lunind the danseuse, in connection with which a competition is run, a prize of £10 being given to those submitting the most suitable title. The competition, so I am told, created a very lively interest. The H.R.P.P. screen has now been enlarged 2 ft. all round, and with a new extra-powerful lense which has been purchased, the picture compares very favourably with any I have seen. During the present week Mr. Nicholson has made a feature of "The Watch Dog of the Deep," a picture with a particular interest in West Hull, and "Fitzhugh's Ride." John Bunny also made one of his regular appearances, and there were a number of other films, including the popular "Pathé Gazette."

Mr. William Swan, of the Circus, I noticed on Saturday afternoon was very busy with his cine-camera at the annual carnival of the Newland Orphan Homes, where he was filming the many events which later in the week were shown at the Circus Picture House. Hull picture enthusiasts have learned to look to Mr. Swan for all the best topicals and he seldom, if ever, disappoints, for he is an expert with the motion picture camera.



"First every time" is a motto which Mr. William Morton might well adopt, for he knows well the advantage of going to a little extra expense in order to be early in the field with all the latest exclusives. Following "Chevalier de Maison Rouge" and "The Master Criminal," Mr. Tom Boyne (manager for Mr. Morton), has had "The Adventure of the Copper Beeches" and "Traitors to the King" at the Prince's Hall, and the response to his enterprise has been good. At the Holderness Hall, Mr. Wilkinson has had "On the Minute" and "Conscience" as the two top-liners.

Few cinema managers have received such popularity and earned such respect in so short a time as Mr. B. Firth, of the Eureka, Dairycoates. He is a man with a broad heart and mind, and a friend to the poor people; the amount of money he has been instrumental in raising for charity during the last eighteen months being considerable. He is esteemed by directors as well as patrons, and the former devoted a full evening this week entirely to Mr. Firth's benefit. The response from the public was little short of wonderful. By 6 in the evening, there was a long queue outside, and there were two "bumper" audiences. Two bands, the Dairycoates Silver Band and the West Hull Excelsior Band united and gave their services free, and the crowd outside was so large that the traffic was held up. The appearance of Mr. Firth on the balcony was the signal for loud cheers. Twenty-one local artistes gave their services gratuitously, and an unusual feature was that films were shown which had been lent by other exhibitors. During the evening Mr. Firth was presented by Mr. T. Lupton, on behalf of the directors, with a gold watch, inscribed: "Presented to Mr. B. Firth by the directors and staff of the Eureka Picture Palace in appreciation of his efforts during the time he has been manager of this hall." Mr. Firth feeling returned thanks, and the massed bands struck up "He's a jolly good fellow."

PARISIAN NOTES.

By JOHN CHER.

J. Demaria has registered the name of "Cinemafix," M. Bauche that of "Continental Film," and M. Delac "Salons Cinemas."

Gaumont's "Guignol" is the film of the week, the feature being billed at many cinemas apart from the Gaumont Theatre.

Monsieur Metz, of the Paris Vitagraph Company, spent Whitsun in London in the company of "Uncle" Smith.

Henri Bataille's famous play, "La Femme Nue," has been done in moving pictures, and the first exhibition in Paris will be given on June 6th at the Coliseé Cinema.

Pictures, pictures everywhere—that is the cry in Paris. The Jardin de Paris is this year an al fresco picture theatre.

The first film specially prepared for the education of policemen was shown in Paris last week. The pictures portrayed the way to seize an armed burglar, how to register fingerprints, and the methods to be employed in rescuing drowning people.

Herr Oesterreicher, the well-known Austrian film dealer, has been in Paris this week.

Monsieur Monat has returned from England, where he has secured many important features, including "The Midnight Wedding."

"La Tille du Garde-Chasse" is the title of the first Odeon film. The play from which the moving picture has been adapted was a great Ambigu Theatre success.

Monsieur Conus, one of THE BIOSCOPE'S old Paris friends, has been decorated with the Merit of France and Colonies.

The theatrical crisis is a very serious affair. But if the theatres are playing to dwindling receipts, the picture palaces are booming, and the film world has nothing to complain about. While most Paris cinemas are realising good profits, statistics show that at the present time only two theatres in the capital are making money.

TRAWLINGS FROM GRIMSBY.

(By Our Own Correspondent.)

Showing a new release, "Eastern Treachery," exclusively, the new Coliseum Theatre at Cleepes opened on Whit Saturday. The hall is a twice nightly one, matinée at 2.30 p.m., and the prices are 3d. and 6d. It is a very comfortable and attractive cinema.

Mr. W. Gregory, manager of the Hippodrome, has, I learn, secured a similar position at Plymouth. Mr. Gregory, who has been in Grimsby for some years, has made himself very popular with his patrons and all friends will wish him success and happiness in his new sphere. He was the recipient last week from the staff of the Hippodrome of a black ebony walking stick, suitably inscribed, while a dish and silver salver were presented to Mrs. Gregory. Mr. R. E. Couldstone handed over the articles and paid a tribute to the worth of Mr. and Mrs. Gregory.

When "The Brass Bottle" was shown at the Tivoli, Duncombe Street, the other week, Mr. J. H. Curry, the managing director of the Prince of Wales Theatre (legitimate), who is also managing director of the Tivoli, announced that the picturised version was likely to be the only one of the play that there would be an opportunity of witnessing in Grimsby. "The Old Curiosity Shop," "The Master Criminal" and "The Curse of War" have also been screened during the past fortnight at the Tivoli, where a Thursday matinée has been introduced.

The Gaiety, Wintringham Road, to which I paid a visit the other night, seems to be going along nicely under its new control. A continuous performance from 6 p.m. has substituted the old one "house" from 7.30 to 10.15 system. Recent features have been "His Last Fight," "The Tragedy of the Court of Milan," "Britannicus" and "The Disaster at Black Eagle Mine," while Mr. Blackman, the manager, has several interesting attractions for the near future.

Other bills have included "The Staircase of Death," "'Neath the Lion's Paw," "The Cage," and the famous "Parsifal" at the Picture Playhouse; "A Dare-devil Rescuer," "The Isle of Adventure," "A Daughter of the Hills" and "Under the Black Flag" at the Paragon; "The King of Seven Dials," "She Stoops to Conquer" and "Kronstadt" at the Strand and Lyric; "The Heart of Woman" and "Local Colour" at the Royal (Cleethorpes), and "The Lure of London," "Detective Daring," "A Mother's Devotion" and "The Hand of the Law" at the Empire (Cleethorpes).

CINE-EDUCATION.

At a meeting of the Barnsley Education Authority last week, the Mayor, on behalf of a cinematograph firm, extended an invitation to the Committee and to teachers of the schools to attend a special matinée show of certain good educational films, in order to judge whether they would serve a useful purpose. Councillor Walker said moving pictures had undoubtedly come to stay, and the invitation was worth consideration. The time was not far distant when films would be more generally used for educational purposes. Alderman Raley said he knew no reason why they should not see these pictures. Alderman Rideal suggested that the cinema might be used as a means of popularising evening classes. It was eventually decided to refer the matter to the School Management Committee.

Sunderland and Wearside Sidelights.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

For many reasons I am glad to say Sunderland managers do not intend to accept the threatened restriction of children from "second houses" lying down. At the moment the matter is the topic in local cinema circles. The chairman of the Watch Committee, as I have already mentioned in THE BIOSCOPE, has promised to "seriously consider" a suggestion that no children under sixteen years of age shall be allowed to attend a cinema performance after 9 o'clock unless accompanied by their parents or an adult, and now I learn on excellent authority that the general feeling amongst the members of the Watch Committee is in favour of attempting to decline to renew all cinema licences unless managers agree to this stipulation. I have made it my business during the last few days to move amongst local managers who are naturally perturbed at the seriousness of the situation. Not one of them, as you can but expect, is in favour of the Council's proposal, and opinions as to what are the best steps to take in the matter of meeting the position are being actively canvassed. So far no formal meeting has been arranged, but at least two managers have suggested such a gathering. The general feeling is, of course, strongly in favour of joint action, but so far there appears to be no one really ready to take it upon himself to convene a meeting.

In my chat with managers I hear very strong opinions expressed. One gentleman said, "If the curfew is to be rung, it must apply to every form of gathering at which juveniles are present, such as the theatres, the music-halls, bands of hope, the Garrison Field Fair, etc. It will be a large order for the police, much bigger than the Watch Committee think." It would, he thought, be altogether unfair to put the onus of the whole matter on the picture house manager. Mr. J. Raymond Waller, manager of the Millfield Picture House, is quite an authority on the topic. Juveniles are a great thing with him, so much so that he has to run double matinées on Saturday afternoon, whilst at the moment he is making arrangements to give a couple of thousand or more children a picnic into the country. He pointed out to me how utterly absurd the proposed regulation was in certain respects. Why, he asked, should picture house managers have to take over responsibilities which were really the parents? Children, too, were much safer in the picture house than knocking about the streets.

"Let No Man Escape" was the film Mr. Hilton Fox "starred" at the Wheat Sheaf Hall at Monkwearmouth last week, and if the splendid attendances tell anything, few of the pit and shipyard men seemed to have escaped the call which this popular hall so steadily makes upon them. Some stirring Western dramas were also shown.

Mr. George Downing, now that he has got the Invicta at Seaham Harbour well under weigh, has closed down the Cambridge at South Hetton. The proprietors of the Grand, Ryhope, have, I hear, secured an excellent site for a new hall at Hetton-le-Hole.

Lovers of Dickens crowded loyally into the de Luxe, Sunderland, last week to witness the screening of "David Copperfield." It went so well that Mr. Fred Hudspeth is seriously considering putting on more of this kind of picture, and I am really glad that his enterprise was so heartily appreciated. This luxurious little hall is generally well filled—a compliment to both the programme and the music.

So much progress is being made with the new Roker Palace that people are beginning to talk about it, which is just what Mr. Thomas Johnson wants. The roof was being put on last week, and there seems every prospect of the hall being opened within the specified date. That Mr. Johnson knows where to "hit 'em" is shown in the fact that he invited Charlie Thomson, captain of the famous League Football team, to become resident manager of the new hall. Charlie, who is one of the most popular men in the North, thought seriously over the offer, but, at the instance, I understand, of the directors of the club, declined it. He would certainly have proved a good "catch," but football demands all his attention.

The spacious and comfortable Picture House in High Street West continues to draw big houses. Last week "The Pendulum of Justice" drew them in until Thursday afternoon, when another of the Sherlock Holmes series, "The Copper Beeches," became the lodestone.

Chancing to meet Mr. Warren and asking him how the Star at Easington Lane progressed, he said, "Very well, considering the fine weather." From what he told me the pitmen seem to be getting splendid fare, particularly on Sunday nights, these shows ranking perhaps the biggest of the week as far as attendances go. He had "The Black Sheep" and "Where the Road Forks" until Thursday, when "The Diamond Makers" and "The Line Up" took the more prominent positions on the programme.

Mr. Waller is always introducing something good at the Millfield Picture House, either on the screen and stage or "in front." Following "Was She Justified" he had "The Death Sign at High Noon" last week, and opened this Monday with "The Murdoch Trial." Amongst his bookings I was glad to hear was "the Navy" series, which should make the Millfield still more popular amongst its shipyard people, and "The Convent Gate," "King Charles" and "A Wrecker of Lives." Besides these I was interested to hear that Mr. Waller has started a variety agency, the "Central" he call it, which is proving a decidedly good thing.

There was a pleasing function at the Kino Theatre, Jarrow, the other evening, Mr. Dixon Scott, who, as I mentioned last week, is retiring from the proprietorship in favour of Messrs. Thornton and Tindle, being made the recipient of a gold watch from the staff and several friends. Mr. Chatt, the stage manager, was entrusted with the "handing over" part of the ceremony—and he did it well.

Much to my regret I hear that my friend, Mr. John Richardson, proprietor of the Central and Star Hall and lessee of the West End Cinema, has met with a very serious accident, he having the misfortune to fall down the steps leading to the cellar of the Cinema. Upon being picked up it was at once seen that his condition was serious, and he was conveyed with all haste to the Monkwearmouth and Southwick Hospital, where it was ascertained that the base of his skull was fractured. Latest inquiries show, I am glad to state, that his condition is somewhat improved, though he is still in a state of semi-consciousness.

Speaking at Sunderland last week, Dr. Hensley Henson, Dean of Durham, likened the spirit of the American millionaire who indulged in monstrous and senseless extravagances to working people who "spoiled their eyesight and squandered their leisure" at cinematograph shows! It all showed, he contended, how frivolous was their view of life!

THE PREVENTION OF CORRUPTION ACT.

Before Judge Rentoul, at the Central Criminal Court on May 27th, the hearing was concluded of the charges against William Watson, film dealer, trading as the Marvel Film Company, Greek Street, W., who surrendered to his bail and pleaded not guilty to an indictment under the Prevention of Corruption Act, which alleged that he had given gifts to employees of Pathé Frères Cinema, Limited.

Mr. J. P. Valetta and Mr. Roland Oliver appeared for the prosecution, while the defendant was represented by Mr. Marshall Hall, K.C., and Mr. Abinger.

The prosecution alleged that the defendant, in addition to his business at Greek Street, owned a picture theatre at Brixton. He made up programmes, which he hired out to picture theatres, and for that purpose borrowed certain films from the prosecutors. It was alleged that he did not return the films to Messrs. Pathé Frères at the due date, and that he gave money to certain employees of the prosecutors. The defendant dealt with section "C" of Messrs. Pathé's film hiring department. At the material dates three men, named E. A. Saunders, E. Chambers and A. C. Lloyd, were engaged in that section. They were all charged under the Prevention of Corruption Act. The first two were dealt with at the police court, while Lloyd was bound over at the Central Criminal Court. An employé of the defendant, named Arthur Mackay, who also traded at Euston Road, was charged, and pleaded guilty; sentence on him was postponed. It was also alleged that the defendant had hired out films to exhibitors which belonged to the prosecutors, and which ought never to have been in his possession.

Sergeant Leach said that when arrested Watson said, "This is terrible; it will ruin me in my business. This is a Trade prosecution on behalf of Messrs. Pathé Frères."

The defendant, William Watson, gave evidence on his own behalf. Originally, he said, he was a professional cyclist and had held world's records. Finally, he entered the film trade, and had since traded as the Marvel Cinematograph Company. He hired films for his own theatre at Brixton and also lent them to exhibitors in all parts of the country. He first had dealings with Pathé Frères last August, when he hired "Nigger Jim" from them. Prior to the present case he had never seen the documents known as dockets which the prosecutors used. He had 2,000 to 3,000 tins in stock. He also held a large stock of films, and bought many at auction sales and from dealers in the Trade. Messrs. Pathé Frères never sold films but only hired them out. The witness added that he only purchased second-hand films. When films were borrowed from the prosecutors they were not very particular as to the date when they were returned. Witness never had the films in his own custody, and sometimes never saw them. It was the duty of his employees, after films had been used, to return them to the manufacturers from whom they were borrowed. The hired films, however, sometimes got mixed up with his own. They should have been kept separately.

Mr. Marshall Hall: Saunders says that on one occasion you gave him 10s.; have you any recollection of that?

Witness: I don't remember it.

If you did give him 10s. what would it be for?—For services rendered, but I have no recollection of it.

Is it true to suggest that you asked Saunders to allow you to keep films. He says he had as much as £10 from you; was that true?—It is false. He added that if all the films in question in that case had been paid for they would not have cost him more than £10 to hire them. There was no arrangement between him and Saunders by which he could keep films for a longer period than he had hired them. He himself did not know that the films hired from Messrs. Pathé Frères were not returned at their due dates. Sometimes films were not returned at their due dates, but that was owing to mistakes made by his employees. He had never tried to defraud the prosecutors, and his instructions were that films should be returned to the firms from whom they were borrowed at their due date. The defendant further stated that Mackay had been employed by him. He did not know that Mackay had been carrying on a business for himself in the Euston Road. Witness had never heard that Mackay was lending out films.

Mr. Marshall Hall referred to a film known as "Black Diamonds," and the witness said that it was untrue for Saunders to say that he (Watson) had bought the film. He never bought any film from Saunders, and he did not know that Mackay had been loaning out that film.

The jury found the defendant guilty, and he was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the second division, and ordered to pay £100 towards the costs of the prosecution. Mackay was bound over.

WITNESSED AT WORKSOP.

Business at the four picture theatres in Worksop is being maintained at a very satisfactory level, and programmes have never reached such a high standard of excellence as at the present time. Mr. A. J. Ashley did big business the first three days of last week with "The Miracle," and large audiences were delighted with this fine production. He also featured "The Lure of Gold," "Heir of the Lagarderes," "Cry of the Blood" and "The Filly."—At the Royal Electric, Mr. Gibson's principal items were "Hook and Hand" and "The Great Leap." "The Murdoch Trial" and "Heir to a Million" topped the bill last week, and the "Gaumont Graphic" is always a popular item.—An excellent collection can always be relied upon at the new Worksop Art Gallery Cinema, and Mr. Andrew did well with the "Footballer's Honour," "The Moonshiner's Last Stand" and "Three Mile Limit." "Brennan of the Moor" was last week's exclusive, backed by "Her Indian Guardian" and "The Great Circus Fire."

OLDHAM NEWS & NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

There is no more live man in the cinema world than Mr. Fred Field at the King's, for there is scarcely any big subject issued but what he secures it. One of his biggest successes has been "David Copperfield." Well shown, the picture gripped the attention of the audiences at each performance. A stirring Irish drama, "The Heart of Kathleen," "The Old Veteran," and a unique film, "The Entente Cordiale," featuring Max Linder and the late Harry Fragson, were also great attractions last week.

At the Palladium Mr. Arthur Watson had for his principal subject "The Cry of the Child." Apart from the star picture the audiences were much amused with the antics of "Mac and Jake in Society," "When Poorluck Minds the Shop" and "Tweedledum's Stick." During the last week "The Curse of War" was the star, while many other films were included in an excellent programme.

Some very fine pictures have been screened at the Empire the last fortnight, "'Neath the Lion's Paw," "The Vavasour Ball" and "How Motion Pictures are Made" proving very popular.

The Star and Osborne have had attractive programmes, the principal pictures the last fortnight being "The Prodigal Son," "Golden Beetle," "The Informer" and "Water War." The Popular, with Mr. Schofield in charge, has featured "The Murdock Trial," "Golden Heart," "Fatal Three," "Tell-tale Photograph," "'Neath the Lion's Paw," "Black Spot," "Lieut. Daring and the Thames Coiners."

At the Gem business has been good, with "Four Dare-devils," "Orders Under Seal" and "Old Maniselle's Secret."—Across at the Imperial "On Secret Service," "House of Fear," "'Neath the Lion's Paw," and "Tragedy in the Clouds" have drawn good business.

Will Carr, at the Premier, despite the hot weather, had no complaints to make and his patrons had no cause to grumble at the recent good fare he has provided. "Damon and Pythias," "The Indian and the Child," "Schnitz, the Tailor" and "Ticket of Leave Man," the latter being a special favourite.

Always on the look-out for something good, the Hippodrome secured "Lord of the Jungle," and the audience were loud in their praise of the film. "A child of the Desert" and "Girl at the Lunch Counter" were included in good programmes.—At the Electraceum some excellent pictures have been shown, including "Open Door," "Murdock Trial" and "Gamble for Life."—At the Colosseum excellent programmes have "pulled them in." Recent "big" things include "The House of Fear," "On the Minute" and "Some Nerve." Brown's also had excellent programmes, "The Runaway Princess," "Hearts of Women," "Werner's Love Song" and "The Cuckoo" being the chief items.

MOLIERE: MASTER PLAYWRIGHT.

A very interesting release will shortly be made by the Eclair Film Company in a film version of Molière's great comedy, "The Mock Doctor," or "Le Medecin Malgre Lui." By common consent Molière is regarded as one of the greatest writers of comedies the world has ever seen, and "The Mock Doctor" is accredited to be his masterpiece. This, therefore, is no ordinary release, but one that will be regarded by all lovers of the cinema as an event of real and great importance.

OUR POSTER GALLERY.

The Famous Players Film Company, Limited, have prepared a very striking and artistic six-sheet poster which can be used with any film featuring Miss Mary Pickford ("Little Mary," as she is familiarly called by her innumerable admirers). Admirably printed, the artist has secured an excellent likeness of Miss Pickford, and the poster should be in great demand. "Little Mary" appears in "A Good Little Devil," "In the Bishop's Carriage," and "Caprice" (all three productions being handled by the Walturdaw Company, Limited), and "Hearts Adrift" and "Tessibel of the Storm Country" (Messrs. Walker's World's Films, Limited), from both of whom these posters can be obtained.

ENTERPRISE, MANCHESTER.

Mr. B. C. Gibbs, of the Enterprise Cinema Supplies Company, Manchester, informs us that he has secured the services of Mr. S. B. Hale, late of the Gaumont Company, who will act as outdoor representative of the firm.

PICTURES IN IRELAND.

By "PADDY."

Mr. Alf. Thomas conducts the destinies of the Picture Theatre, Academy Street, Navan, in the best style, and everything goes with a decided swing. Mr. Thomas has had considerable experience in the picture business, having acted as manager in Newtownards for the Irish Electric Palaces, Limited. He also opened the New Princess in Newtownards Road, Belfast. Mr. Thomas always seems to get hold of a fine programme, a few of his leading films being "In the Midst of the Jungle," "A Prisoner of the Harem," and "A Leader of Men."

Mr. Norman Whitten, who is conducting the General Film Supply, has found it necessary to remove to more spacious premises in 17, Great Brunswick Street, Dublin. He has had the premises equipped with dark-rooms and drying-rooms fitted with the latest and best machinery. There thus will be always the means at hand to complete a "topical" at the shortest possible notice, and this is a department of the film business in which Mr. Whitten specialises to a great extent. A very handsome showroom has also been made for the exhibition of the latest projectors and other apparatus. The telephone of the new premises is No. 2444, and I feel sure that Mr. Whitten will welcome all his old friends at his new address. I wish him, at all events, the best of luck in his venture, and I trust that he will be extremely successful in all he undertakes, and if hard work and commonsense are valuable assets, Mr. Whitten will "make good."

I went round the other evening to see the new picture theatre in Phibsboro', and particularly did I admire the "sunrise and sunset" system of lighting, which was concealed round the walls of the building. The building holds, roughly, 600, and the tip-ups are in Rose Barri shade, the carpets being of a darker colour. The harmonising effect is thus very beautiful. The balcony, to which admission is covered by the nimble shilling, runs in a wide curve, and has a splendid "rake." Alderman J. J. Farrell acts as managing director, and Mr. John King is also a director, while his brother manages the theatre. The principal film being screened when I called was "Lieut. Rose and the Sealed Orders," and it was followed with intense interest by a packed house. "Bunny's Mistake" and "The Vanishing Cracksman" were also excellent films.

While on the subject of Phibsboro' I might mention also that the new theatre—about 50 yds. from the present one—will shortly be finished, and will, I believe, seat about 1,200. The furnishing is being done by Messrs. Anderson, Stanford and Ridgeway, the heating by Messrs. Harden, the fibrous plastering, etc., by Messrs. Rome, and Messrs. Squire are responsible for the erection of the building, which, I may say in advance, is of a very imposing nature. Mr. F. A. Sparling is the proprietor of the new theatre.

Mr. Walter McNamara, who has founded the McNamara Feature Film Company, is a wealthy Irish-American. He has been in Ireland taking scenes, and I learn that he is coming again. Mr. McNamara has certainly led a varied life, having been engineer on a schooner, builder of Otis elevators, pantomime comedian with Wilkie Bard, editor of a newspaper, politician, and a founder of the Fabian Society.

Mr. Cathal McGarvey, ever mindful of his patrons, secured the film of the Wells-Blake fight, and did a roaring business while it was being screened. Other films on his programme at the Phœnix Picture Palace included "Love or a Throne," "The Invisible Hand," and "Thro' the Centuries."—At the Grand Cinema, Dublin, the exclusive film, "The Human Torpedo," was screened last week, and packed houses resulted. The Vivaphone is now an attraction at this cosy theatre, and other films I noticed were "The Price of Fame" and "The Tale of the Lonely Coast." Mr. Kay continues to conduct this house in first-class manner.

The Cosy Cinema, Dublin, also had on a fight picture last week, entitled "Jack Johnson v. Markusson." This film was shown by arrangement with the Gerrard Film Company.—At the Grafton Cinema the W. W. Jacobs series of films continues to attract attention, and Mr. Bell has plenty to do looking after the beautiful theatre under his control.—Captain Ahearne has been showing some fine films at the Dame Street house, his best being, in my opinion, "The Staircase of Death," "The Runaway Princess," and "A Message of the Sea."—At the Rotunda Mr. Ernest Jameson has been screening "On the Minute," "The Eternal Duel," and "Jane Eyre." Other films included "A Child of the Desert" and "The Calling of Jim Burton."

WORLD OF FINANCE.

The following information has been specially compiled for THE BIOSCOPE, and includes a Register of New Companies, Mortgages and Charges, Winding-up Petitions and Orders, County Court Judgments, Reports of Financial Cases, etc., etc.

All inquiries respecting financial matters must be addressed to the Editor, and the envelope marked "Financial."

ACTION AGAINST MOTOGRAPH FILM COMPANY, LIMITED.

On May 28th, in the King's Bench Division, Mr. Justice Avory had before him an action by Mr. S. T. Cohan, of Greencroft Gardens, Hampstead, against the Motograph Film Company, Limited, of Upper St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

Mr. Givein represented the plaintiff, and said he did not think there was any appearance by the defendants. Plaintiff brought this action to recover £466 15s. 2d., which he said he had paid for the defendants under a guarantee in March last.

Plaintiff gave evidence as to having paid the money, and produced a copy of the guarantee. Defendants had not repaid him.

His lordship gave judgment for plaintiff for the amount claimed.

CONTINENTAL FILM COMPANY.

In the Chancery Division on May 22nd Mr. Justice Astbury heard a motion in the case of Stevens v. the Continental Film Company.

Counsel for plaintiff said he moved for the appointment of a receiver, and the company did not appear. The company, which was a private one, was formed in October, 1913, with a capital of £1,000 in £1 shares, 400 of which were issued. There were only two shareholders, who were the sole directors—a Mr. Stevens and a Mr. Goldgraber. Immediately after the incorporation of the company it borrowed from the plaintiff, who is the wife of Mr. Stevens, a sum of £300.

His Lordship: There is nothing but liabilities to receive apparently.

Counsel: It is to avoid the liabilities encroaching on the assets more than can be helped that the receiver is wanted. We wish to appoint Mr. Stevens as receiver, who does not ask for salary but merely wishes to protect the assets.

His Lordship appointed Mr. Stevens as receiver on security being given within fourteen days.

PICTURE PALACE ADVERTISEMENTS.

In the Shoreditch County Court, before his Honour Judge Smyly, K.C., Joseph Mordecai, of 195, Lower Clapton Road, N.E., sued W. H. White, of 14, Chingford Road, Walthamstow, a house-furnisher, to recover £3 5s. alleged by plaintiff to be the charge for twenty-six weeks' advertisement on a slide at the Markhouse Electric Theatre from August 26, 1913.

Mr. Whitton appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. A. A. Robinson for the defendant.

Mr. Hill, formerly a canvasser in the employ of the plaintiff, an advertisement contractor, proved the contract with the defendant, which was produced.

In cross-examination the witness admitted that the slides were 5s. a week each, but if divided were 3s. a half. Mr. Hill called on Messrs. Charrington and Co., the coal merchants of Leyton, and saw Mr. Vickery, who said that he would take one slide on the understanding that half was taken by someone. He then saw Mr. White, who said he would have an advertisement as to furnishing the home, half a slide, from Mr. Vickery. He took the order, which was never intended for Mr. Mordecai, and gave it to Mr. Vickery.

Mr. Robinson: I will not go into the question of the slide being bad, defective, wrong and useless, and submit that ends the case; my client had no contract with the plaintiff.

Judge Smyly: Has Vickery paid for the whole slide?

Mr. Robinson: No, but he has been sued.

Mr. Whitton: He has never been sued.

Mr. Robinson: He is here, and says he has. He says the action was withdrawn and I say there is an end of this case.

Judge Smyly: I don't see that you need go further as the Vickery contract covers both. There will be a verdict for the defendant, and as it has been adjourned there will be two days' costs.

Bankruptcy.

Accounts have now been filed in the matter of the New Manchester Theatre, Limited, 22, Quay Street, Manchester, showing the deficiency of £41,639 18s. The company attributed its failure, among other causes, to insufficient capital upon its formation, and the subsequent inability to obtain sufficient additional capital, rendered necessary by the increased cost of erecting the theatre, the change in the public taste visible in its preference for cinematograph shows, etc., rather than for stage plays, the publication of the financial difficulties of the company, and the failure to secure the services of the class of companies they hoped to secure. As to the soundness of those views the Official Receiver states he is not in a position to question. He is, however, inclined to think that the most potent cause of the failure is the inadequacy of the working capital. He considers that the directors ought to have realised that for some reason or other the public were not subscribing for shares in sufficient numbers to provide capital for the erection of a theatre likely to cost £26,000, to say nothing of the necessity for the provision of a sufficient sum for working capital and the defraying of yearly rent charges of nearly £900 a year, apart from the ordinary working expenses of a theatre, and he cannot by feel that the directors went forward with the promotion with the knowledge that the company's resources were inadequate. The Official Receiver also states that there is no doubt that the Company's financial difficulties have had a two-fold adverse effect. In the first place the public has been reluctant to patronise a place of amusement which apparently was on the downgrade, and in the second place the best touring companies were disposed to hold aloof as they realised that their share of the bookings might be rather small. These two influences have naturally reacted on each other. The yearly staff expenses appear to have been very heavy, —viz, general manager £520, resident manager £200, acting manager £156, secretary £200, general clerk £91; a total of £1,167. The services of a general manager were dispensed with on October 2, 1913, and an action is still pending with regard to his claim for breach of contract. The opinion of the Official Receiver is that a further inquiry is necessary into the promotion of the company and its dealings.

The public examination of Gordon Fletcher Hewitt (trading as the Hewitt Film Producing Company), 38, Great Windmill Street, Shaftesbury Avenue, London, late 36, Spring Gardens, Manchester, and formerly 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, Charing Cross, London, was fixed to be held on May 22nd at the Court House, Quay Street, Manchester, but as the first meeting of the creditors was not yet concluded the examination was adjourned. The debtor was present at the last meeting of creditors and applied for an adjournment of the meeting in order that he might submit a proposal, his gross liabilities, according to the statement of affairs filed by him, being £1,565 6s. and his deficency £1,060. He attributed his failure to lack of capital, interest on loans, expenses in production of films, and failure to exploit same, and to losses in under-estimating the cost of films.

TEES-SIDE TOPICS.

The continued popularity of Mr. Sydney Thornton's picture-play season at the Opera House, Middlesbrough, is now assured. Last week "The Black Spot" was the feature film, and it was well supported by "The Bo'sun's Mate." Pictures of the Derby shown during the latter part of the week attracted considerable attention.—At the Hippodrome the unusual plot of "King, Detective, in Formula 7, 8, 9" proved an interesting topic, while "The New Stenographer" evoked roars of laughter.—"Saved from a Living Death," "His Indian Nemesis," and "The Eternal Duel were three powerful dramas in a star programme shown at the Grand Electric, where the orchestral music adds greatly to the evening's enjoyment.

Films showing scenes at the Stockton railway accident were presented at the Royal Cinema, Stockton. "Black Nissen" and "The Tudor Princess" were two interesting films.—A sensational attraction at the Empire was "The Flames of Vengeance." An amusing skit by Pimple, "The Battle of Gettysownback" and "Out of the Depths" were two favourite films.—"The Mystery of the Three Faces" was accorded a capital reception at the Globe, where "The Convent Gate" and "The Rattlesnake" were also exhibited.

"David Garrick" was shown at Darlington for the first time at the Empire. A fine drama. "Master of the World" was an interesting film.—The management of the Court Kinema and the Arcade Cinema have secured the exclusive rights in the district for "The Witch of Salem."

A slight infringement of his cinematograph licence resulted in Mr. Charles Lewis, lessee of the Globe Palace, Stockton, being fined £2, and 10s. costs, at Stockton on Thursday. The rules include a clause that a programme of the performance should be sent to the superintendent of the police before 4 p.m. each Monday and Thursday. Mr. Lewis said that it was purely a case of forgetfulness on the part of the man whose duty it was to send the programme.

Superintendent James said that he had done his best to avoid the proceedings but the programme had never come to hand at the proper time since the licence was issued. Mr. Lewis had been cautioned by an officer and the witness had spoken to the manager about the matter but with no result. The programme had been sometimes two days late and had never arrived on the right day.

Mr. Lewis explained the difficulty of forwarding a list of the films so soon as there was always a doubt as to whether the films would arrive, but the magistrates stated that they took a serious view of the matter.

NEWARK JOTTINGS.

Mr. Wheeler, manager of the Barnbygate Kinema, continues to provide his patrons with particularly fine programmes. The music is first-class, while the seating accommodation can only be described as luxurious in every way. It is only to be expected that large audiences show their appreciation. Last week-end great business was realised from "Sixty Years a Queen," and there was a special performance on Sunday. Mr. Wheeler's latest successes have been "Old St. Paul's" and "Napoleon."—Mr. Boardman caters in splendid style at the Corn Exchange, and has recently featured "The Snake Dancer," "The Days of Six Nations" and "Victims of Villainy."

EAST ANGLIAN NOTES.

Both, or rather all, parties in the recent by-election at Ipswich made use of the cinematograph, and with good results. Crowded audiences assembled at the meetings of the candidates, and—if I may be allowed to say so—appeared more interested in "the pictures" than in the speeches!

"Antony and Cleopatra" proved an unbounded attraction at the Coliseum and the Empire, Great Yarmouth, last week. Both houses advertised the great picture in a striking manner, and the audiences were loud in their praise of the production.—The Gem featured "The Wastrel," a very popular subject, while "A Romance of Old Brittany" appealed very strongly to the Film-land audiences.

The Norwich Electric is one of the most widely patronised theatres in the district. Carefully managed by Mr. G. E. Allen, the taste of each member of the audience is studied, with the result that patrons are steadfast in their attendance. "Fight for Millions" was a popular picture last week.—Mr. T. Hallesey, at the de Luxe, starred "The Colonel's Wife" and "The Open Door" with satisfactory results.—At the Picture Playhouse, Mr. J. McCormas screened "The Black Spot."—Mr. G. F. Howes put on an excellent all-round programme last week at the Prince of Wales. "The Blacksmith's Crime" and "Vampires of the Night" topping the bill. —Two interesting specials at the Victoria, under the management of Mr. George Mead, were "Love Makes Amends" and "The Face of Fear."—"Kroonstadt" was a winner at the Cinema Palace, where Mr. J. W. Bonce always secures the very best.

The season has quite commenced at Lowestoft, and regular patrons of the cinema theatres are supplemented by large numbers of visitors. The Palace, Royal Plain, is always well patronised, and recent features have been "Her Old Teacher" and "The Wastrel." Popular programmes are submitted at the other theatres with equally good results.

MEMS. FROM MELTON.

Mr. Cox, the proprietor and manager of the Thorpe End Picture Palace, enhances his reputation for enterprise week by week, and his latest venture, "The British Army Film," which appeared last week, was looked forward to with much interest, especially by the Leicestershire Yeomanry encamped in the town. Treats recently enjoyed by big houses have been "The Pride of the Circus," "The Tower of Terror" and "Why Girls Leave Home."—At the King's, "The Lost Heir" and "Robespierre" have been most successful.

BEAUTY.

Sweet Land of Liberty.— Wrongful arrest causes Filipo to be unable to meet his wife, who is arriving aboard the Italian mail. Having no money she is forced to steal. This brings her to the Court, and a meeting with her husband ends in a double dismissal by a charitable judge. (June 15th. 980 ft.)

FLYING A.

The Certainty of Man.— Jealousy and bigotry cause the sheriff to arrest the postmaster upon a murder charge. A subsequent capture and an outlaw's confession causes Pennington's release, while the cocksure sheriff becomes insane with terror. (June 15th. 993 ft.)

The Widow's Investment.—Dishonest finance over an oil mine threatens to ruin a widow, but a lucky marriage between her son and the daughter of one of the mine employés reveals the plot and averts disaster. (June 18th. 1,992 ft.)

CLARENDON.

A Window to Let.—The approach of the Muddletown Regatta offers a fine opportunity to two sharps, a certain window being let and relet ad lib. The scenes on the day of the event are simply riotous, and the entire crowd eventually joins the boaters. (June 15th. 350 ft.)

DAVISON'S FILM SALES AGENCY.

ALPES.

A Noble Sacrifice.—For the sake of her younger sister's happiness the girl renounces her lover, but not before an attempted suicide has nearly cost the younger girl her life. (June 15th. 1,002 ft.)

A Daughter of the Alps.—The guide finds a rival in love in a wealthy artist. His temptation to kill the other is shown whilst upon a perilous peak, but he bravely resists and is rewarded with the true love of the girl. (June 18th. 2,160 ft.)

B. and C.

Lieut. Daring and the Stolen Invention. — Another excellent naval drama, the wiles of a beautiful woman serving the purpose of the spies. Daring's escape is a plucky one. In the end he recovers his model after a great swim and a stirring fight. (June 15th. 1,861 ft.)

The Loosened Plank.—Gipsy Jim is enraged over his wife's apparent preference for a pedlar. The trick of a loosened plank upon a bridge ends in Jim's own children being nearly drowned. A fine rescue by the pedlar ends in mutual happiness. (June 18th. 819 ft.)

C. and E.

Tricks in Bubble Blowing.—Entirely novel subject, some curious effects being shown. Some very beautiful effects are seen when flowers are enclosed by the filmy globules. (June 15th. 380 ft.)

MARTIN.

The Daughter of Garcia, Brigand.—After a brilliant capture, Mirette proves one too many for the sergeant of Carabineri and Garcia escapes. Jose is disgraced and joins the brigands. During a furious attack Jose's rival attempts to shoot him, but Mirette gives her life in order to save that of Jose. (June 18th. 1,361 ft.)

ECLAIR.

AMERICAN STANDARD.

A Puritan Episode.—The period of the play has been most accurately reproduced and a stirring drama includes fine scenes on board ship, an Indian massacre and pathetic burning at the stake. (June 15th. 2,185 ft.)

Trouble on the Stage.—Novel comic with a dress rehearsal, all awry, in a picture studio as the motive. A marvellous change is seen when the stage is "struck" and a new "set" made for a drama. (June 18th. 630 ft.)

ECLAIR.

Willy and the Swindler.—The little joiner's apprentice proves a true friend to his foreman by luckily finding evidence which exposes the false Count and enables the man to wed his master's daughter. (June 15th. 562 ft.)

SCIENTIA.

The Opossum, the Bat and the Agouti.—Cleverly secured subject dealing with some timid, yet very interesting creatures. (June 18th. 420 ft.)

Venice, in a Gondola.—The architectural glories of this Mecca of artists are revealed in many views of a striking nature. (June 18th. 367 ft.)

Durazzo.—This interesting "scenic" depicts the capital of Albania. Its fine palace forms a vivid contrast with the old Roman and Byzantine ruins. (June 15th. 334 ft.)

THOMAS A. EDISON, LTD.

The Double Shadow.—Robbery has been going on for years in the house. When a sudden crash comes the careless partner finds a battle of wits in progress between two men for possession of ill-gotten gain. (June 15th. 203 ft.)

Love's Young Dream.—Extremes meet in the persons of ponderous Watkins and the willowy Miss Brown. When rivalry begins then indeed do events commence to wax exceeding wroth. (June 11th. 560 ft.)

The Message in the Rose.—Picturesque drama of Italian life and smuggling adventures. Specially reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of May 7 on pp. 665-7. (June 18th. 1,030 ft.)

Sophia's Imaginary Visitors.—Kate, who has broken her engagement with Beasley, is suddenly made aware of his ingenuity by a clever imaginary parting, acted with the aid of an empty carriage, for the sake of a child. She realises her mistake and a double happiness ends the comedy. (June 18th. 1,050 ft.)

Courting Betty's Beau.—The dodges of three elderly sisters to capture the girl's beau end in an indescribably elaborate dinner. He makes his escape and an impromptu meal in the kitchen ends in defeat for the "ugly sisters." (June 18th. 700 ft.)

ESSANAY.

Single Handed. — An accident places the sheriff at the mercy of Dr. Karl, his rival. The latter steals the keys and liberates the prisoners. When the unconscious sheriff awakens a fine chase and capture end in doctor and prisoners being lodged together. (June 15th. 994 ft.)

Luck in Odd Numbers.—The widow's cunning scheme to ensure that her beau shall win a lottery, which contains only one genuine ticket, has a curious result. A misunderstood wire causes the messenger boy to have a glorious time. His lordly assumption is delightful to witness. (June 15th. 998 ft.)

The Three Scratch Clue.—A detective story with an ingenious gentleman crook, who succeeds in gaining possession of a rare volume of priceless value in a novel manner. Some thrilling incidents are seen, including a motor explosion caused by the car running amok. The finale is very convincing indeed. (June 18th. 1,974 ft.)

Broncho Billy's True Love.—Arriving out West, Elsa soon lures Billy away from little Marguerite. When she learns the cause of the girl's sorrow Elsa shows her womanly nature in a clever scheme, the deceit sending Billy back to the girl, (June 18th. 994 ft.)

GAUMONT.

Punch and Judy.—Some vivid contrasts are shown in a pathetic story of the stage and an indigent waif of the amusement world. The love of a selfish wife is at length awakened by the action of her child. (June 15th. 2,045 ft.)

A Mountain Stream.—One of the most charming portions of the Pyrenees in colour and excellent photography. (June 15th. 325 ft.)

The 1815 Vintage.—An amusing satirical comedy, the last bottle of a precious vintage being the cause of Theodore's extremely rapid growth into manhood. After prodigious happenings the great day arrives, the bottle is opened and its contents are—nil. (June 15th. 565 ft.)

Honour Redeemed.—Gambling debts are the ruin of the Viscount, and his fond mother steals her husband's money in order to help the lad. His honour is at length re-established through a brave exploit in the Moroccan war. (June 18th. 2,189 ft.)

Leonce is Crossed in Love.—Heartbroken (?) he determines upon suicide, but a car breaks down close to the line where he has made himself comfortable. His gallantry and a missed train end in a new and much more interesting love match. (June 18th. 975 ft.)

On the Bavarian Frontier.—Part of the Tyrol and one of the most beautiful of all scenic resorts. The beautiful Jungspitza and Lake Ribersee are fine features. (June 18th. 230 ft.)

GENERAL FILM AGENCY.

MILANO.

Tarragona.—A panorama of the bay opens the picture, then follow excellent views of the aqueduct and the half-Romanesque cathedral, a veritable treasure of architectural beauty. (June 18th. 390 ft.)

RAMO.

Wives.—Exciting scenes upon the New York Stock Exchange are seen in a good play, which shows vivid contrasts—two rivals in business and their wives. The misunderstood wife untimately proves her true worth in a dramatic way. (June 18th. 3,150 ft.)

HEPWORTH.

The Angel of Deliverance.—A wandering mechanic is befriended by a gipsy and, later, becomes chauffeur to a doctor in the neighbourhood, little realising that his gipsy friend has brutally assaulted his new master. When the gipsy's child falls ill the mechanic proves a true friend, securing timely aid and peace between the doctor and his assailant. (June 15th. 1,100 ft.)

Judged by Appearances.—A strange contretemps, caused by the old remedy of a key to allay a fit of bleeding, results in the breaking down of a door by the irate Count. The lady's sister, who loves the artist, comes to the rescue and quickly dispels all suspicion. (June 18th. 880 ft.)

A. E. HÜBSCH & CO., LTD.

MESSTER.

From the Jaws of Death.—The efforts of a clever detective are frustrated by a spy who acts for the criminal, but a final raid of the headquarters of the gang is effected in a dramatic manner. Some fine aeroplane feats and an explosion scene are features in the drama. (June 15th. 3,025 ft.)

A Sporting Lass.—A capital comedy, which includes some fine figure skating by masters at a famous winter resort. (June 18th. 1,500 ft.)

SASCHA.

Lake Maggiore.—The unsurpassed grandeur of this lovely lake is shown in views of stereoscopic quality, and with some fine toning. (June 15th. 553 ft.)

Durrazzo.—An interesting résumé of the salient features of the chief city in turbulent Albania. (June 18th. 431 ft.)

KINETO

The Catch of the Season.—He of the draught board apparel is the author of a supreme effort which puts even Munchausen in the shade. This comical tale was reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE, April 30, on p. 555. (June 18th. 750 ft.)

LONDON FILM CO., LTD.

Luncheon for Three.—A very comical dilemma is the mainstay of the story, neither of the gentlemen being able to foot the big bill incurred by a hearty generosity. The girl settles it, unknown to either, and some very humorous situations follow. (June 15th. 720 ft.)

IVY CLOSE FILMS.

The Terrible Twins.—A decided flutter coincides with the arrival of Count Marzipan in Suburbia, but the charming eligible will have none of him. A conspiracy with her sailor-brother and a temporary exchange of apparel causes a hurried departure, most unaccountable to Papa. (June 15th. 1,100 ft.)

LUBIN.

In the Gambler's Web.—A murder in the den ends disastrously for a young visitor, but his fiancée nobly stands by him, and when he escapes helps him to find the gambler, now an absinthe fiend, who confesses to the crime. (June 15th. 2,066 ft.)

The Puritan.—Drama of the American cabarets, wherein the Puritan, a village lover, finds the girl he had chosen. Necessity compels her to make a loveless marriage, and, too late, the Puritan finds that she has made a terrible sacrifice. (June 15th. 1 040 ft.)

Detective Short.—Jealousy causes a diminutive suitor to himself seek fame as an investigator. His adventures are not at all pleasant, and he soon drops sleuthing. (June 16th. 550 ft.)

His Wife.—A masked marriage forms the main incident in an ingeniously planned drama of love and jealousy. A fine ball-room scene and some artistic interiors form the backgrounds for the play. (June 18th. 2,074 ft.)

Life, Love and Liberty.—Insurrection in Mexico, and dramatic happenings, which include an ingenious escape from prison, are followed by the frustrating of an assassination. The declaration of liberty ends a stirring drama. (June 18th. 1,024 ft.)

At the Botton of the Sea.—Cartoons by Vincent C. Whitman, a well-known American artist, depict a weird series of amusing adventures. June 15th. 479 ft.)

M.P. SALES AGENCY.

BIOGRAPH.

The Soul of the Desert.—Two wanderers in the arid waste who have been cheated of their inheritance by a rascally uncle, display a greater charity and sacrifice themselves in order that young outcasts may live. (June 15th. 1,041 ft.)

The Tango Flat.—Removal to a new suite plunges the Browsers from the grill to the hot plate. In sheer despair they lose all self-respect, and are soon in the grip of the dreadful dance. (June 15th. 453 ft.)

The Fatal Chocolate.—Rural love receives a jolt in a capital reissue. (June 16th. 596 ft.)

Her Big Scoop.—"Graft," in the person of a despicable lawyer, finds it's up against the wrong man. The senator's wife cleverly silences the voice of scandal, and the Press aids his election. (June 18th. 1,032 ft.)

A Man in the House.—Bunty's wife, during his absence abroad, lets the house, unawares, to the Newbeydes. Mr. B. returns unexpectedly, and the lonely novitiate receives a shock, so does Bunty. (June 18th. 583 ft.)

Their First Divorce Case.—Two mistaken sleuths are seen upon a chase of the untamed gosling variety. (June 18th. 645 ft.)

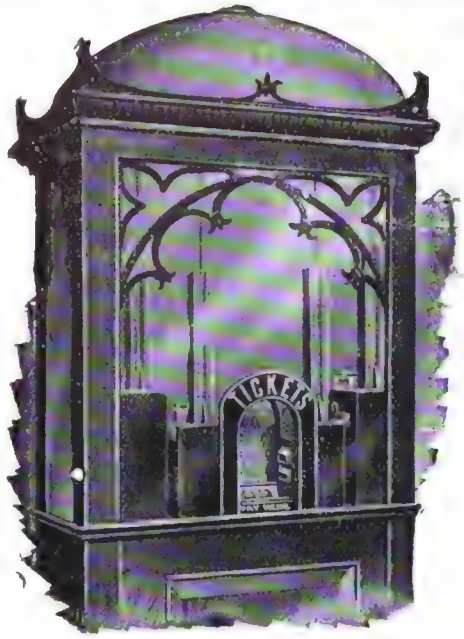
KALEM.

The Cabaret Dancer.—In search of his lost wife, Don finds her in a Cabaret, and saves her life as a foreigner is about to shoot her. He is blinded, but Lince nurses him back to life and love. (June 15th. 2,055 ft.)

Gertie Gets the Cash.—An actress, by adopting male attire, cleverly induces a maiden aunt to so commit herself that an eccentric form of dowry is set aside. (June 15th. 614 ft.)

The Wiles of the Siren.—Slander causes the parting of two lovers, but the hero finds out the truth and arrives at an African mission just in time to save the girl from a terrible death. (June 18th. 2,098 ft.)

A Race with the Limited.—Railroad drama, with a great dash by motor-cycle as the chief sensation. The cycle breaking down, its rider shoots at the signal wires, and thereby brings the train to a standstill. (June 15th. 935 ft.)



SPECIAL.

Glimpses of Budapesth.—Concise views of the leading features of the Hungarian capital, and a lovely sunset as finale. (June 18th. 438 ft.)

WELT.

The Ant.—Many unique aspects of the ways of the industrious insects are clearly and cleverly depicted. (June 15th. 319 ft.)

NEW MAJESTIC FILM CO.

APOLLO.

An Accidental Baby.—Instead of a joyous wedding day, Fred finds first, a too tight suit, then himself saddled with a baby, and finally, trouble with the police. The wedding ceremony ends in a curious place. (June 15th. 937 ft.)

MAJESTIC.

The Power of Mind.—Paralysis throws Graham into a morbid state of mind. His doctor prevents his suicide and helps the wife to success as a playwright. The entry of a burglar awakens Graham's dormant faculties and the wife and doctor return to witness the beginning of a cure. (June 15th. 992 ft.)

Jakes' Hoodo.—Riotously amusing comedy, a pair of stolen trousers of rather decided pattern causing some very farcical situations. (June 18th. 996 ft.)

Ten of Spades.—Seeing a timid newcomer among the dance hall girls, West buys her from the mercenary proprietor and places her in charge of the rector. The girl grows to love West, and one day gives her life to save him from his old enemy. The card forms a weird emblem with a bearing upon her death and hereafter. (June 18th. 972 ft.)

RELIANCE.

The Loafer. — Tom loves his old mother, but jibs at work. The doctor finally gives him a thrashing. Tom is about to seek a cowardly revenge when the doctor's care for an elderly lady awakens a true desire to reform. (June 15th. 998 ft.)

The Psychological Moment.—The wife of a convict finds employment with the magistrate. Released, the husband finds where she is and seeks her return. The magistrates intervention causes a thirst for revenge, but an accidental shot sends the criminal upon his last journey. (June 15th. 990 ft.)

The Man.—A timely arrival enables the country father to extract the truth from his daughter. The former lover informed of the newcomer's traitorous behaviour, forces him to give her the sanctity of marriage. (June 18th. 977 ft.)

PASQUALI FILM CO.

Polidor's Great Catch.—The capture of a magnificent trout is responsible for behaviour which is extremely queer. When the kind-hearted angler "does" decide to dispose of it, the fish proves almost as ancient as its recipient. (June 18th. 550 ft.)

PATHÉ FRÉRES.

A.K.

A Broken Life.—Tale of a wanderer who, in search of a missing husband, finally strayed into a saloon out West. The arrival one day of a stranger reveals the man who had deserted her for the goldfields, but she elects to stay with the ones who have befriended her. (June 14th. 1,000 ft.)

The Joy Ride.—A farce which deals with a chauffeur's exploits while posing as a millionaire motorist. An accident lands him in the prison hospital and his master suddenly finds himself involved in two mysterious love affairs. (June 14th. 975 ft.)

The Trafficker's Mistake.—Picturesque story of life among the Indian's and a baseless jealousy which parts the trapper from his wife and partner. Months later the partner saves the woman's life, by a mad canoe race, from vengeful Reds and brings about a reconciliation with her husband. (June 18th. 1,900 ft.)

Love's Offering.—Jealous of her husband's model, the young wife leaves him. Soon after she learns that he is seriously ill in hospital. She hastens to the city and makes a supreme sacrifice by transfusion of her blood. He awakes to a joyous reunion. (June 18th. 1,030 ft.)

Bossie Smith, Mayor of Podunk.—The chief of the local suffragettes is well in the running for election and secures some grand evidence of attempted bribery by means of a phonograph record. Her triumph is ended by her daughter breaking the record, but Mrs. Smith soon becomes Mayoress. (June 18th. 875 ft.)

CHICAGO.

An Outlaw's Love.—Lily, joint owner with her brother of the ranch, agrees to elope with Jim, the outlaw. Disguised, she falls a victim to her brother's gun. A pathetic finale is seen as Jim races to the spot and kisses the dying woman, then gives himself up to justice. (June 14th. 925 ft.)

COMICA.

A Bride Too Many.—That faithless swain informs his supposed love that he is about to marry another. Amelia soons finds her rival, captures her wedding finery and is marrying them proceeds to make things hum, effecting a permanent cure. (June 10th. 525 ft.)

His attempted suicide brings about a reconciliation and his mother realises that he has learnt his lesson. (June 18th. 1,000 ft.)

GLORIA.

Glycerine.—An "agony" advertisement and a torn copy of the wording is seen to lead to various results, the poor chemist being accused of anarchy and infidelity by various parties. A discovered "bomb" is found to contain but an inoffensive cabbage. (June 18th. 1,000 ft.)

PARISIEN.

Rigolard's Detective Tales.—Thrilled by perusal of the exploits of Holmes and Watson, the ingenious amateur goes a-sleuthing, but comes in for some rather rough treatment. (June 15th. 375 ft.)

SOLAX.

As the Bell Rings.—A secret wedding ends in the girl being helped in after years by the vicar of her village. His kindness is misconstrued, but the breath of scandal is hushed when an enforced marriage to the vicar's brother makes the girl honourable. (June 15th. 1,000 ft.)

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

Reporter Jimmie Intervenes.—Powerful story of the signal defeat of the "graft" section of a city council, the reporter stealing and riding off with an incriminating proof. His race—horse versus car—ends in the people being assured of their open spaces. The surging of the crowd into the council chamber is a remarkable scene. (June 15th. 2,180 ft.)

Suppressed News.—The news man tumbles unexpectedly upon a startling scoop while upon the Bank premises. His sweetheart sides with him against her father, the president, but Garfield is kept a prisoner. He sends the news by a ruse but, later, manages to glean good tidings and stops all publication, preventing a run on the bank. (June 15th. 987 ft.)

The Cathedral and Tower of Pisa.—Some excellent views of the famous old church and the Leaning Tower. (June 15th. 125 ft.)

The Speedway of Despair.—Robbed by prison of the best portion of his life, Jim drifts to extreme poverty and swears vengeance upon his betrayer. The silent appeal of a somnambulist child turns him in the direction of a better life. (June 18th. 910 ft.)

The Golden Patch.—Grubbins, the miser, leaves his house to attend a fire for loot. During his absence his wife helps herself. Next day Grubbins seeks worms and finds gold in the garden. Fishing goes by the board and Amos puts in the day of a lifetime. (June 18th. 944 ft.)

The Cop on the Beat—Proves the means of unmasking, in the person of a burglar, the villainous partner who sought to rob Gale and his family of their shares. A reunion dinner, with the policeman as guest, closes the story. (June 18th. 1,035 ft.)

G. SERRA.

CINES.

Cinnesino and the Dancer.—Taken to a circus, the little fellow becomes enamoured of a dancer. His return home signalises a passion for circus life and is the cause of many surreptitious visits. (June 15th. 410 ft.)

Siena. — Visit to a famous old town, its famous Mangia Tower and the beautiful Dome Cathedral, one of the finest specimens of old architecture in Italy. (June 15th. 440 ft.)

The Cry of Innocence. — Distrustful of the new governess, the manufacturer's daughter denounces her as an adventuress. Her prophecy comes true and the woman's charge of murder turns out badly for the girl. Fortunately, the father recovers, as the result of an operation, and the woman takes the place of her victim in prison. (June 18th. 2,500 ft.)

HILARITY.

Perpetual Motion Solved.—Ingenious Henry, with the aid of a decrepit handcart and two beer barrels, builds himself a car. The furious ride that follows defies every known law of gravitation, oscillation and deviation, finally landing him through a roof into the lap of a fair charmer. (June 18th. 282 ft.)

THANHOUSER.

Guilty, or Not Guilty. — Pathetic child-life drama, with a kindly magistrate as good Samaritan. Reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of May 21st on p. 875. (June 15th. 1,006 ft.)

The Desert Tribesman.—A chance comes for the tribesman to repay when the child of his former benefactor seeks to drive the usurping Vizier from the throne. Amidst beautiful surroundings a fine drama of rebellion follows some exciting sword play. A fine duel between the young Caliph and the Vizier is a stirring episode. (June 18th. 2,028 ft.)

PRINCESS.

A Tangled Cat.—Appalling nocturnal sounds cause "loud excursions and alarums," a farm hand coming in for a dose of buckshot during the excitement. When sal volatile is applied to the females the causes are found in some forgotten fly papers and an enveloped grimalkin. (June 15th. 1,000 ft.)

TRANS-ATLANTIC FILM CO.

BISON 101.

For Love, Life and Liberty.—The Cuban revolution forms the basis of a powerful drama wherein the jealousy of a rebel captain all but succeeds in causing a conviction for murder. The heroine cleverly frustrates his evil plans. (June 15th. 1912 ft.)

The Legend of the Phantom Tribe.—Primeval days among the Indians are reproduced in the course of a stirring romance, some picturesque settings being a fine feature of a good story. (June 18th. 1929 ft.)

CRYSTAL.

Baldy Belmont Picks a Peach.—In answer to a matrimonial "ad.," a disguised youth is thrust upon Baldy, but he defeats the little plot and soon shows up with the real heiress. (June 15th. 435 ft.)

Getting Reuben Back.—Pa tries to force Annie's suitor into a marriage, but the youth escapes, and Annie, by a clever dodge, regains possession of the man she really wanted. (June 15th. 546 ft.)

His Vacation.—Holiday time proves a rough experience for Bob. He is hauled before the Sheriff, and next year declines the holiday. (June 18th. 636 ft.)

Keystone Comedies

Are you Prepared FOR THE

CHAPLIN BOOM ?

There has never before been so instantaneous a hit as that of CHAS. CHAPLIN, the famous Karno Comedian in Keystone Comedies.

Most first-run Exhibitors have booked every film in which he appears and after the first release there is certain to be a big rush for copies.

[Have you made certain of one for your Programme.]

Show your audiences

Making a Living
(June 18th),
Then Book the rest before it is too late.

CHAS. CHAPLIN appears in HIS FAVOURITE PASTIME.

His hobby is drinking cocktails, and the results are as amusing as they are unexpected. His business with the hat alone makes the film worth seeing. His falls are indescribable, the fight with the swing-door is side-splitting. "One of the best efforts Mr. Sennett has given us," says an American critic.

Released July 20th. App. length, 1,009 ft.

RELIANCE

STAR ARTISTES

working under expert directions will, from now on, be a feature of NEW RELIANCE Films, commencing with the subject listed below, in which the leading parts are taken by

LILIAN GISH, HENRY WALTHALL,
MARY ALDEN, EARLE FOX.

THE . . .

Green-Eyed Devil.

Produced by JAMES KIRKWOOD.

This subject may be taken as an indication of the new product of the Reliance Co. It features artistes whose reputations were made in some of the most famous films in the Trade's history; and it was directed by an acknowledged master of the art. It is a domestic drama, notable equally for its truth to type and for its magnificent acting. It is not wildly sensational, but intensely interesting from beginning to end, and it will appeal to your audiences because of its intimate quality and absolute realism.

IT IS A FILM YOU OUGHT TO SEE!

Rel. Monday, July 13th. App. length 1989 ft.

ALL PRINTS ON EASTMAN STOCK.

For a Woman.—For the sake of his sweetheart's honour, she having stolen money in order to help an invalid sister, John goes to prison. A long-delayed confession secures his release, and he returns to comfort his fiancée. (June 18th. 905 ft.)

FRONTIER.

The Heart of Smiling Joe.—The sobriquet is well deserved, and Joe proves his manhood by giving his life in order to save that of a girl who had proved a true friend to an outlaw. (June 15th. 990 ft.)

Slim to the Rescue.—Burlesque on old style "mellow" drama, gunpowder, a fuse and a cigarette proving the downfall, after an aerial flight, of the villain. (June 18th. 765 ft.)

GOLD SEAL.

Captain Jenny, S.A.—Saving a girl's life, Jim falls in love with her, then loses sight of her. On the eve of his marriage to Jenny, she discovers that the girl is her own sister. She leaves the two together and goes with the missionaries to the Far East. (June 18th. 2,920 ft.)

IMP.

The Art of Making Silver Plate.—Processes which are more or less of a mystery to the outsider are revealed in a most interesting manner. (June 15th. 306 ft.)

The Touch of a Child.—Enemies plan a weird duel, the whim of a child to decide which of them is to die. How the youngster settles the question is portrayed in a scene of tense excitement. (June 18th. 1,810 ft.)

JOKER.

Mike and Jake Live Close to Nature.—Lectures upon Nature fire the two eccentrics with an enthusiasm which involves primeval attire. Mike is mistaken for an escaped freak, and some capital fun follows. (June 15th. 987 ft.)

NESTOR.

Hilda of the Mountains.—Many thrills attend the portrayal of a defiant elopement, which ends in a successful ceremony. (June 15th. 985 ft.)

In the End.—Forsaking a good husband for another man, the woman finds her mistake, and seeks to return. By this time her husband has gone far away, and she finds herself without husband or lover. (June 18th. 996 ft.)

VICTOR.

The Man Who Slept.—Forced to take a short sea trip on the day of his wedding, the fisherman soon finds himself asleep in the stern of the boat. His befuddled brain sees a terrible vision which threatens his future happiness; and a reformed man goes through the wedding ceremony. (June 18th. 950 ft.)

POWERS.

Just Mother.—Selfishness reigns in the hearts of two girls. They enter a story competition, and knowing the publisher, feel sure of prizes. In the end the mother wins, and in addition gains the love of the man who mattered. (June 15th. 705 ft.)

The Parks of Stockholm.—Conveys a charming idea of the open-air life of Sweden's great and picturesque capital. (June 18th. 280 ft.)

REX.

For the Family Honour.—Hazel quits the crooks and seeks an honest living, becoming maid to a wealthy family. She falls in love with the son of the house, then finds that the leader of the gang is making love to Bob's sister. Hazel sacrifices her own good name and happiness in order to save the girl. (June 15th. 1894 ft.)

An Arrowhead Romance.—Fascinated by a woman of the city, the guide leaves his simple country lover. He finds things by no means as above-board as he expected, and returns a sadder and wiser man to his mountain home. (June 18th. 1,026 ft.)

TURNER.

Daisy Doodad's Dial.—An ingenious comedy, Miss Doodad seeking to win a curious competition which involves the art of make-up and varied facial expressions. Her unconscious efforts in the streets cause considerable alarm, but a subsequent nightmare and a procession of ghostly "dials" effect a most amusing climax. (June 18th. 580 ft.)

UNIVERSAL FILM CO., LTD.

BIG 5.

The Life of a Kinkajou.—A curious member of the racoon family with a most useful prehensile tail, performs some amusing feats for the spectator's edification. (June 15th. 500 ft.)

Baby in Mischief.—With the aid of various household implements and some strange companions, the mischievous one provides an illustration of some truths in Darwinism. (June 18th. 350 ft.)

HERON.

Waterfalls of Wales.—Some of the scenic glories of Cymru, well chosen and in fine quality photography. (June 15th. 283 ft.)

URBANORA.

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

The Curse of the Scarabee Ruby.—The Oriental prologue reveals the nature of the evils which are to attend those who illicitly possess themselves of the jewel. The subsequent "acts" reveal a tale of an evil spirit which changes a girl into the associate of notorious thieves. A romantic series of adventures ends the existing drama. (June 15th. 2,255 ft.)

Peter Loves Work.—As an indolent clock maker, Peter is hurried by an irate spouse. Her marvel when everything, even to the making of his bed and the procuring of his materials, is done by invisible hands is delightful to behold. (June 18th. 450 ft.)

The Morocco Leather Industry.—Taken at Oran, Algeria, these views show various very primitive and amusing processes. The final pictures show the dexterity of native boys in the manufacture of various familiar articles. (June 18th. 360 ft.)

VITAGRAPH.

Doctor Polly.—Afflicted with "nerves," the hero goes away for a rest-cure. While one evening chasing a ghost, he captures a beautiful girl. Her remedy proves a complete and very pleasant cure. Some very fine settings are utilised in this comedy. (June 15th. 1,991 ft.)

In the Old Attic.—Old Morton, having disowned his son, still clings to the old mansion, despite the decline of the locality. Billy, a little attic dweller, pays stolen visits to Morton's attic to play with the toys. A burglary causes delirium for the old man, but Billy effects a final reconciliation. (June 15th. 1,043 ft.)

The Old Oak's Secret.—The hiding of a will durthe Civil War in the old tree by a negro servant, proves the means of denouncing the usurper. A fine love interest runs through the story. (June 15th. 990 ft.)

The Wooing O't.—Most appealing re-issue of one of the best of all school comedies. The garden wall scenes are particularly amusing. (June 15th. 715 ft.)

The Drudge.—Pathetic domestic drama of sacrifice and mother-love. Specially reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of May 7th on p. 665. (June 18th. 1,954 ft.)

The Hero.—Two ingenious fellows plan a scheme of alleged anarchy, which brands a suitor as a coward and secures a more suitable beau for the girl. (June 18th. 800 ft.)

Craw Fishing.—A Swedish industry, which is seen to be carried out in an interesting manner by means of traps. (June 18th. 229 ft.)

A Change in Baggage Checks.—The misadventures of two vaudeville artistes are seen in a comical Bunnygraph. Reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of May 14th on p. 766. (June 18th. 1,046 ft.)

WARNER'S.

The Midnight Strike.—Two-part industrial drama with some big sensations, includng the wrecking of the millowner's residence. Reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of May 14th on p. 767. (June 18th. 2,200 ft.)

WESTERN IMPORT CO.

BRONCHO.

A Romance of the Sea.—Romance of the days of piracy, two villains gaining positions in the crew of a treasure-seeking ship. Some stirring fights are seen ashore and aboard ship. The captain and the loyal sailors are helped to victory by an unexpected attack on the part of the savages. (June 15th. 2,060 ft.)

K.B.

Divorce.—Discontented, the woman seeks and obtains a divorce and soon realises that her second marriage is anything but happy. She seeks, after a period, to ingratiate herself with her daughter, but the girl denounces her and returns to her loving father. (June 18th. 2,134 ft.)

KEYSTONE.

Little Billy's Strategy.—An amusing burlesque-drama, entirely and cleverly enacted by the Keystone children. The doings of the tragi-comic kidnappers are fraught with truly tense excitement. (June 15th. 1,032 ft.)

Making a Living.—Chas. Chaplin, as the sharper, proves himself quite as comical in pictures as he was in the Karno extravaganzas. (June 18th. 1,030 ft.)

KOM.

Nellie's First Cake.—A picnic is chosen as the occasion for the testing of the pretty girl's first. Two tramps cause a scare and help themselves. When the police arrive the cake has put in its deadly work and an easy capture is effected. (June 15th. 518 ft.)

Levi's Luck.—A cute wheeze is tried upon several people but Levi wins the bet by hanging the bag upon a nail. He also wins a nice little reward from the drummer who had lost the "grip." (June 18th. 401 ft.)

THE PICK OF THE PROGRAMMES.

WHAT WE THINK OF THEM.

Mary Magdalene.

It is not the least of the cinema's charms that, owing to its freedom from the limitations of language and place, it brings to us from other lands all sorts of dramatic and literary masterpieces which in the ordinary course we should probably never have the opportunity of enjoying at all, except in perhaps distorted Anglicised versions.

In the wonderful Messter film, "Mary Magdalene," we have a pictorial presentation, perfectly adapted, staged and acted on native soil by native players, of a great masterpiece by a German genius who, in spite of the popularity his works have enjoyed and are still enjoying in his own country, is practically unknown in England. It is true that three of Hebbel's best plays, including "Mary Magdalene," have recently been translated and published in an edition the price of which is within the reach of all, but it is unlikely that many people, in the ordinary course, will read them, or that we shall ever have the chance of seeing them performed in English on the ordinary stage. It is into this breach that the cinema has stepped, and it is no exaggeration to say that everyone who cares for really fine drama should make a point of seeing this remarkable film which, in spite of the absence of words save for those few quotations introduced as sub-titles, is a more faithful interpretation of the spirit of the original than it would be easy to present on the ordinary stage in this country.

"Mary Magdalene" is not a Biblical drama, as its title may suggest to some people, but a wonderful story, intense, gloomy, and immensely powerful, of German peasant life, largely similar in character to some of Thomas Hardy's immortal rustic tragedies. Its central figure—a young girl who is seduced and subsequently discarded by a man she does not love, but to whom she has become engaged at her parents' wish, and who finally seeks shelter in self-sought death from the woe which has been brought upon her, through no fault of her own, but by the cruelty and selfishness of others—reminds one irresistibly indeed of Hardy's "Tess," nor is the sublimity of this German tragedy, as a whole, very much below that of the great Wessex novelist's masterpiece. Obviously, "Mary Magdalene" is not a "pleasant" story, and to many it may quite well appear undesirably painful, but none can deny its very high artistic qualities, nor its beauty as a piece of realism presented with the utmost skill.

It would be impossible to praise too greatly the infinite art with which the work has been prepared and produced. From the delightful opening scene down to the terrible ending, when the stricken old father, having ordered the dead body of his daughter to be carried from the house, puts up his desolate cry, "I don't understand this world now!" (the sentence upon which the original play concludes), the story moves forward with irresistible force. The seduction scene is represented with the finest delicacy and does not seem to call for elimination, although naturally the whole film is of a character which renders it unsuitable for babes and sucklings.

From an acting point of view, no more remarkable film has yet reached us from Germany, nor, in fact, from any other country. We wish that we had the names of the various players in order that we might give individual praise where praise is so unmistakably due. As it is, however, we must content ourselves by saying that the study of the heroine is one of the most piteously pathetic and beautiful things ever seen on screen or stage, whilst the other characters, including the simple but intolerant father, the sweet, all-pardoning mother, and the crafty, unstable lover, are marvellously presented.

A most attractive feature of the film is the perfectly delightful picture it incidentally affords of German village life in the early nineteenth century. The atmosphere of the period is realised with extraordinary skill, whilst the staging of the interior scenes is notable for its immense care for accuracy of detail.

We have not the space to write more of "Mary Magdalene," but we have no hesitation in recommending it as one of the most artistic films yet seen. It will not, of course, suit every theatre by any means, and its character should be thoroughly understood beforehand by those who contemplate booking it. But for those audiences who can appreciate a really great piece of work—too great to be morbid in spite of its theme—here is a true masterpiece. (Messter film. A. E. Hübsch and Co., Limited.)

caped convict, innocent of the crime for which he has been imprisoned, conceals himself from his pursuers by taking the place of, and masquerading as, an aged hermit, whose lonely death has passed unnoticed by the outside world. All goes smoothly with the refugee until one day he receives a letter, addressed to the dead hermit, announcing the latter's daughter is coming to see her father, after many years' separation. The girl comes, and the convict, forced for his safety's sake to maintain his rôle, welcomes her as his child. Eventually, after many months, in which the girl marries an unworthy man, and is prematurely widowed, the convict hears that his innocence has been established. He is then free to declare his true identity to the girl who has for so long regarded him as her father, and, moreover, to avow openly the love for her which he has perforce concealed through many years.

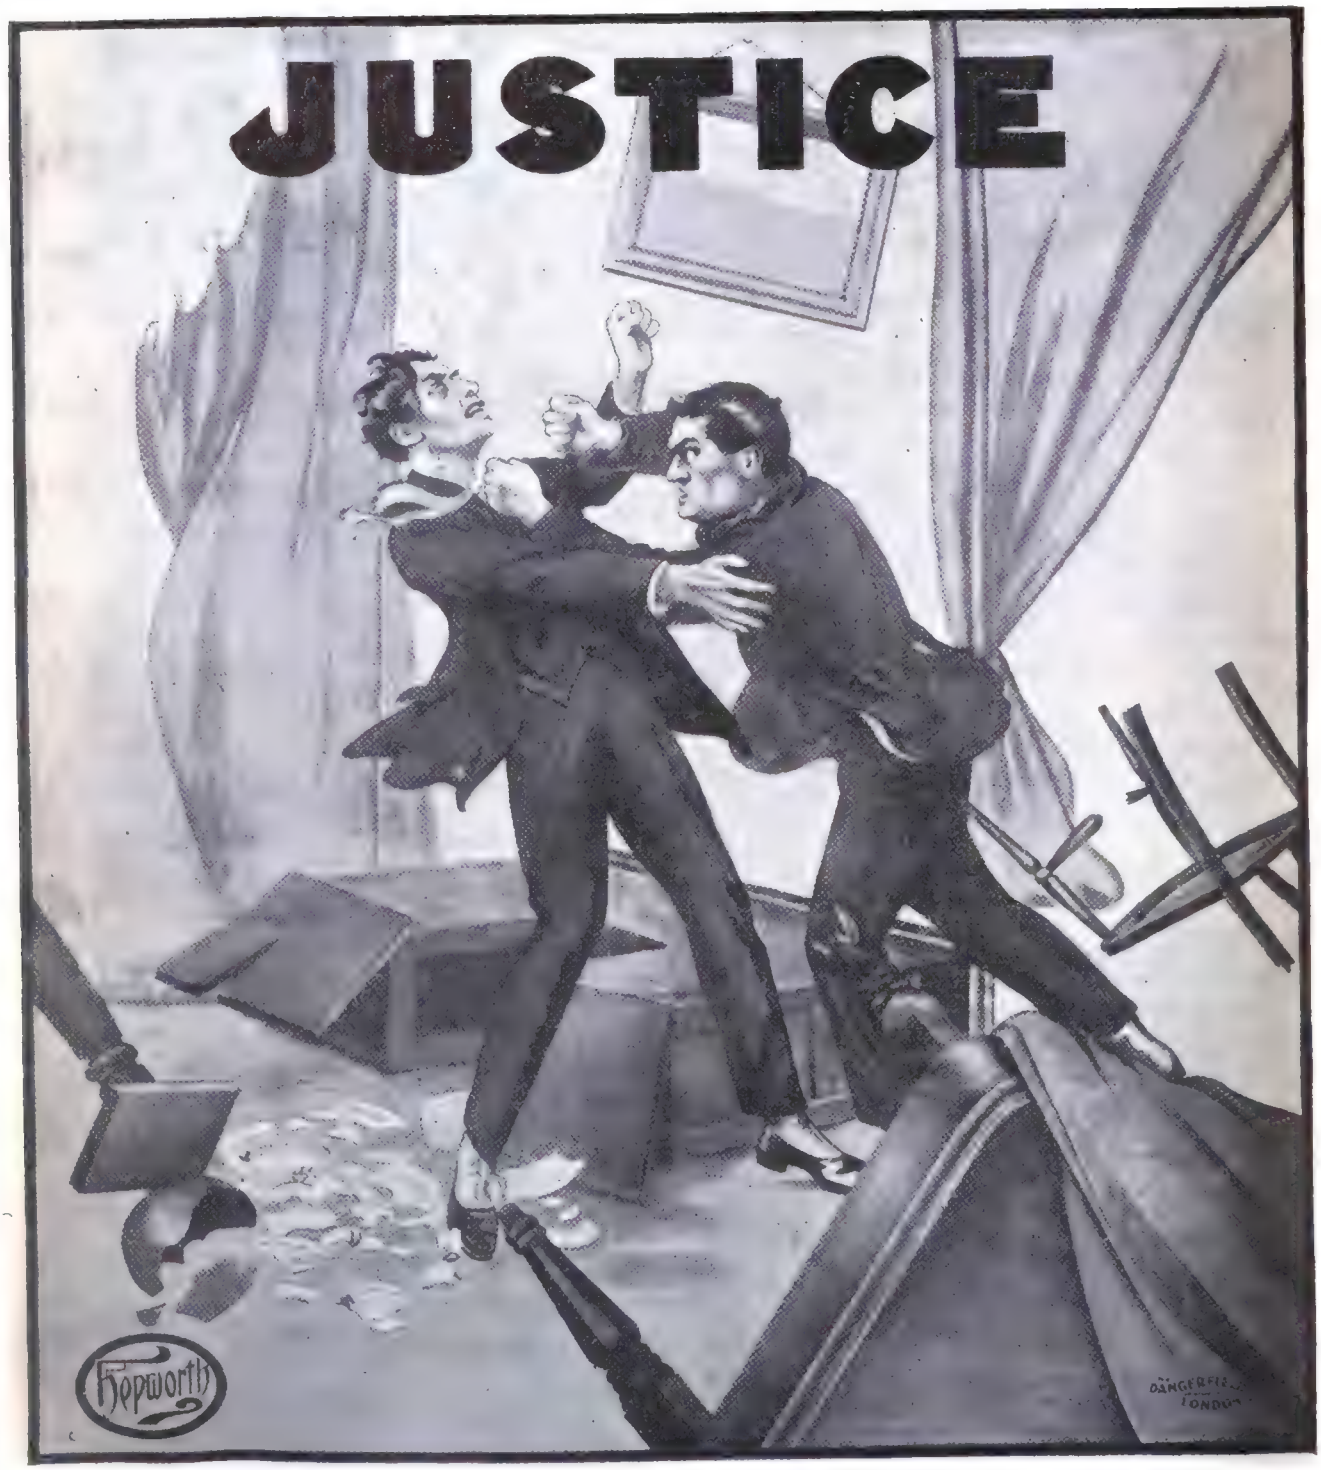
As will be seen, it is an excellent and original plot, which is also perfectly possible if not extremely probable. The chief weaknesses in the story as presented on the screen are, firstly, the omission to account for the obvious disparity in the ages of the convict and the hermit, a disparity which would inevitably have been remarked by the girl; and secondly, the rather weak and hasty manner in which the climax is taken. A girl who has looked upon a man for several years as her father is not likely to be able to accept him as a lover without a very considerable interval for the readjustment of her emotions. There is one very fine scene in the film in which the convict, betrayed by a sudden, uncontrollable wave of passion, imprints a burning lover's kiss upon the mouth of the girl who has for him only a daughter's affection; but with the exception of this incident there is no attempt to show that gradual modification of the girl's emotional standpoint, which might have provided the material for a wonderfully subtle and arresting psychological study.

In spite of this inclination to shirk what might have been an extremely powerful and effective situation, however, we like the film very much, and we fancy that picture theatre audiences will like it equally. As we have said, its setting has especial charm, many of the scenes being played against quite exceptionally beautiful natural backgrounds. The acting, which is chiefly in the hands of Miss Beverley Bayne and Mr. Francis X. Bushman, is very sincere and natural, every scene being made as convincing as possible (often a difficult task, as we have shown) within the limits of the scenario. "The Hermit of Lonely Gulch" is distinctly worth seeing. (Essanay film. Released July 9th. Length 1,990 ft.)

Lost in Mid-Ocean.

Nothing is better calculated to bring to one's mind a full realisation of the horrors of shipwreck, or more readily awaken one's sympathy for those who suffer from the perils of the sea, than an adequate film representation of a great maritime disaster. No narrative by spectators or journalistic reports can have the same direct appeal to the imagination as a realistic moving picture, produced with fidelity and truth. An incident in this film should do much to enlist the sympathy of the public for those who will suffer most from the catastrophe which befell the Empress of Ireland on Friday last.

The story is that of a young girl, Leona, who, recently married to an artist named Richard Manley, spends her honeymoon visiting friends in Japan. Tagisha, a wealthy Japanese, is a rejected suitor, but being a man of unscrupulous character, he plots to take Leona from her husband. He succeeds in having her kidnapped at the moment of the young couple's departure for home, and though she is rescued from his clutches by her friends, the husband sails before her absence is noted, and she is compelled to follow by the next steamer. During the voyage, the Mikado, on which she sails, collides with an iceberg, and though her husband's boat, the America, hurries to the spot in answer to a wireless call for help, it arrives only to find a few survivors in the lifeboats; in which number his wife is not included. He returns to New York with the conviction that his wife is lost, and travels about disconsolately, unable to settle down to his ordinary occupations. He therefore does not receive a message reporting that Leona has been rescued and is on her way home, and it is only through a providential accident that the husband and wife are finally reunited.



The story is a strong one, and well constructed. The mounting is magnificent, and includes a stately and picturesque ball at the Embassy in New York, and some very realistic and beautiful scenes in Japan which with the introduction of many native types and dresses present a brilliant picture.

The scenes showing the wreck of the Mikado and the manner in which the news is received by the ship on which Leona's husband is sailing, apart from the painful interest by which they are at present accentuated, are great achievements of dramatic realism. The horror of the situation is by no means over emphasised, but the tragedy is fully realised, and the pathetic picture of the great liner slowly disappearing from sight is wonderfully impressive.

Before this picture is publicly shown, the public will be called upon to do all in its power to help to alleviate the distress caused by the disaster to the Empress of Ireland, and we make no doubt the generous response which has never yet failed may be greatly stimulated by this vivid picture of the perils to which the duty of our sailors constantly exposes them. (Vitagraph Company, Limited. Released July 13th. Length 2,583 ft.)

Richelieu.

This elaborate film is a version in four reels of Bulwer Lytton's popular drama, and by sparing nothing in the matter of production effective treatment is given to a subject which is full of dramatic situations. Lord Lytton's drama has always retained a certain amount of popularity, more, perhaps, by reason of the great opportunities of characterisation offered to the star actor than for its literary merit, and many of our foremost actors have been glad to include it in their repertory, and the construction is theatrically effective, while the absence of the author's somewhat florid jewels of rhetoric is of no very great deprivation to the interest of the story.

The loce of de Mauprat for the great Cardinal's ward, Julie de Mortemar, and the manner in which he becomes involved in Baradas' plot against Richelieu, makes interesting drama, which might be rendered still more explicit by a greater continuity of action, the frequent changing from one scene to another in a manner much favoured by American producers, being carried to an extent which somewhat interferes with the sequence of the story.

The mounting is lavish in the extreme, and no trouble or expense has been spared to give an adequate stage representation of a magnificent and luxurious court.

Mr. Murdock Macquarrie is a picturesque figure as the great Cardinal, and with many effective touches heightens the author's conception of the crafty statesman. Miss Pauline Bush is graceful and charming as Julie, and the plots and intrigues of the Court are carried through with dash and spirit by a large company of players, whose efforts owe much to the admirable work of the stage director. (Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Limited. Released July 17th. Four reels.)

A Question of Hats and Gowns.

This very delightful comedy shows Miss Miriam Nesbitt in a part which brings out her conspicuous abilities in a new direction of versatility and with a strong sense of character. The story is slight, and it is left to the producer and the actors to fill it in with details which render it of extreme interest from start to finish.

A child in a small country town in America conceives a great admiration for a small boy who attends the same school, and when he goes out into the world and forgets his early companion she stays at home to cherish his memory and build castles in the air in which he is always the hero of her romance. On his return other interests occupy his mind, and the girl finds herself forgotten and neglected for others of more showy attractions. The girl writes for advice to a provincial paper, and is advised to gain her loved one's esteem by showing her capabilities as a business woman, and with this object she is allowed to start a millinery establishment. It is not a great success, for her ideas of dress are provincial to an extreme, and her best efforts are laughed to scorn by the young man and his friends. The girl meets a woman of the world, by whose aid she is transformed from a dowdy country girl to a smart and exceedingly beautiful young woman. The result fulfils all her desires, for the young man is absolutely carried away by this vision of beauty, and falls at her feet an easy captive.

Miss Miriam Nesbitt gives a wonderfully finished performance, and in the early part of the play she invests the character with much humour and a considerable amount of pathos, while the change into a brilliant young woman of the world is wonderfully effective and played with many subtle touches which give it infinite charm. It is one of the most delicate little comedies yet placed to the credit of the Edison Company, and produced with all their careful attention to details of production and photography, it should be one of their greatest successes. (Thos. A. Edison, Limited. Two reels.)

The Water Rats of London.

As its title implies, this is a thrilling drama of the London underworld, depicting the villainies of a desperate gang known as the Black Cross Society. They succeed in kidnapping the little daughter of the wealthy Dr. Chatlet with the aid of a woman named May. This woman herself has a daughter, and it is to provide for her child that she has joined the gang of criminals. While the doctor's child is being lured away he is engaged in the rescue of a young girl from a burning cottage, and at considerable risk he carries her from the building and takes her to the hospital. The rescued child is May's daughter, Dorothy, and on discovering who her benefactor is, May determines to restore the kidnapped child to her parents. Her attempt is discovered by her associates, and a desperate fight takes place, May being besieged in a cellar, defending herself with a revolver. She escapes through a sewer to the river, and though hotly pursued, succeeds in reaching the doctor's house in safety. Her own child is restored to health, and the closing scenes show that the doctor and his wife are content to overlook May's past life and provide for her and her child in the future.

The drama is full of exciting situations, which include an attempt to blow up the cellar with gunpowder, and the chase down to the boat is of breathless interest. It is well mounted, and played with breadth and vigour, the company including two clever children, who lend additional interest to a drama which is of the kind to thoroughly please a large public. (B. and C. film. Davison's Film Sales Agency. Released July 13th. Length 1,891 ft.)

The Diamond Smugglers.

This is a story of illicit diamond dealing, and shows an interesting change of scene from the diamond mines in Kimberley back to New York by way of Tangiers. Burgess and his wife, with the connivance of a Dutch foreman of the mines, succeed in obtaining a large quantity of diamonds which they hope to smuggle into America. They are suspected by an official, and Carey, a detective, receives instructions to follow them. He is pleasantly surprised to find an old acquaintance, Amy Andrews, travelling by the same boat, and Burgess, suspecting that Carey is on his track, tries to avert suspicion by involving Miss Edwards in the smuggling of the diamonds. He is successful to a certain extent, but on attempting to leave the steamer before she has passed the customs, he is discovered, and the boat in which he is escaping is sunk. Carey dives overboard and seizes Burgess, and during their struggle in the water a Government boat comes up. Burgess is captured, and Carey returns home to receive promotion at headquarters and a complete forgiveness from Amy.

It is a good story and a very interesting setting. The operations in the diamond mines and the ruse by which a negro manages to escape inspection with the stolen diamonds are novel and interesting, and there is an exciting hunt in the jungle, where the negro escapes by swimming a river. Some scenes in the grounds of a large hotel in Tangiers are exceedingly picturesque, and here is an exciting episode where a loafer attempting to steal the diamonds is thrown out of a high balcony.

The photography is excellent, and the acting adequate to a story which depends entirely on action and situations. (Warner film. Ruffells Exclusives, Limited. Length 2,500 ft.)

The Drawn Blind.

This film has been produced by the B. and C. Company with the special object of assisting the fund promoted by Mr. C. Arthur Pearson for the benefit of the blind, and there can be no doubt that the film will achieve a popularity which will be of material assistance to a most deserving cause.

While presenting the case of a child in humble circumstances who loses her eyesight with little hope of recovering, the author, in bringing out the full pathos of the situation, has not been neglectful of the public taste for strong drama and comedy relief, and both are supplied in full measure in the adventures of Bessie, the flower girl, and her faithful lover, Coster Bill. For when Lucy's eyesight begins to fail her sister Bessie realises the hopelessness of attempting to save the amount required for the necessary operation, and even the sacrifice of generous Bill's donkey contributes little towards the expense. A wealthy young idler hears by accident of Bessie's troubles, and promptly offers to find the money; but Bessie is asked to pay a price which would wreck her own and Bill's future happiness. She is tempted for the sake of her little sister, and the signal of her consent is to be the blind raised in the window of her little parlour. She is prepared to set off with her tempter, but Lucy has overheard the plan, and when the young man arrives with his car she draws down the blind, giving the signal which sends him away, and tells her sister that she would rather lose her sight for ever than that anything should happen to part Bessie and Bill. Of course, Bill comes to the rescue in the end, for he receives an exorbitant sum for diving off Hungerford Bridge for a cinematograph film, making enough to effect a very rapid cure in the case of the blind child and to pay the expenses of a first-class coster wedding.

It is a good story, of a simple and unsophisticated nature, full of a sentiment which makes a very direct appeal to the emotions, with a good deal of excellent comedy on the part of Coster Bill and the little child. There is a good dive from Hungerford Bridge, and the coster's wedding makes a bright and picturesque ending to a film which has merits quite apart from the laudable object for which it appeals. (B. and C. film. Davison Films Sales Agency. Released June 29th. Length 1,515 ft.)

The Unopened Letter.

This is an effective little drama by Bliss Milford, in which Paul King, a young law student, contracts a secret marriage with Kate Dwyer, a pretty country girl, unknown to his father, who is strongly opposed to his son entertaining any idea of marriage until after his admission into the firm. He leaves his wife with her sister Jane, and devotes himself to his father's business, until he is at last admitted into partnership. He then writes joyfully to his wife asking her to come up to town at once. But the letter arrives too late, for Kate has died in giving birth to a child, and Jane, angry at Paul's unaccountable neglect, returns his letter unopened, and brings up the baby in ignorance of its parentage.

Twenty years later the child, Louise, is a beautiful girl working as stenographer in a factory, while her aunt keeps a boarding-house. Louise has an accident, which disables her for a time, and proceedings are instituted against her employers by young Jack Osborne, who is son to Paul King's partner. When the case is brought into court, it turns out that King is the attorney for the defence. He is immediately struck with the girl's likeness to her dead mother, and when Jane Dwyer appears in the witness-box he is so overcome that he breaks down, and cannot proceed with the case, the verdict going in favour of Louise. After the trial an explanation takes place between Paul and Jane, and the father and daughter find a happiness which in future will be shared by Jack Osborne.

It is a little difficult to understand why Paul should have discontinued all communication with his wife and be in complete ignorance of the birth of his child, but accepting this as a possibility, the story contains much to interest, particularly in the second reel, which deals with Louise and her young lover. It is well and carefully staged, of fine photographic quality, and amongst an excellent company Miss Bessie Learn and Mr. Harry Beaumont make a very favourable impression. (Thomas A. Edison, Limited. Released July 13th. Length 2,065 ft.)

Severo Torelli.

This splendidly mounted and beautifully coloured film is adapted from an intensely dramatic story by Francois Coppée, and treats of the deliverance of Pisa from the oppressions of the tyrant, Spinola. Gian Torelli is the leader in a conspiracy of the nobles to overthrow Spinola and cast off the Florentine yoke. Their cause is betrayed, and Torelli with others is condemned to death. His wife, Donna Pia, a woman of striking beauty, goes to Spinola and begs her husband's life. Struck by her beauty, the licentious tyrant promises her husband's life—but at the price of her own honour. For four days she resists him, but at last, to save her husband's life, she gives way.

Torelli is released on the condition that he swears never to plot against Spinola again. He takes the oath, but declares that if ever he has a son he will hand down to him the work of freeing Pisa from its tyrant. Shortly after this young Severo Torelli is born, and for twenty years he is taught that he is to be the liberator of Pisa. The time has come to strike the blow, and Severo is chosen to stab Spinola when worshipping in his private chapel. To the surprise of Severo, it is his mother who forbids the deed, and in a dramatic scene he learns that Spinola is his father. In spite of all he determines to go on with his project, and confronts Spinola in the chapel. Though the tyrant is unarmed he defies the youth, and standing on the steps of the altar, dares him to the double crime of parricide and sacrilege. The youth recoils with horror, but Donne Pia suddenly emerges from the gloom, plunging a dagger into Spinola's heart, and while the gates are being opened to the French liberators she ends her own life by the side of the man who betrayed her.

This powerful story is well played and magnificently staged. The gorgeous interiors and the picturesque scenes in the public squares form wonderful pictures of Pisa in the fifteenth century, and the costumes and armour combine to make up a brilliant effect. The colouring is extremely delicate, and adds greatly to the effect of a genuinely artistic film. (Gaumont Company, Limited. Released June 29th. Length 2,485 ft.)

Paul Sleuth and the Mystic Seven.

This is a stirring story of many sensations, and Mr. Charles Vane as Paul Sleuth has added another interesting figure of stage detectives. Although the gang of criminals known as the Mystic Seven endeavour to invest their doings with some glamour of romance by "dressing up" when in secret conclave, in order, no doubt, that they may not be able to identify each other when carrying out their schemes in public, there is nothing of striking originality in their crimes, which consist in jewel robbery and the kidnapping of a young lady, the daughter of a millionaire and betrothed to the son of the Duke of Axminster. Their plan of departure, however, introduces a novelty, for they carry the lady away in a balloon, which is only noticed by the local postman. This official gives Sleuth a clue, and chartering an aeroplane he flies after the balloon, and springing from his machine on to the envelope, he climbs into the basket and has a terrific struggle with the leader of the gang. He is thrown out into a river, and the lady is carried off, a letter from the gang informing her father that she will be restored on payment of a very heavy ransom. Sleuth advises the payment of this sum, and the lady's fiance sets off in a motor-car with the money. The detective, however, has fitted a cinematograph camera in the headlamp of the car, and by this means obtains a record of the route travelled by the brigands. He is thus enabled to locate their den, and after another fierce struggle, part of which is carried out on the housetops, the leader is killed, the gang is captured, and Sleuth is able to restore both the lady and the banknotes to her friends and relations.

The piece is admirably played, and Sleuth, who possesses considerably more intelligence than the average stage detective, is a plausible and interesting character. The aeroplane flight after the balloon is very effectively shown, and scenes showing the development and screening of a film are novel and ingenious. The photography is good, and the film should be very popular. (Cricks film. Ruffells' Exclusives, Limited. Length 3,500 ft.)

Pimple in Society.

Riotously and wildly funny, this excellent little picture is as good a comic as we have seen for some time. Pimple himself, of course, is its chiefest delight, but, unlike so many other comics, it also has quite sufficient plot to be attractive on its own account as a madly farcical playlet. . It is intended, one would say, to be a burlesque of the popular gentleman-burglar type of drama, of which both the legitimate stage and the "pictures" have given us so many successful examples. Pimple is the Rafflesesque hero, and his exploits, carried through a wide variety of situations whose ingenuity is only exceeded by their mirth-provoking qualities, are positively as funny as anything he has hitherto done. "Pimple in Society" is fully worthy of the exceptionally clever company who have made Folly films one of the most popular brands on the market, and those who desire a really humorous entertainment of a modern length should make a point of booking this first-rate picture. (Folly film. Phœnix Film Agency. Released June 29th. Length 910 ft.)

Commercial Uses of Electricity.

Despite its rather severely educational-sounding title, this little picture is as deeply interesting and genuinely entertaining a film as we have seen. Many of these industrial films are apt to be a trifle dry, owing partly to the unimaginative manner in which their subjects are treated, and partly to difficulties of photography. "Commercial Uses of Electricity" is, however, consistently fascinating from end to end. The scope of its subject for the enterprising photographer is immediately apparent from its title, and it is, therefore, only necessary to add that the oportunities offered have been made the most of throughout. In a sense, the film is a pictorial review of the wonders achieved by electricity as applied to industrial undertakings, and of the manner in which it has revolutionised the latter. The film might have been carried a good deal further with advantage, it is true, but so far as it goes it is entirely admirable. It contains several examples of particularly fine photography under very exacting conditions. (Scientific film. Universal Film Company, Limited. Released July 2nd. Length 518 ft.)

Buying a Horse.

This is quite an irresistible absurdity—a piece of fun which appeals with such direct force to one's sense of the ridiculous that it simply takes one's gravity by storm and routs it. It is, of course, all the most sheer buffoonery. There is no vestige of a plot, nor any real attempt to suggest one. Its laughter-making qualities arise solely from its inherent funniness—a mixture of simplicity of primitive strength which are said to make for greatness—and its humour is of so universally understood a nature that we verily believe it would evoke a smile from the proverbial cat. At any rate, the being who could preserve an unmoved countenance throughout its wild merriments would be clearly proved to be lacking in even a rudimentary sense of the laughable. We want more pictures of the class which "Buying a Horse" so worthily represents. Comics like this are the salt of the picture theatre programme. They sharpen the taste and tone up the whole entertainment. (Lucrative film. Universal Film Company, Limited. Released June 22nd. Length 582 ft.)

Bill Posting.

This most excellent knockabout comic is a complete music-hall turn reproduced by film, a method of interpretation by which it loses nothing, since its effects are purely pantomimic, and do not depend at all upon speech or song. It is in one scene, the whole turn evidently having been transferred from stage to screen without alteration or adaptation of any kind, and it is calculated to evoke the heartiest merriment in the picture theatre fully as well as in the original music-hall.

Enacted by three exceedingly clever acrobatic comedians, "Bill Posting" is as genuinely funny a trifle as we have seen for a long time, and there can be no question but that it will prove immensely popular with practically any audience. Managers who want a first-rate little entertainment, for which they would have to pay at least ten times the price if they were to book it in its original form, will do well to make a point of securing this film. (Lucrative film. Universal Film Company, Limited. Released June 25th. Length 438 ft.)

The Red Carnival.

Successful picture plays have so often sprung from novels that the similarity between these two popular art forms and the effectiveness with which one may be adapted from the other are no longer in question. Did one desire any further proof of the admirable basis for a film drama offered by a suitable novel, however, one could not do better than turn to the present picture, which is a most excellent version of a book by Pierre Sales. Until further original genius is forthcoming from picture playwrights, the dependence of producers upon popular works of fiction is likely to remain an unfortunate necessity. At any rate, it is certain, as we have said, that most of the best films are adaptations, and among them, by way of further evidence, is this most absorbing Eclair picture, "The Red Carnival."

"The Red Carnival" contains practically every essential qualification for a first-rate film play. Its plot is unusual, full of deep human interest, probable, and prolific in effective incident. It is presented in a series of very beautiful and varied scenes, most of which are carefully chosen natural backgrounds, though the few studio settings are most admirably and realistically built. It is beautifully acted with the deeply expressive, finished and natural art which the French player knows so well how to command. And, to conclude the sum of merits, its photography has been supervised by a master-hand, cunning in the selection of viewpoints and in the disposition of light effects. It must be remarked that, although a document in a sub-title tells us that the earlier portion of the play takes place circa 1893, the fashions throughout are distinctly of the year 1914. But this is a small failing notable in too many excellent film plays to be commented upon very severely.

For the rest, it may be said that "The Red Carnival" is a picture sufficiently good in nearly every respect to delight almost any audience. It is characteristically a French story—and we are glad to note that there has been no foolish attempt to Anglicise it by changing the names of the characters, as is so often done—but human emotions are much the same all the world over, and, in consequence, the play's main appeal will be equally strong for all nations. It should be added that many of the remarkably beautiful scenes were taken on the Riviera, and that included amongst them is a delightful glimpse of the famous Nice Carnival. (Eclair film. Released July 9th. Length 2,827 ft.)

Four World's Champions at Cricket.

One's first emotion on seeing this excellent and extremely interesting film is a sense of surprise that it has never been done before. The extraordinary possibilities of the cinematograph in recording, for the benefit and instruction of others, the achievements and methods of men pre-eminent in art or sport or industry have never been fully tested, but the more one considers them the more fascinating do they become. By means of the present film, for example, the cricketer, amateur or professional, is enabled to enjoy a practical lesson on the four most essential departments of his game given by four of the greatest experts in these departments. Messrs. Hobbs, Hitch, Strudwick, and "Razor" Smith demonstrate the arts of batting, bowling, wicket-keeping and fielding, the pictures being taken at the historic Kennington Oval. Apart from its real educational value for keen players, the film will be of the deepest interest to all who follow cricketing doings with any degree of enthusiasm—and it is safe to say that at least 70 per cent. of the members of any picture theatre audience are lovers of England's national game. The film might be improved, one fancies, by the addition of a few more sub-titles drawing attention to particular points in each player's demonstration, but apart from this small detail, which may easily be remedied if need be, the picture is as thoroughly excellent as possible. (Motograph film. Universal Film Company, Limited. Released June 29th. Length 526 ft.)

Some very delightful films were on show on the Wednesday of last week at the London Coliseum, when we looked in at the special matinée given under the auspices of the Great Western Railway Company. Many well-known figures in the railway world were to be noted among the large audience, and all seemed to thoroughly enjoy the films shown. These embraced pictures right from the great Paddington terminus and the works at Swindon to the wonders of North Wales and the Cornish Riviera. An additional word of praise must be given to Mr. Alfred Dove's fine orchestra, and to Mr. Robert Chignell, for their share in a very enjoyable entertainment.

NON-INFLAMMABLE FILMS.

A REMARKABLE POSITION.

The proceedings of the Parliamentary Committee dealing with the London County Council's General Powers Bill were brought to a somewhat dramatic close last month, when the Chairman of the Committee requested Mr. Balfour Browne, K.C., representing the cinematograph trade to answer the following questions at the first meeting after the Whitsuntide recess:—

(a) Do you represent the whole of the film manufacturers and renters of the country?

(b) Would the film manufacturers and renters represented by you accept the principle that non-inflammable film should be used exclusively after a definite period?

(c) What in your opinion would be a reasonable period?

It is impossible to over-estimate the importance of these questions and the effect they may have on the policy of the Trade; and a meeting is to be held to discuss the situation so suddenly forced upon the industry.

Recognising that the matter is sub judice, we refrain at present from criticising or examining the questions at any length. But the fact remains that if the Trade decides to adopt the non-inflammable film, the Cinematograph Act and the regulations of the Home Office, as well as the restrictions imposed by licensing justices, become null and void—in other words, the Act itself is a dead letter, and directly non-flam films are introduced throughout the country it ceases to apply to any cinematograph theatre, thus automatically freeing them from supervision.

Such a state of affairs calls for more than passing consideration. Apart from the harassing and unnecessary restrictions of the authorities, the Cinematograph Act has undoubtedly safeguarded the interests of the public and inspired a feeling of confidence in the picture theatre. Once it ceases to have any effect, order must for a time give way to chaos until such time as Parliament considers the situation afresh. But after all, these are merely speculations, and we can only await the decision of the meeting in the hope that whatever course of action is decided on, the interests of the Trade will not suffer either now or in the future.

COMFORT for your PATRONS

IT'S the wise man who studies his patrons. Please them, and you will find it profitable advertising. Your pictures attract, but it's comfort people appreciate. Long after the pictures are forgotten, they remember the courtesy of your attendants, the clear and smoke-free atmosphere of your theatre, or some trifling incident that may have added to their enjoyment. Study comfort—it pays.

TRADE TOPICS.

On Thursday, May 28th, that magnificent new picture theatre, the Hackney Pavilion, which occupies an important position opposite the Town Hall and the Hackney Empire, was formally opened by the Mayor of Hackney. Amongst those who also attended the ceremony were the Mayors of Stoke Newington, Poplar, Shoreditch and Bethnal Green, Sir Albert Spicer, Bart., M.P., Mr. Raymond Greene, M.P., and aldermen and members of the Hackney Borough Council.

The Mayor of Hackney was invited by the architect, Mr. George Billings, to accept a presentation key from Miss Yetta Kramer, the Mayoress being presented with a bouquet by Miss Edna Billings, and the theatre was then declared open. Votes of thanks to the Mayor and Mayoress having been passed, a short programme of films, including "The Third String," an industrial subject, and a scenic picture was shown, and subsequently at 6 o'clock, the public were admitted, the entire profits of the first performance being given to the Hackney Provident Dispensary.

The theatre, which has a seating accommodation for 1,500 persons, is decorated internally in cream and gold, and a notable feature is the very beautiful marble floor and staircase in the foyer. The whole of the electrical installation was executed by the Electricity Department of the Hackney Borough Council, under the personal supervision of the engineer, Mr. L. L. Robinson, M.I.E.E., the Crypto generator having been installed by the Crypto Electrical Company, of Bermondsey Street, S.E. The seating and furnishing of the theatre were carried out by Messrs. Lazarus and Son, of 21, Great Eastern Street, and in the operating room there are two "Indomitable" projectors from the Tyler Apparatus Company.

The directors of the theatre are Messrs. M. Kramer, I. Rose and J. Sunshine. Mr. F. W. Tilley is the manager, and Herr Paul Mulder the musical director, who composed a special march for the opening ceremony.

Some considerable discussion with regard to children and cinema censorship took place at the Conference of the National Association of Head Teachers, held at Lincoln last week. Mr. E. C. Willmott, of Cardiff, presided, and was supported by the Under-Secretary for India (Mr. C. H. Roberts, M.P.). Resolutions from the York and Manchester Associations were debated with reference to cinematograph shows. The York resolution urged the necessity of the films being of a pure and elevating character, and that school children should be prohibited after 8.30 p.m. The Manchester resolution declared that many pictures were sensational and demoralising, and urged the Conference to recommend the strictest censorship of the films, adequate ventilation, accommodation, lighting and cleansing of the halls, and the prohibition of (1) smoking; (2) competitions or gifts of sweets; (3) admittance during school hours; and (4) attendance at late performances. Miss Potter (Sheffield) seconded the York motion. Mr. Wilkinson (Sunderland) moved as an amendment, that the words "unless accompanied by their parents" be added. Mr. Kaye (Liverpool), who seconded, reminded the Conference that children went to theatres with their parents at any time of night. The amendment was embodied in the York resolution, which was carried.

The Essanay Company inform us that a sample copy of "Slippery Slim and the Stork" has been either stolen or lost, and in the event of the latter supposition proving correct, they are offering a reward of £5 for information that will lead to the recovery of the film, or, if stolen, £20 will be paid for information that will lead to an arrest and conviction.

We are requested by the Vitagraph Company to state that they will be happy to forward a ticket for the Trade show on Wednesday morning, June 17th, of their great film, "A Million Bid," or "Agnes," to any bonâ-fide exhibitor or renter who may have failed to receive one. Application should be made at once. That this picture is likely to prove an epoch-making production is suggested by the fact that a well-known American picture expert saw it no less than twenty-five times and declared that he liked it better each time, whilst another equally well-known authority has stated it to be absolutely the finest picture he has ever seen.

In connection with another magnificent Vitagraph film, "Lost in Mid-Ocean," it is rather interesting to hear that a well-known firm of ship-brokers wrote to this Company a short time ago offering them several second-hand liners. They had been informed, they added, that the Vitagraph Company were buying up several steamers for cinematograph purposes.

Mr. Noel Macklin will open at the London Opera House on Monday, with an exhibition of some remarkable pictures of game hunting and natural history, taken during a recent expedition in Abyssinia and the district of the Nile. These pictures are of absorbing interest, and with a commentary lecture by a member of the expedition, should prove an unique entertainment. An extensive tour in the provinces has been arranged at the conclusion of the run at the London Opera House.

We hear that the Magnet Film Company's magnificent version of G. R. Sim's immensely popular melodrama, "The Lights o' London," is continuing to prove one of the very biggest successes this Company have ever handled. It is particularly gratifying to learn, moreover, that the film is showing itself to be a record-making production, not only for the proprietors but also for the exhibitors who book it. At Homerton, for example, although a large sum was paid for the picture, the price was covered within the first two days by the box office receipts, and equally pleasant results are recorded from all over the country. In view of these facts, it is scarcely surprising to hear that the film is being rebooked everywhere, one important circuit of theatres having taken it a second time at practically the same price as that paid for the first run. Apart from the intrinsic excellence of the film, which has already been reviewed at length in THE BIOSCOPE, the facts that the original play is now running at the Aldwych Theatre, and that the story thereof is appearing in serial form in Answers are naturally helping considerably to keep the production constantly in the public eye, whilst the name of the vastly popular author, George R. Sims, is in itself a money magnet.

A curious case arose at Scarborough a few months ago when Mr. W. Kitchingman, manager of the Aquarium, one of Scarborough's leading and best known places of entertainment, applied for a renewal of his cinematograph licence. The Aquarium is one of those seaside resort places of entertainment where there is a continual round of pleasure—different forms of amusement in different parts of the place, and the cinema has played an important part at the Aquarium for the last sixteen years. Mr. Kitchingman was told, however, that his cinema licence would be suspended at Whitsuntide unless he forfeited a liquor licence held for a bar near to the cinematograph theatre.

On Wednesday of last week, however, there was a special sitting of the licensing justices at the local police court, presided over by the Mayor (Mr. C. C. Graham) to hear an application by Mr. Kitchingman, through Mr. J. Whitfield (solicitor) for the further renewal of the Aquarium cinematograph licence.

Mr. Whitfield explained that the former application was granted subject to the imposition of certain conditions, of which he was afraid the full effect was hardly realised by the magistrates who imposed them. The pictures had been shown at the Aquarium for sixteen years. So far as his clients were aware, the pictures had been shown at the Aquarium longer than at any other place in the town, and practically continuously during that time. During the whole of that time there had never been a single complaint as to the character of the pictures shown and, so far as his clients were aware, there had never been a complaint in any other respect, and it did seem strange that conditions should be imposed which would make it impossible for pictures to be shown. The condition to which he was referring was that during any entertainment at which pictures might be shown the bar should be closed for the sale of drink. During the summer months, at the Aquarium, there was a twelve hours' continuous entertainment, and in the winter there was an entertainment from 8 p.m. till about 10.30 p.m. If that condition was to be imposed, and pictures shown, the bar would be practically closed day after day during the important times. It would mean that the licence, which was, of course, of considerable value, would be surrendered. Counsel added that a similar objection had not been raised in any other place in England.

Mr. Kitchingman gave evidence, and the licence was granted until April 5, 1915, subject to the closing of one door whilst pictures were being shown, and to this the manager agreed.

According to a Press report, Dr. Charles Stelzle, of New York, is organising a big campaign in the autumn whereby over 1,000 churches in many cities in the United States will be supplied with a weekly moving picture entertainment. Dr. Stelzle will be the managing director of a company now being incorporated, and in an interview he stated that they intend to start with sixty centres, with an operator for each, who will give one show in one church in each city each night. "In the next few years," says the Doctor, "the great stories of the Bible will be filmed in an original setting by sympathetic artistes, and mission fields in foreign lands and the United States will be interpreted through the fascinating film."

Announcing in our issue of last week that Mr Neighbour had acquired the rights of "The Cloister and the Hearth," we inadvertently gave the wrong numbers of the address of Renters, Limited, which should be 118 and 120, Wardour Street, W.

Mr. McDowell, director of the B. and C. Kinematograph Company, Limited, asks us to emphatically contradict the rumour to the effect that he has left the company.

"FLYING A."—YOU WANT THE BEST FILMS—WE HAVE THEM "BEAUTY."

We hear that the third annual Cine Trades "up-river" trip will take place on Saturday, July 18th, by the launch England from Maidenhead to Walton-on-Thames. By permission of Mr. Cecil Hepworth, the company's studios will be visited, and a souvenir group will be taken in the studios. Tickets, 10s. 6d. each, inclusive of special saloon from Paddington, lunch and tea on board, may be obtained from any member of the Committee, or from Mr. A. E. Mainwaring, hon. sec., Westfilm House, 4, Gerrard Street, W.

A well-printed and attractively written booklet has been prepared by Messrs. R. Prieur and Co., Limited, with that sensational Blaché release, "Fighting Death." The film is 3,280 ft. in length, and will be released August 3rd.

We hear that Mr. S. D. Howe has joined Messrs. Warner's Features as publicity manager.

The London Film Company announce a Trade show of their latest production, "England's Menace," at the West-end Cinema at 11.30 a.m. on Friday, the 19th inst. Though obliged to hold over a detailed notice until our next issue, a private view of this film convinces us that the London Film Company has not only selected a subject which is of vital interest to every patriotic citizen, but has treated it in a manner which will redound to the credit of the British producer.

We hear that the business which Messrs. Moss Empires, Limited, are doing with their splendid version of the famous melodrama, "The Midnight Wedding," is simply phenomenal, whilst reports from exhibitors who have booked the film show that results at the showman's end are equally satisfactory. In spite of the numerous copies they have in circulation, we learn that Messrs. Moss' Empires' first vacant date for the picture is July 9th.

THE VANOSCOPE.

It has been the pleasure of THE BIOSCOPE to frequently "notice" cinematograph projectors upon their first introduction to exhibitors, and to review their special and new features. Never before, however, have we inspected a film projector bearing so many divergencies from general practice as the new Vanoscope, a demonstration of which was given this week at the Regent Street Polytechnic.

Apart from details of construction, details that probably affect considerably the results of projection, one cinematograph projector is almost a replica of another. Certainly there is little difference in their essential features. Each has, and, indeed, depends for its successful operation upon an intermittent film-moving device and an intermittent light-operating feature—the shutter.

In the new projector, the Vanoscope, these parts are conspicuous by their absence, an entirely new principle of film projection being introduced.

Firstly, the film is continually moving across the path of light, the intermittent sprocket giving way to one continually moving. The gate, unlike the standard, is not fitted with a one-picture mask, but is of such dimensions that a maximum of two pictures can receive their illumination when passing across the light path. As can be imagined, under such conditions, with the ordinary optical system, merely a blurred projection would result. The optical system of the Vanoscope is, however, a departure from the ordinary, the light from the film reaching the projection lens viâ an arrangement of mirrors. The result in practice is that the displacement of the film in its travel across the light path is compensated, on the screen, by a movement of the mirror, which, in spite of the fact that the actual film picture is moving, always ensures the screen picture remaining stationary. To more clearly understand the principle, the projection of the picture might be compared with that of a beam of sunlight thrown from a mirror. If the mirror were kept stationary, the beam being thrown on to a screen, the movement of the sun across the sky would cause a movement of the screen spot. Now, if it were desired to maintain the reflected spot in one position, it could be done by gradually altering the angle of the mirror to compensate for the movement of the sun. This is what is done in the Vanoscope, the light rays being always concentrated through the carefully calculated compensating mirrors on to the same screen area.

The change of picture is effected by one mirror running out of the one picture's light path, a second mirror at the moment picking up the light from the next picture. A dissolving effect is therefore obtained, and the shutter dispensed with.

As may be gathered from the foregoing explanation, absolute flickerless projection, irrespective of speed, is obtained. Indeed, apart from the fact that movement was artificial, pictures we saw projected at four per second were as pleasing to the eye as when accelerated to the standard speed.

The advantages of a continuously moving band of film in place of one intermittently moving can be appreciated by all, as the life of both projector and film are considerably increased.

We consider the Vanoscope has great possibilities, and trust shortly to have an opportunity of reporting in detail the construction of the mechanism.

MR. WILLIAM N. SELIG writes from Chicago, under date of May 26th :——

"I have just returned from a 7,000 mile trip to the Coast and back, and find everywhere that 'Kathlyn' is still exciting the interest of the public, and if possible going even better now than it did when we started the series in January."

Why do you hesitate about booking this tremendous sensation?

Many are booking it; they are the real practical showmen. They know what is going to please their public.

The success with which this picture has been received far surpasses our expectations. We want everyone to share in this good thing, so if you can't arrange a booking with your renter write to us.

BOOK IT TO-DAY.

The Lord Mayor and President Poincaré at the Gaumont Palace.

(By Our Special Correspondent, John Cher)

Last Friday night the Gaumont Palace Hippodrome was closed to the public, and the great building the scene of a brilliant soirée de gala, given by the City of Paris in honour of Sir T. Vansittart Bowater—Lord Mayor of London—the Aldermen of the City of London, and the representatives of the City of Westminster and the London County Council.

The Gaumont Palace is now officially one of the sights of Paris. In its way it ranks with the Opera House, both buildings being officially recognised as the respective homes of cinematography and music. It was the first occasion on which the President of the Republic, his military and civil escorts, and the Municipal Council of Paris had attended a picture theatre.

It was a splendid idea on the part of those in charge of the festivities to remember the cinematograph and its universal appeal to the people of all nations. It was a splendid thing for the cinematograph trade in general to be honoured in such a manner, and finally, it reflected the highest praise on Monsieur Leon Gaumont for having conceived and perfected a moving picture show worthy of the presence of President Poincaré and his esteemed guests from across the Channel.

The magnificent hall was transformed into a veritable palace. Three hundred fauteuils were taken away in order to clear sufficient space for the construction of the presidential box, in which were hung superb Gobelin tapestries, worth over two thousand francs. An enormous sum of money was expended on the masses of flowers and palms which decorated the vast auditorium from floor to ceiling. Every tier was lined with gigantic garlands of fresh roses of all colours. Add to this the blaze of artistic little electric lamps and groups of women dressed in the smartest of Paris creations and you will have a more or less faithful reproduction of the picture which the Palace presented last Friday night when the President of the Republic and the Lord Mayor were received by Monsieur Gaumont.

The seven specially selected films constituted a "perfect cinematograph programme." Seldom, indeed, I should imagine, has such a collection of moving pictures been exhibited at a single entertainment. It is worthy of note that the orchestral and choral accompaniments contributed in a very large measure to the success of the spectacle. This was especially noticeable in "The Song of the Sea," a musical exhibition of some of the finest seascapes ever cinematographed. The visitors were first shown the "Gaumont Graphic's" report of their visit to the French capital. Then followed a display of Gaumontcolor pictures, including the review before the King at Windsor. In the second part of the entertainment, further trichrome films of flowers, views of Holland and Belgium, and President Poincaré and the King of Spain were projected. Scientific cinematography was represented by a picture entitled "In the Depths of the Ocean." Two of the most popular Gaumont productions "The Voice of Patriotism" and "L'Agonie de Byzance," completed the programme.

The company were immensely enthusiastic, and in conversation with some of those present I learnt that most of the guests from London were amazed at the standard of perfection of Gaumont films, the Gaumont way of exhibiting and the Palace Hippodrome.

BUSY AT BIRMINGHAM.

Messrs. Beck and Windibank, Limited, of Clement Street, Birmingham, have just completed some very extensive furnishing contracts, notably at the Picture House, Rice Lane, Liverpool; the Majestic Picture House, Daulby Street, Liverpool; and the Alhambra Palace, Normacot, Longton.

ESSANAY

NEW SAMPLES of Attractions showing in Essanay's London Theatre, June 15th to 18th.

EVERY ONE A WINNER. YOU WILL BOOK THESE.

Remember "Autumn Love"? Here's Another.

Released 3rd AUGUST.

YARN TANGLE.

About 996 Ft.

An out of the ordinary photoplay that is a dainty offering. Its unfolding of events in the lives of those concerned is pleasing in the extreme. As the yarn is untangled, so the ultimate consummation weaves into a finale of love and understanding. A superior attraction to offer to audiences as a relief from tragedy, comedy and melodrama.

Genuine Humour.

Released 3rd AUGUST.

WRONG ALL AROUND.

About 994 Ft.

This comedy is a laugh-producer, and goes with rapid action. The theme of the plot is jealousy on the part of the husband. The story has been cleverly manipulated into a good offering.

This Dramatic Attraction will make you like Essanay.

Released 6th AUGUST.

SEEDS OF CHAOS.

About 1984 Ft.

A finely constructed story of a crooked business man, who fastens his crime upon a young bookkeeper. The story gets hold of the observer at the start, and pulls him along without cessation to the close. During her husband's incarceration the bookkeeper's wife, who has become a nurse, attends the business man through a serious illness, and his heart is touched with her kindness. He appears at the trial scene, and confesses his guilt. Raphley Holmes gives a good impersonation of the leading character.

12, 6, AND 2 SHEET POSTERS.

World's Greatest Adventures. Better than ever.

Released 6th AUGUST.

BRONCHO BILLY'S CLOSE CALL.

About 994 Ft.

Adroit touches have given this picture a lot of good, legitimate comedy, which leavens the strong dramatic action. Broncho Billy's Western pals are led to believe that their idols' home has been despoiled. The dénouement comes when the supposed "despoiler" turns out to be the bride's brother. This Western drama will please any house.

6 SHEET AND QUAD CROWN POSTERS.

Released 6th AUGUST.

CURING A HUSBAND.

About 815 Ft.

This is a very interesting photoplay of home life, the marring elements of happiness being the addiction of the husband and father to drink. His wife pleads with him unsuccessfully, as he imagines he cannot stop it. After a strenuous night, he becomes convinced to the contrary, and swears off. Well made and well acted in every respect. Wallace Beery, Baby Garrity and Beverley Bayne are the principals.

"In the Shadow of the Throne."

A CATHOLIC PROTEST.

This remarkable picture, which is being handled by the Power's Feature Film Company, Limited, has occasioned a good deal of excitement during its exhibition in Dublin, being made the subject of a controversy which has resulted in much letter writing and discussion, and a disturbance which had its sequel in the Northern police court, when two young men were fined 5s. each for their manner of protest. A letter was published in The Freeman's Journal on June 2nd in which the writer describes his impressions of a convent scene which takes place towards the end of the play, and asks "How long is Catholic Dublin going to stand this sort of thing?" Alderman Farrell, the managing director of the Phibsboro' Picture House, wrote to the Freeman's Journal offering to pay £100 to any city charity if Mr. Donelly's version of the scene was proved correct, and Mr. J. A. King, the manager of the theatre, after denying Mr. Donelly's statements, invited the paper to view the picture. The letters were published with a footnote by the editor, accepting without hesitation the statements of Alderman Farrell and Mr. J. A. King, and unreservedly apologising for the publication of Mr. Donelly's letter.

On June 4th a special detailed description of the film was printed in the Freeman's Journal, in which the writer, while stating that Mr. Donelly has imagined things that were not in the pictures at all, refers to the convent scene as a "travesty" of convent life, points out in detail the ritual as a "very objectionable feature," and considers that the seclusion of a convent is not a proper subject for the cinema show.

This article and Mr. Donelly's protest seem to have inspired the two young men, for on Friday night they attended the theatre, and after an appeal to all Catholics to leave the house threw ink over the screen and the orchestra, and being charged at the police court, defended their action as instigated by conscientious scruples and cited the article and protest as a proof that the film had been condemned by press and public. The men had decided views on the subject of film censorship, which, however, received no encouragement from the presiding magistrate. They seemed to consider that the action of the management in rebooking this film for three days extra was done entirely to spite the Dublin public, not realising perhaps that these protests may have evoked a desire in other people to see and judge for themselves.

A correspondent to the Evening Herald probably gets nearest the truth when he points out that the scene is intended to be symbolical rather than realistic, and merely suggests the sacrifice made by the girl for the sake of the man she loves.

"FLYING A." YOU WANT THE BEST FILMS WE HAVE THEM "BEAUTY."

NOTES FROM SURREY.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The Karsino, Mr. Fred. Karno's popular riverside resort on Tagg's Island, was reopened to the public last week, and thronged as it was by hundreds of visitors, this home of gaiety presented a picturesque scene. Many improvements have been effected since the last visitor was ferried across last autumn, and Mr. Karno, by the introduction of startling innovations, hopes this season so widely extend the popularity of this entrancing island, with its galaxy of pleasing colours during the day, and its thousands of twinkling fairy-lights at night-time. I was one of the audience at the entertainment in the spacious auditorium in the Palm Court on Saturday evening, and I was struck by the popularity with the audience of the judicious selection of cinematograph pictures which was screened. Mr. Karno evidently recognises the hold the cinema has on all classes of people, and during the river season some of the best that can be procured will be seen at the Karsino, and form a strong feature in the programme.

The number of cinema houses in Kingston has been reduced by one, the doors of the Royal County Theatre, which has been run for some time past as a cinematograph theatre by the Pleasing Picture Syndicate, having been closed. The cinematograph plant has been sold by order of the High Sheriff. This should form a good opening for a reliable company, with a live manager, as I understand the proprietors of the theatre are open to negotiate for a lease of the building which makes an eminently suitable cinema house. Given sufficient capital and careful management, there should still be a successful career ahead for the Royal County.

The other three houses in the royal borough continue to cater well for the public taste, appealing as they have the advantage of being, to a very large population in the town and surrounding district. At the Cinema Palace the leading features of the week-end were "'Neath the Lion's Paw," "The Delayed Special," and "The Conspirators," with "The Art of the Furrier" as the interest film. This week "A Tragedy in the Clouds" heads the bill during the early part of the week, with "Her Husband's Friend" and "The Message of the Sun-Dial" as supporting films. At the end of the week a film depicting the horrors of war is to be the special attraction. Even the allurements of the river fail to affect the popularity of this house, where a wise selection of the best pictures never fail to attract patrons.

In the cool shades of the Coliseum, Mr. Knight has been showing the sensational Eastern drama, "Brand of Evil," while this week he invites the public to come to see "Thieves and the Cross," which he bills as his leading feature. His other careful selections should make a strong appeal, including, as they do, several good films.

Both the Picture Theatre at Kingston and the Coronation Hall at Surbiton continue to be managed with discretion, and a discriminating estimate of popular taste in pictures. Both are doing satisfactory business, though handicapped no doubt by the strong appeal outside sport makes at this season in riverside towns. One wise manager in the district, I notice, points out to possible patrons the pleasure to be gained by a visit to his theatre at the close of the day, when the river and the cricket-field have supplied a surfeit of strenuous exercise. In his comfortable seats, and under the soothing influence of My Lady Nicotine, he claims may be found the most ideal form of enjoyment after a hard day at the wicket or the sculls.

At the Talbot at Richmond Mr. Smithers has been doing good business with "The Tragedy of the Three Ms," a stirring circus story which was the principal feature in a lengthy programme of the world's best pictures. This week his special film is "In the Hands of London Crooks," which he has been showing three times each day. The Talbot is excellently situated in Richmond's principal and busiest street, and never fails to attract the attention of the passer-by.

The Sheen Picturedrome has finished the week with "The Parasite" and "Bunny's Mistake," while the leading feature in a full programme this week is "Protea."

HALIFAX HINTS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The popularity of the picture houses in Halifax and district has never been more pronounced than last holiday week, there having been continuous streams to the various shows throughout the afternoons and evenings.

Last week a splendid holiday programme was shown at the Electric Theatre, Ward's End, and excellent business was the result. "A Leap for Life" proved a great attraction, and other films of equal merit went to make up a very attractive bill of fare. The children's "Beauty Contest," arranged by Mr. Leslie Stansfield, proved a great success. There were over 100 entries, and the contestants were filmed, the audience being invited to vote by numbers. For the current week Mr. Stansfield is putting on a fine programme, including "Love and Vengeance."

The series of stories by W. W. Jacobs, which are being screened week by week at the Picture House, Ward's End, continue to attract large audiences. The top-liner for the holidays was "The Bosun's Mate." "The Devil's Eye" and "Fantomas" are to take premier place during this week.

Mr. Harmsworth, manager of the de Luxe, Northgate, has provided his numerous patrons with some excellent "stuff" lately, and brisk business has been the rule. The screening of the local Catholic Whitsuntide procession proved a great draw. "The Shattered Crown" was also a capable top-liner.

Good houses are continuing to patronise the Palladium, King Cross. The fare last week by no means lacked its original excellence, and rare good taste is shown in the choice of films. "The Hearts of Women" and "The Opium Smoker" were successful in drawing large attendances. Mr. Job has secured "Eileen of Erin" and "On Secret Service" for the current week.

Mr. Reg. Watson, manager of the Ideal, Raglan Street, informs me of splendid business during the holidays. He has had a new screen fixed recently, which greatly improves the appearance of his pictures.

On my visit to Sowerby Bridge, I witnessed large attendances both at the Cosy and the Town Hall. Another picture house is to be opened here in the near future, the National Electric Theatres, Limited, having secured the premises; they are also the proprietors of the Electric Theatre, Halifax.

THE VITAGRAPH PICTURES.

A NEW SERIES.

Among the most important of the Vitagraph Company's forthcoming releases is a new monthly series, of which "Chanler Rao, Criminal Expert," is the first number. If, as we understand, the succeeding numbers are continued on the same line, we have the promise of a series of more than usual novelty and interest.

Chanler Rao is a Hindu hypnotist and magician, who visits a well-known doctor, in the full regalia of his profession, suffering from the slight ill-effects of a sword he has swallowed in the ordinary course of business. Dr. Browne treats the case successfully, accepting no fee beyond a trifling exhibition of Indian magic.

Chanler Rao is so grateful for the doctor's services that when Mrs. Thornton, Dr. Browne's sister, loses a valuable ring, the magician arrives at the house and announces his intention of recovering the property and bringing the culprit to justice. This he accomplishes in a manner which is decidedly ingenious and sufficiently mysterious and effective, letting Dr. Browne and the spectator into his confidence at the end of the film, and showing that his magic is merely the result of commonsense, keen observation, and theatrical effect.

The treatment is novel, and the story is more ingenious and much more plausible than many detective films, and if the interest is as well maintained in subsequent issues the series should have a very wide popularity.

Mr. Ned Finley, with a very excellent make-up, is quite impressive as the wily Oriental, and Mr. Charles Wellesley's pleasant personality is well suited in the part of Dr. Warren Browne.

The feature films of the week are both strongly dramatic, the first, "Her Husband," showing the evil consequences of an ill-considered and imprudent marriage. Dora Allen, a young girl at boarding school, allows Tom Harcourt, a military cadet, to forge a letter of excuse from her father in order that they may pay a visit to the theatre. She arrives back after the gates are closed, and to avoid discovery of the trick, she is persuaded to marry Harcourt by the method which is rendered so fatally easy in the States. Disowned by her father, Harcourt employs his talent in penmanship to replenish his exhausted funds, but his fraud is soon discovered, and a term of imprisonment is his punishment. Rather than apply to her father, his wife finds employment under another name as typist in a city office. Her husband follows her on his release from prison, and finding her locking up the safe, helps himself to some notes and attempts to escape. He has been traced to the office, however, by his wife's father, and in endeavouring to escape he falls down the shaft of the lift and is killed. Dora is reconciled to her father, and the story concludes with the suggestion of her future happiness in the love of her employer.

It is a well-constructed and interesting drama, admirably played by Miss Kimball Young as Dora and Mr. Darwin Karr as the degenerate Harcourt. Mr. James Lackaye contributes a fine piece of character as Henry Allen, and Mr. Earle Williams plays John Darrell, Dora's employer, with his usual distinction.

"His Mother's Portrait" is a pretty story of sentiment dealing with art student life in New York. A young painter, Ralph Dryden, enters for a portrait competition, and selects as his subject an old lady from whom he receives some kindness during an illness caused by an accident during a holiday trip. During the sittings he learns that her son, David Blair, is also an art student, but has not been doing well, and his mother is deeply grieved at his long silence. Dryden promises to do what he can to find the boy on his return to New York. Blair is in very reduced circumstances, and falling into the hands of a rival of Dryden's, he is induced to destroy the portrait which Dryden intends for the competition. He enters the studio at night, and uncovering the canvas, is amazed to find the portrait of his own mother. Overcome with remorse, he is discovered by Dryden, who, for the sake of his mother, forgives his premeditated crime and offers to help him in the future.

It is quite a charming story, and is illustrated by many picturesque scenes, those depicting David's life as a boy in the country being specially beautiful and fine examples of photography. The principal parts are taken by Miss Mary Maurice, who gives a pathetic picture of the mother, and Mr. James Morrison, who extracts some sympathy for his fine performance of the unsuccessful art student. The other parts are in excellent hands, and the whole production shows that careful attention to detail and dramatic effect which is always a distinguishing feature of the Vitagraph studio.

A GREAT ARTISTIC COMBINE.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. SAMUEL GOLDFISH.

On Monday we had the pleasure of a short talk with Mr. Samuel Goldfish, treasurer and general manager of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, who arrived in this country on Saturday last. In the course of this interview Mr. Goldfish gave us particulars of what is probably one of the biggest schemes, both commercially and artistically, yet conceived in connection with the cinematograph industry. We had this interview in Mr. Baber's private office at the Famous Players building in Charing Cross Road—the sanctum in which so many important deals have already been decided—and, as our readers will gather from the report of Mr. Goldfish's remarks which we print below, the Famous Players Film Company are intimately concerned in the enterprise outlined therein.

Youthful in appearance, slight in build, and charmingly courteous in manner, Mr. Goldfish is the possessor of a curiously complex personality. He impresses one as being a keen and capable business man who is also an idealist and an artist. In him are combined, one would say, the rarely united qualities of strong determination and vivid imagination. He is the sort of man who not only dreams great things, but also realises them in fact and carries them through to the end.

MR. JESSE L. LASKY AND MR. DAVID BELASCO.

One gathers at once that Mr. Goldfish is a true believer in the cinematograph. He is not one of those who regard the moving picture industry merely as a source of temporary commercial profit. He has faith in its future as the medium for a great art which will take a permanent and prominent place among the other great arts of the world. His desire is to develop the higher possibilities of the picture play towards their utmost limits; not to be content with the easy catch-penny successes of the moment, with which so many men, to the great detriment of the industry, have apparently been well satisfied.

"The important piece of news which I have to tell you," commenced Mr. Goldfish, "concerns the affiliation which has just been completed in America between my firm, the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, the Famous Players Film Company, and the Bosworth Film Company. I would point out clearly, in the first place, that this affiliation concerns only the commercial sides of these three great firms and not the artistic sides. Each company will continue to produce its films independently as before, but the three companies' output will be released to exhibitors from two central offices (one in England and one in America), thus forming a huge combined programme containing about 104 important productions a year in all. The object of my present visit to England is to arrange for the establishment of the central office here — we shall operate from the Famous Players Company's London headquarters — and to assist in setting the scheme in motion. The new system will come into force about September 1st next. We have not yet decided on the precise method we shall favour in marketing the films, but we shall either issue them through some reliable existing renting house, or else we shall rent them direct to the exhibitor ourselves. In neither case shall we sell any of our films outright—they are too valuable to be sold—but shall only hire them.

"It is scarcely necessary for me to comment to you upon the very great importance of the three companies concerned in this combination. Commercially, they involve together a capital of over 21,000,000 dollars, and artistically—well, you already know the artistic value of the Famous Players films and of the merit of the other two firms' productions you will shortly be able to judge for yourself. My firm, the Jesse L. Lasky Company, have just completed an affiliation with David Belasco, America's greatest producer and dramatist, whereby we shall be able to film all his famous international successes, including "The Girl of the Golden West," "The Darling of the Gods," "The Rose of the Ranch," "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," "The White Man," "Brewster's Millions," etc., etc. We shall send out companies all over the world in order to secure the correct backgrounds and realistic atmosphere for these plays—"The Darling of the Gods," for example, will be done in Japan; another company is going to Egypt to do "The Arab," and a third to Honolulu—and we shall spare no expense whatsoever to render them the very finest pictures ever made. The Bosworth Company hold the sole cinematograph rights for Jack London's famous novels, including "The Sea Wolf," "Burning Daylight," and "John Barleycorn"—Mr. London is now in Alaska superintending the production of "The Sea Wolf"—and afterwards they will adapt other well-known works, the names of which I cannot for the moment give you. The Famous Players Film Company, as you are already aware, have the rights for all Charles Frohman's plays, together with those of numerous other works of the highest importance.

"This combined programme, as you can imagine, will represent the very cream of the world's productions. Film-making on such a scale has never been attempted before. The exhibitor who books our pictures—and we shall be able to offer him two regularly every week—will secure the world's greatest plays and novels in pictorial form acted in dozens of different countries by the world's greatest players. We shall be essentially an international organisation and our productions will all be of international interest. Besides doing adaptations, moreover, we shall also produce original plays written specially for the screen by famous playwrights of every nationality, whose services we are retaining. And we realise that, as time goes on, we shall have to depend more and more upon original work.

"I need not say that we have deep faith in the cinematograph as a serious artistic instrument, and in the artistic discrimination of the public for whose pleasure our productions will be designed. We believe that the public wants the best films, and we intend to supply them. The man who shows good pictures does good business. No industry can have any real dignity or solidarity if it is built up on inferior work. The future of the cinematograph trade depends only upon the power of the exhibitor to give the public really fine pictures, and it is our object to put such pictures within the exhibitor's reach. You have many wonderfully beautiful theatres here, as I have already had time to realise, and I also know that the British public is singularly enlightened and discerning—particularly that portion of it which is still inclined to hold aloof from the picture theatres, but which will come in permanently as soon as its highest demands are regularly satisfied. I should like to say, by the way, how very deeply my own firm and the Bosworth Company feel indebted to the Famous Players Company for the magnificent work they have done as pioneers of high-class productions in this country. Mr. Baber has had no easy task here in England, but he has succeeded magnificently, and his splendid efforts to introduce the finer type of film to the public in a worthy manner will be enormously to our advantage when we start.

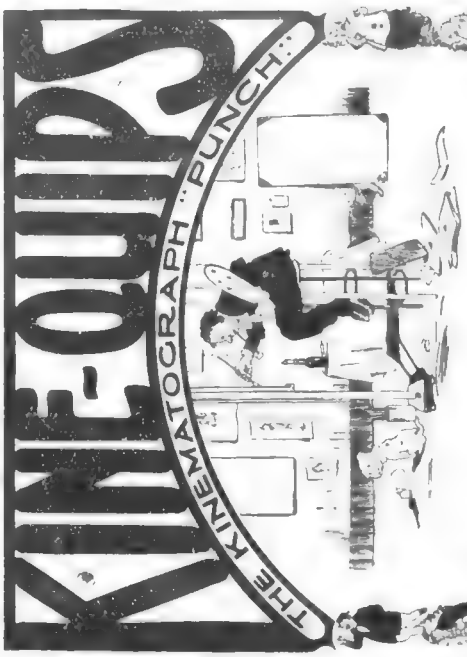
"I don't want to say too much about our films in advance, because I am not a believer in the system of attempting to dazzle people with big names nor to make capital out of reputations. We ask you to judge our deeds, not our words, and I shall be quite content to leave our films to stand on their own intrinsic merits."

SWANSEA AND DISTRICT.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

At the Elysium, Swansea, the management provided, as usual, a most up-to-date programme, which resulted in excellent houses throughout the week. The services of Mr. Edward Davies, the famous Carl Rosa operatic tenor, were secured, and his renderings of popular Welsh songs were greatly appreciated. Special attractions were "The Vavasour Ball," "The Price of a Ruby" and "Her Father's Daughter."

Big holiday crowds were present at the Theatre Royal, Swansea, during the early part of the week, when a splendid array of pictures was shown, including "The Wild Guardian," "The Indian's Gratitude" and "The Camera's Testimony."



As a picture palace, the Castle Cinema, Swansea, is still amongst the most popular of the Swansea halls. Mr. A. T. Bowden, the manager, had, amongst other films, "Whither Hatred Leads," "The Telephone," "Zanda's Vengeance" and "The Doctor's Trust."

The Uplands Cinema, Swansea, continues to be a very popular nightly picture resort, and crowded audiences during the week enjoyed "The Love Story of her Youth" and "Her Father's Silent Partner," in addition to other educational and entertaining films.

The Whit-Monday programme at the Oxford was worthy of the large measure of patronage which the popular hall received. The high standard of excellence was maintained, and a splendid three hours' entertainment included "The Brute," "The Vacant Chair" and "Maud's Love Affair."

One is always assured of a tip-top programme at the Alpha Cinema, Morriston, and the fare provided during Whit-week was quite up to the usual high standard associated with this increasingly popular hall. Mr. F. Daveners spares no pains in endeavouring to give his patrons the best. "The Battle of Eldersbush Gulch," "Midst Raging Beasts" and the "Blight of Wealth" were amongst the best features shown during the week.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

PATHE SUCCESSES AT GLASGOW.

The Exclusive department of Messrs. Pathé's Glasgow Branch is extremely busy at present. There was a good attendance at the Trade shows of "Jim, the Cracksman" and "Within the Lion's Reach," while "The Mysterious Count," the second of the "Rocambole" series, also drew together a fine gathering of exhibitors. Messrs. Pathé's private projecting theatre is ideal for ist uses, and the convenient adjoining rooms at the service of exhibitors are a great advantage.

ON THE SOUTH-EAST COAST.

With a large influx of visitors for Whitsuntide all along the coast the cinemas have again had a very successful holiday season. Folkestone did well with "The World, the Flesh and the Devil," shown at the Central, George Lane, also "The Curse of War" as the attraction for the Bank-holiday.—"The Wilderness Mail" was the chief picture with varieties at the Playhouse.—"Love's Sunset" was the cream of a splendid programme at the Electric, supported by "The Tango of Death." "Rebecca's Wedding Day" amongst the comics produced unrestrained laughter. —"On Secret Service" was one of the specials at the Pier Pavilion which opens on Sundays. Councillor Forsyth invited the whole of the scholars from Sidney Street School to a special performance of pictures on Saturday afternoon last, and over 800 happy children fully enjoyed the treat provided.—The holiday attractions at Ramsgate were responsible for capacity business. "The Golden Beetle" proved a big draw at the Queen's, and similar success was achieved with "The Murdoch Trial." "He Would a-Hunting Go" was responsible for much amusement. Mr. Bert Parker included a topical film of the big temperance demonstration held last Thursday.—"The Price of a Necklace" drew the applause of crowded houses at the King's, while "The Tudor Princess" also proved very acceptable. "Love's Old Dream" appeared amongst many capital comedies.—Mr. A. Waldock has no reason to complain of patronage at the Star. "The Harper Mystery," "The Duke's Talisman" and "Because of a Hat," included in a strong programme, made a big appeal to good audiences.—Mr. Fred C. Dew, lessee of the Marina, opened for the season with a good holiday programme, which included the inimitable "Pimple." Redecorated throughout, the building has a bright appearance and the management will again be in the hands of Mr. Hubert Harward.—Broadstairs is only a small town, but in spite of the three or four other attractions to the Cinema Mr. Fred Fumagalli made good with "Amid Raging Beasts," "Great Fire of London" and "His Second Wife."—Margate had a record holiday. The Parade Cinema commenced the season by showing continuously from 2.30 p.m "Hearts of Women" and "Stanton's Last Fling" were well received. "Love and Dynamite" and "Story of a Crime," amongst many excellent comics, were responsible for much laughter.—At the Clifton Cinema, Mr. W. Ellis screened "The Fight for the Great Black Diamond" to big houses.—The Lounge, Cliftonville, provided an unusually large bill of fare, the principal top-liners being "An American Citizen," "The Murdoch Trial," "'Mid Kentucky Hills" and "Out of the Depths."—At the Town Hall, Westgate, "One Fair Daughter" and "Henry VIII." were pleasing items.

REDUCTION IN PRICE.

Owing to the improvements Film Preservative, Limited, have been able to make in their new machinery, they are able to turn out the work much more quickly, whilst the quality is fully maintained. In these circumstances the company have decided to reduce their price to 16s. per 1,000 ft.

PRESENTATION AT SHEFFIELD.

Mr. C. W. Ramsay, who for ten years was manager at the Alexandra Theatre, Sheffield, now being demolished, has been presented with a purse of gold by his friends. Mr. Ramsay had other interests in Sheffield entertainment houses, but those who had appreciated his qualities at the Alexandra and Royal were anxious to mark in suitable fashion his severance from old associations. In the course of his reply Mr. Ramsay expressed regret that street improvements had necessitated the demolition of the old house, but thought that another theatre would soon take its place.

ASHFORD AMUSEMENTS.

At the Cinema de Luxe a capital holiday programme was arranged by Mr. Edmund J. Taylor, which resulted in capacity business. "Old St. Paul's" made a special appeal to those attending the Fire Brigade's tournament, and was much appreciated. "The Harper Mystery" was a popular item for the latter part of the week. Last Tuesday there was a grand benefit in aid of the Railway Works Football Club, and during the evening Mr. R. E. L. Maunsell presented the Kent League Championship Shield and medals to the club.—At the Palace one is always sure of seeing a good show, and the holiday arrangements left nothing to be desired. "The Curse" and the "Horrors of War" attracted large crowds. On Whit-Monday the management of both houses arranged a special performance for children.

ROUND THE CAMBRIDGE CINEMAS.

There was a large number of visitors to Cambridge during Whitsun week, and the picture palaces received additional patronage. The management of the Playhouse have arranged a particularly attractive programme for this—the "May Week."—A distinct novelty is the engagement of Mlle. Katrina, the young violinist, and Paul van der Vyer, the pianist-composer. The films screened were "'Neath the Lion's Paw," "He Would a Wooing Go," "Asking for Trouble," and "Pa and Ma Elope." The programme was changed to-day (Thursday), "Fitzhugh's Ride" topping the bill. Other pictures included "The House of Distemperley," "The Measure of a Man," "Caught In His Own Net," and "Love and Dynamite." Special pictures of the Cambridge May Races will be shown all next week. —An equally attractive programme was presented at the Electric, "the star" pictures included "Aching Hearts," "An Eternal Parting" and "The Brigadier's Stripes." For the first three days of this week, "Black Roderick, the Poacher," heads the bill, "A Redskin's Mercy" taking its place later.—"A Brother's Mistake" and "The Tell-tale Stains" are attracting large crowds at the New Palace, East Road.

A PETERBORO' PAR.

"The Lady of Monsoreau" was the chief attraction the latter part of the week at the Broadway Kinema. Mr. J. E. Draper has secured "Sixty Years a Queen" for an early date.

MEXICAN WAR DRAMAS.

The war in Mexico is serving as a setting for dramas. One of the Majestic films soon to be released is called "Arms and the Gringo." It deals with the smuggling of arms into Mexico, and has a pretty love story.

PICTURES OF AUSTRALIAN LIFE.

The touring cinematograph show organised by the Publicity Department of the Australian High Commissioner's Office, is proving very attractive, and large crowds have witnessed the exhibition of films of Australian life.

NEW HALL AT HIRWAIN.

The Hirwain Picture Palace, Limited, are inviting tenders for the erection of a picture theatre and billiard hall at Hirwain. The secretary of the new concern is Mr. E. Berryman, 14, Glebeland Street, Merthyr, and the architect Mr. T. Edmund Rees, M.S.A., Bank Chambers, Merthyr.

BROMSGROVE BITS.

The Playhouse is doing well with an up-to-date programme. The proprietor, Mr. T. McDermott, has been in possession of the house for three years. The house provides seating accommodation for 400. It is now in course of redecoration, and is being fitted with tip-up seats. The entrance is of an imposing character, while there are emergency exits in abundance. The screen is a very large one, on which there is a good throw from a Brockliss Model A machine.—The Electric Picture Palace is also securing excellent patronage. The assistant manager, Mr. H. Perks, changes his programme four times weekly. The seating provides for between 300 to 400 persons. The prices of admission are 2d., 4d. and 6d.

BOOTLE BREVITIES.

After a brief experiment, the management of the Seaforth Palladium have decided to discontinue their continuous performances from 6.45 to 10.45 p.m., and have reverted to the old arrangement—one house nightly. Mr. W. J. Moxon, manager of the Palladium, will give a benefit performance in aid of the Empress of Ireland disaster fund.—The spacious auditorium of the Bootle Picture House, which accommodates 1,600 people, has been packed every evening during the holidays and records have been created.—The new Rice Lane Picture House has become an immediate success, the latest programme including such pictures as "Joan of Arc," "The Opium Smoker," "The Turning Point," "House of Fear," etc. Continuous performances are given on Saturday evenings.—Mr. George Prince has been showing to crowded audiences at Princes Theatre exclusive pictures of the Bootle May Day demonstration. Mr. Prince has announced his intention of giving a performance in aid of the local relatives of those who lost their lives in the Empress of Ireland disaster. Fifteen star vaudeville turns and a special pictorial programme have been arranged, and the proceeds of the entertainment will be handed to the Mayor of Bootle's fund.—At the Bootle Picture Palace Mr. W. H. Green has been exhibiting some unusually strong attractions, among which have been "At the Mercy of Niagara," "The Curse of War," "Spartacus," etc.

A EUGENIC DRAMA.

We are informed that the arrangements for the New York presentation of "The Escape" are well advanced. This is a special seven-reel "Eugenic" film with an exceptional cast, and it will be presented in New York as a theatrical attraction at a large playhouse in the Time Square district.

NEW HALL AT GIRVAN.

Girvan's second new hall, which is to be known as the Picture House, was opened to the public on Wednesday. The new hall was built from plans prepared by Mr. Johnstone, Troon, and the work was almost entirely carried out by local workmen. The hall measures 80 ft. by 40 ft., and seats 700 people. The contractors for the electrical installation were Messrs. Chalmers, Limited, of Glasgow, and the furnishings were supplied by Messrs. Paterson, Limited, of the same city. The stage is constructed so that it can be utilised for variety and theatrical performances, as well as for its primary purpose of cinematograph entertainments. The resident manager is Mr. Welsh, formerly of Glasgow and Edinburgh.

TEES-SIDE TOPICS.

During the past few months there have been two complete conversions of music-hall variety shows into picture shows, and now it is announced that a third hall, the Stockton Hippodrome, will, in future, be a mixed programme—one half of the show being for pictures, and the other for variety turns. This hall changed hands some time ago, and the new proprietors are a company known as the North-Eastern Entertainments, Limited, of which Mr. George Stanton is the secretary, and Mr. A. Firth the general manager. The two feature films this week are "Love and Vengeance" and "The Carrier Pigeon."—Perhaps the smartest management move in Stockton was accomplished last week by Mr. C. S. Byrant, of the Empire Theatre. During Whit week-end, the Mecca of local cyclists is Richmond, which was invaded by 5,000 visitors. Arrangements were made for cinematograph views of the comic costume procession, sketches, etc., with the result that the best film of local interest was screened at the hall. The picture created extraordinary interest, and although the hall seats over 2,000 people, it was packed to the doors on Thursday night, the evening which was set apart for the cyclists themselves.—Keystone comedies have become popular favourites at Stockton, and "His Sister's Kids" and "Across the Alley" attracted a good deal of attention at the Globe. "Children of Destiny," "The Lost Heir" and "Sultan's Diamond" completed an unusually interesting programme.—A full orchestra of eleven performers, under the direction of Mr. Henry J. Waldron, is in vogue at the Hippodrome, Middlesbrough, where matinées are being given daily. The star picture last week were "The British Army" and "Love and Vengeance."—At the Grand Electric, Mr. Eric Williams, the elocutionist and actor, visited the Grand Opera House in his speaking pictures, "The Surgeon's Child" and "Hubert and Arthur." He was a tremendous attraction. In addition, "Give Us This Day——" and "Hearts Adrift" were screened. Electric fans have been installed at the Grand Electric, where a splendid programme was exhibited. The films were "The Master of the Mine," "Rebecca's Wedding Day," "An Accidental Clue," and several laughable comics. "The Lady of Monsoreau," "Chicot the Jester" and "The Murdoch Trial" were three brilliant top-liners shown at the Court Kinema and Arcade Cinema, Darlington.

PERSHORE LINES.

The Electric Theatre has done a fine holiday business during the past week. Mr. Spiers provided an excellent programme, including "Prisoner of the Harem" and "The Trap."

A BIG "FLYING A."

Under the title of "In the Footprints of Mozart," the American Film Manufacturing Company are producing a two-part drama, visualising the life of the famous composer.

"THE GREAT POISON MYSTERY."

As will be seen from their advertisement in this week's issue, the Feature Supply Company, Limited, are giving a Trade show of their latest exclusive, "The Great Poison Mystery," on the 23rd inst. at the Electric Pavilion, Shaftesbury Avenue, W., at 11.30 a.m.

NO SUNDAY PERFORMANCES AT WINDSOR.

The Windsor borough magistrates, at a recent special meeting, have resolved, by a majority, that on and after February 2, 1915, the date on which all cinematograph licences in the borough will expire—no exhibition of moving pictures shall take place on any Sunday, Christmas Day or Good Friday, and that a condition to that effect be endorsed on all licences granted, whether by any renewal or otherwise.

A PROSPEROUS THEATRE.

The second annual general meeting of the Apollo Kinematic Theatre Company (Southsea), Limited, held recently, was presided over by Mr. W. Stevenson, chairman of the directors. The accounts showed a very satisfactory year's work. After writing off £430 for preliminary expenses, the directors recommended payment of a dividend of 10 per cent. It was reported that the capital recently asked for for extending the theatre was over-subscribed. When the extension is completed the seating capacity will be greatly enlarged, doing away with the waiting queue outside. Mr. H. F. Hann was reappointed a director.

SOUTH WALES SNIPPETS.

The Workmen's Hall, Ton Pentre, enjoys excellent business under the management of Mr. Bert Salway. This hall, the first picture house in the immediate vicinity, is exceedingly popular and has accommodation for 750 persons. The business side of this hall is controlled by colliery workmen, and the proceeds are devoted entirely to charity.—An excellent programme was presented at the Opera House, Treherbert, last week. This house is controlled by Messrs. Poole's, and has lately been thoroughly renovated and altered, and the latest system of ventilation has been installed. The seating accommodation is for 850, and a Tyler's Ernemann is in vogue. Recent bookings have included the following: "Heroes of the Mine," "Pen Talks" and "The Derby." The Opera House advertises a two hours' programme without a repeat.—Strong programmes are the order of the day at the Grand Cinema, Porth. Mr. George Roberts believes in novel advertising.—Mr. John Bowen, manager of the Penydarren Cinema, has issued a cleverly written and extremely novel advertisement in the form of a Parliamentary election address, drawing attention to the excellent programme provided for his patrons, and in particular to "The World, The Flesh, and the Devil." Kinemacolor has been booked at the picture house for the season, and the pictures will be changed twice weekly. Other features screened this week include "The Black Spot" and "The Staircase of Death." The star film screened last week was "The Golden Beetle."

FAMOUS ARTIST'S WILL.

Sir Hubert von Herkomer left estate valued for probate, as far as at present can be ascertained, at £42,319 gross, with net personalty £24,538.

BEVERLEY JOTTINGS.

The little East Riding Minster town of Beverley supports two cinemas—the only places of entertainment in the town. Since being taken over by the Hull and County Film Agency, the Coliseum, previously known as the Assembly Rooms, has again changed hands, and is now under the control of Mr. J. Young Brown, of Hull, who is in a position to keep the cinema well supplied with two days' programmes.—No less popular, however, is the Picture Playhouse, in the Market Place, where Messrs. Holderness and Simmons have been entertaining large houses with "The Tattooed Will," "Satan's Castle," and "No Quarter," as well as a number of well-selected comedies.

ENTERPRISE AT EALING.

Last week was the Gala festival week at the Broadway Cinema, and large audiences appreciated the host of attractions provided. "Zaza," "Vengeance is Mine," and "His Guiding Star" were the outstanding pictures, while "Memora, the Living Encylopædia," proved very popular. Excellent music was rendered by the orchestra. "The Doctor's Honour" and "The Bond that Binds Not" are billed for this week, and the soloists include Miss Elsa Hope—from Queen's Hall. This theatre is now closed on Sundays.—"Paul Sleuth and the Mystic Seven" and "A Winter's Tale" were featured last week at the Walpole. This week's programmes include "Traitors to Their King" and "The Eye of the Government."—Patrons of the Kinema have a treat in store for them this week in "Lights o' London," which is being starred for the whole week. "Fools of Society," "The Claws that Kill" and "The Clue of the Wax Vesta" were the outstanding features here last week.—"A Dungeon of Steel" and "A Secret of the Sea" were two powerful exclusives to be seen at the de Luxe. "Betrothed" and "The Black Gang" have been secured as exclusives by the management for this week.

SCARBOROUGH SHOWS.

The most interesting event in local cinematograph circles this week has been the reversing of a decision by the Borough Magistrate with regard to the cinema licence of the Aquarium. The licence was suspended, but it has now been renewed for a further twelve months.—Very large audiences have been seeing "Sapho" at the Olympia this week. This was the item of chief interest for the week, but the management had several other excellent subjects.—There has been an interesting event at the Palladium, for which Mr. Catley secured a film, entitled "Nature's Zoo." The films were taken by Mr. Cherry Kearton, and during the week they have been graphically described at the Palladium by Mr. Mervyn McPherson.—Mr. Whitaker's new cinema, the Grand Picture House, is already firmly established and doing good business on the South Foreshore. "The World, the Flesh and the Devil" was shown for the first time in Scarborough last week, and created a most favourable impression. "An Old Sea Dog" was shown in the same programme, as well as the Keystone comedy, "Cohen Saves the Flag."—"The Missing Millionaire" has been the "top-liner" at Messrs. E. L. Garside and Quinton Gibson's Theatre Royal Cinema, St. Thomas Street.—At the Picturedrome, Mr. Quinton Gibson has been featuring "The Broken Vow," supporting which were "The Pedlar," "Mutual Friends," "A Rent in the Rear," "Sammy Comes into Money," and "Broncho Billy's Oath."

Mary Burke, of the Secret Service, goes into Alaska after a defaulter. She finds him, and lays a trap for him, into which he falls. But the Deputy Marshal, instead of arresting him, tells him that his brother, whose guilt he has assumed, has confessed.

PORTSMOUTH PARS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

In my tour of the picture halls I found that the special attractions provided by the different managements for Whitsun week had invariably been well supported, in spite of the commonly accepted fact that fine weather—such as prevailed last week—is against a picture house rather than for it. Many of the theatres in Portsmouth during the summer draw heavily from holiday visitors, who do not spend all their time on the beach, but weave into their day's programme a stroll through Southsea's main streets with a "pop" into the picture theatre. I know many managers are expecting to do increasing business in this direction as the summer advances and the thousands of day trippers arrive here from all parts.

I have not heard that any further practical stage has been reached yet in regard to a cinema in the London Road, where a plot of land has for some time been secured as the proposed site for a picture house. The managers of the existing houses—some twenty-six altogether—naturally hold the opinion that the present number is large enough for Portsmouth's requirements, but on the authority of the Mayor the population increases at the rate of 5,000 per year, so, as the picture palace has undoubtedly come to stay, it is feasible that with more people there will be more demand for picture houses. But at the present there is no sign of any definite addition in London Road.

At the popular Apollo, an extensive enlargement is proceeding, in order to meet the demand on the seating capacity. Next month it is proposed to close the theatre for two weeks in order to connect the new part with the old. When the extension is completed there will be accommodation for nearly 1,000 people. Mr. Donohue, the manager, has had much anxiety in having to turn would-be patrons away, and to avoid this in the enlarged building it is intended to allot at least 400 seats to 3d. holders. It is proposed to put in a handsome new ceiling, with large electric fans to draw out all the foul air. High-class films are invariably exhibited at this theatre. "A Daughter of the Hills" and Conan Doyle's detective story, "Reygate Squires" did not fail to draw last week, and "Sapho," exclusively shown this week, has been attracting crowded houses.

Mr. Noël Hobart, manager at the Picture House in Commercial Road, has secured "America to Europe by Airship," for exclusive presentation at this sumptuous house the whole of this week. Incidentally, it may be mentioned that the Royal Counties' Agricultural Show is being held at Portsmouth this week and special programmes are being produced at many halls. The Picture House is one. "America to Europe by Airship" has taken an exceptionally well wherever shown. The piece de resistance at this house last week-end was "The Gambler."

Mr. Farmer has got a very strong programme for show week at the Victoria Hall. It includes "Justice" and "The Lure of London." The Whitsun holiday attractions, which pleased big audiences were "The Eternal Duel" and "The £1,000,000 Will Case."

In the quieter district of Stamshaw Road, the North End Cinerama has been doing well with "Amidst Raging Beasts," "Jerry's Mother-in-Law" and other Keystone and Vitagraph comedies. "The Seneschal's Diamond" was the star picture in the fore part of this week, with an exclusive picture of military life in the Wild West, "Arizona," as a strong attraction this week-end.

At the Arundel Street Cinema, where comedy and drama are blended so effectively, "The Extra Hand" and "Why Girls Leave Home" were the top-liners last week. A number of thrilling dramatic subjects are being screened this week.

THE BRIGHTON HALLS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Whitsuntide has found Brighton as full as usually is at holiday seasons, and the picture theatres have been doing great business. I looked in at the Palladium the other evening, and found Mr. J. L. Crown very busy and scarcely a vacant seat to be seen. The star film being shown was "Rocambole: The Terror of Paris"—the first of the "Knave of Hearts Club" series. The musical selections of the Ladies' Viennese Orchestra were admirably played.

Mr. H. B. Parkinson was looking very cheerful when I called at the Academy, West Street, last week, and certainly the size of the "house" was not such as to cause feelings of depression. The programme evidently suited the tastes of patrons of the hall. "The Midnight Wedding" was one of the most appreciated items, and I have seldom heard such roars of laughter as those which greeted the misadventures of "Pimple" in the ""The Battle of Gettysownback." Mr. Parkinson has had some very interesting productions lately, among them being "The World, the Flesh and the Devil," "Kroonstadt" and "The Lights o' London."

With characteristic energy, Mr. Norris J. Coverdale is devoting himself to the task of extending the popularity of the Court, of which Mr. W. J. Grimes is the lessee. The entertainments are a judicious blending of variety and pictures. "The Circus Tragedy," "The Great Leap" and "The Opium Smoker" were included in last week's programmes. Dainty teas are served free at matinées, and Mr. J. W. Slatter's orchestra, and Signor Bioletti's violin solos are much appreciated attractions.

The spacious Grand Concert Hall Picture Palace in West Street, which can accommodate something like 2,000 people, maintains its popularity under Mr. Cecil Frere's experienced management. This week's feature films include "The Tragedy of the Three M's," "Fighters of the Plains," "Bird of Prey" and "Under the Black Flag." Mr. Hermann Hill, L.R.A.M., has just been engaged to give violin solos during the performances.

Mr. G. Yate Ashwell, who is busy with the formation of the Theatres' Protection Association, to which I recently alluded, has been providing some first-rate attractions at the Duke of York's. Last week he was showing, among others, "The Greater Sin," "Wings of Death" and "Black Roderick, the Poacher."

Mr. George Block has been featuring "The First Law of Nature" and "The Black Diamond" at the Coronation and Imperial Theatres with excellent results.—The Hove Cinema's star films last week were "Love's Sacrifice" and "Sold for a Title." Holiday programmes at the de Luxe included "Justice."

THE "IMPERSONATOR."

This is an adaptation in three reels of Miss Mary Imlay Taylor's novel, and a very interesting story, full of effective situations and clever characterisation, has been so skilfully adapted as to bring out the best qualities of the book with the directness and simplicity of construction which is essential to a film drama.

Mary Lang is the daughter of a celebrated actress, but since the death of her mother she has been brought up in the strict and narrow seclusion of a convent. A beautiful girl, she has always craved for a life of luxury and refinement, a dream which her prospects in life afford little chance of fulfilment. Her opportunity is afforded when an artist friend, May Hadding, receives a letter from a rich aunt, whom she has never seen, inviting her to pay her a long visit. May Hadding is not prepossessing in appearance, and in order to impress the far-distant aunt she has sent her a photograph of the beautiful Mary Lang, never imagining that circumstances might arise which would expose the deception. May is not anxious to leave her work, and still less anxious that her wealthy aunt should know of her deception, so she manages to persuade Mary to go to America in her place and pass herself off as Mrs. Whiting's niece. Mary is dazzled by the prospect of a short life of luxury, and tries to believe that the fraud is a harmless joke which can injure nobody, and for a time thoroughly enjoys the new life and the admiration which she receives on all hands. It is when she finds that a sober and distinguished young Congressman is deeply in love with her that she realises the falsity of her position and the necessity for terminating her visit without delay. She is rendered still more uneasy from the fact that May writes demanding remittances, while an unscrupulous artist whom she has known in Paris turns up and informs Mary that he will denounce her as an impostor unless she introduces him into the aristocratic circle in which she has obtained admittance.

While Mary is hesitating between confession and flight, May turns up unexpectedly to claim her rights, but Mary takes the initiative, and in a strong scene explains the situation to Mrs. Whiting, who, indignant at the trick, very naturally turns both girls out of the house. Here the real romance of Mary's life only begins, for she is received into the house of a lady at the request of a certain Count Portucarrero, who has taken an unusual interest in Mary since her first appearance, and who on his deathbed reveals the fact that she is his daughter and heiress to his name and large possessions. Mary is thus able to reinstate herself in society and the respect of Congressman Ryland, and retort on Mrs. Whiting in a manner which is perhaps natural, but shows little gratitude for considerable hospitality in the past.

Mary is such a charming and beautiful creature as played by Miss Gertrude McCoy that her little deception is easily forgiven, and she engages the sympathy of the spectator throughout the length of the play. The construction is admirable, and the events, which follow in natural sequence, work up effectively to the climax, and the end, with its touch of romance, is unexpected and eminently satisfactory. In a long cast, in which every part is given full value, Mr. MacDermott is picturesque as the Count Portucarrera, Mr. Augustus Phillips gives proper stolidity to the somewhat ponderous young Congressman, and Mrs. William Bechtel gives dramatic effect to Mrs. Whiting's stucco aristocracy, while a clever bit of character is the artist played by Mr. Duncan McRae.

The mounting of the piece is elaborate, giving an accurate picture of the social aspect of political life, and reflecting the greatest credit on Mr. Brabin's stage management, while the photography is of the quality which the Edison Company has led us to expect. (Edison film. Released July 20th. Length 3,025 ft.)

By JOHN CHER.

The Oliver Typewriter Company in Paris has just had prepared a little moving picture play demonstrating the value of knowledge gained at the firm's typewriting and shorthand school. The heroine's father is stricken with illness, and the family, deprived of the breadwinner, faced with poverty. The young and pretty daughter buys a paper. Amongst the advertisements she finds that of the Oliver Company. "Make a living by typewriting and stenography," she reads. The ad. "goes home," and a visit to the business school follows. Diligent study, coupled with proficient teaching, soon create an efficient "Oliver" girl capable of earning more than sufficient to restore happiness to the home. The film is excellently acted, and should prove a valuable advertisement.

Monsieur Dureau, editor of the Cine Journal, who has just returned from a visit to Lyons, waxes enthusiastic over the cinematograph section of the exhibition at that town. He reports that a fitting place has been accorded to the Trade which represents 12,000,000,000 frs. of capital and occupies third place in the list of international commerce. As already reported in these pages, a special series of films showing the silk industry is a feature of the silk town exhibition. In addition, the leading firms of the world are well represented, as also are the producers, operators, camera men, and artistes.

At the third annual banquet of the Cinematographic Federation of the Midi of France, trenchant remarks were made concerning the mayoral censorship of films and proposed new taxes. Monsieur Colomies, representative of the French Exhibitors' Association, said: "We must remember that the cinematograph has been killed in Germany by the application of these various taxes. Belgium is threatened for the same reason. That is why all question of competition must be put aside in order that we may firmly unite to fight this common enemy."

The Success Film Company has been formed for the purpose of buying, renting, and selling films. The firm's offices are located at 5, rue de Provence.

Mlle. C. Halley, the new lady film dealer, has secured the concession for the productions of Film Fabriken Danmark of Copenhagen.

Monsieur George Lordier, director of the Grandes Films Populaires, has taken the extensive studios recently occupied by the Lux Company. Last Tuesday M. Lordier gave a house warming, or perhaps I should say studio warming, party. Numerous well-known film personalities were present. Before lunch the visitors witnessed the enaction of the leading scene in a coming Grande Populaire feature, in the course of which that charming and very popular Parisienne actress, Mlle. Alice de Tender, danced the tango and the tres moutarde.

Last Sunday Madame Sarah Bernhardt announced her intention of withdrawing her application for an injunction of the Court against M. Edmond Rostand in order to prevent the exhibition of a moving picture version of "L'Aiglon." Thus ended an incident in which pathos was not lacking. It will be remembered that in a recent interview, the famous actress mentioned the fact that a film of "L'Aiglon" had been made without her assistance. From her words one could see that her feelings were somewhat bitter concerning the matter. One can sympathise with Madame Bernhardt, who now sees her most cherished play presented on the cinematograph at the Chatelet Theatre, which stands exactly opposite the Sarah Bernhardt Theatre. One can understand her pang of regret when she heard the great drama was to be perpetuated in moving pictures without her co-operation—a co-operation which, for the most part, made "L'Aiglon" world famous.

Madame Bernhardt claimed that the drama belonged to the repertory of her theatre, and that she was responsible for its uninterrupted representation in France and abroad, and that "L'Aiglon" was at the present time being played in Paris; consequently no other representation of the piece was permissible.

Since it was first produced in 1900, "L'Aiglon" has realised in receipts in Paris alone the sum of 5,000,000 frs., 500,000 frs. (£20,000) of which has been paid to Edmond Rostand.

M. Rostand said that he would not defend the case. He wrote to Madame Bernhardt offering to concede to her his rights in the film, which would amount to £8,000. To this the actress replied that she did not wish Edmond Rostand's money, but merely desired to protect his and her rights. She had previously asked M. Rostand to have the name of the film altered, a request he was not able to grant. Then followed the withdrawal of the action.

SNIPPETS FROM SOUTHPORT.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Southport during last week afforded striking testimony to the ever-increasing and widespread popularity of cinema theatres. On Whit Monday over 100,000 visitors entered the town. They hailed from such centres of industry as Wigan, Burnley, etc., and one would have thought that when they arrived at the "Garden City of the World"—for such is Southport termed—they would have spent every available minute out of doors. But such was not the case. The day was gloriously fine, and yet there were record attendances at all the afternoon performances at the picture theatres.

"Full value for money" has been a motto which the Picture Palace management have never failed to live up to, and there is no possibility of deterioration so long as Mr. H. Kennedy uses such good taste in selecting the films, and Mrs. Parker manages the house in such an efficient way. This particular house has seen many of Sir A. Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes tales told in picture form, but none proved as pleasurable as the one screened the week preceding Whitsuntide, for "The Copper Beeches" possesses features which, when screened, make the story peculiarly thrilling and interesting. This fine "house filler" was succeeded by "The Blood of Our Fathers," which, too, was well received. Such films as "The Master of the Mine," "The Gambler," "Lights o' London," and others worthy of being placed in the same category, never fail to attract large numbers, and screened at this popular house during Whit week, were seen by hundreds.

The patronage bestowed upon the Picturedrome, Southport's oldest picture theatre in point of years, has increased very considerably since Mr. Geoffrey Hill arrived to look after it. His wide experience enables him to accurately gauge the desires of his patrons, and he consistently places before them programmes of exceptional merit. I need only mention three recent top-liners to show that he knows films possessing magnetic properties, and secures them. "Spartacus" gave way to "A Father's Judgment," which in turn was displaced by "At the Mercy of Niagara," all being well supported. Long queues have been noticed repeatedly outside this hall during the holiday season, and Mr. Hill tells me that he has had some record houses.

Mr. William Walker apparently revels in exclusives. One, "The Derby," screened a day or two after the great race was run, appealed to many, and was the means of materially helping to fill the commodius Nevill Street picture house. "Through the Clouds" and "Justice" have been other two exclusives here. "Offer the general public something fresh, and let it be good," remarked Mr. Walker to me one afternoon when I had accepted his invitation to step inside, "and they will not fail to take advantage of the offer." So far as the N.S.P.P. is concerned, this at any rate, is absolutely true, for Mr. Walker's efforts to please are appreciated week by week by a large proportion of the residents, and as his house is situated in the principal "trippers'" street, he catches a good many of the visitors.

Undoubtedly, the Empire Picture Theatre is one of the favourite haunts of the thousands and thousands who come to Southport. In chatting with Mr. Frederick M. Jones, the manager, the other day, he mentioned that practically all who visit the ball room visit the cinema performances. "Business," he said, "has been brisker than at Easter, and you will remember at that time I told you I did not know where to [illegible] the people who wanted to see the pictures." I may say Mr. Jones secures as "stars" films of the following calibre:—"Transported," "In the Dredger's Claw," "Tragedy of Ambition" and "On Secret Service."

The system of ventilation at the Palladium is absolutely perfect, and it was delightful to step inside this palatial house during the spell of hot weather, and with no discomfiture owing to excessive heat, enjoy the good pictures which Mr. Frederick Clive undoubtedly supplies for his afternoon matinées, which I am glad to be able to say are very well attended.

The management of the Birkdale Palace need have no fear of causing dissatisfaction amongst the select and large clientèle if they maintain the present high level. Last week many were attracted by "The Lure of Gold" and "Love or a Throne."

BITS FROM BOLTON.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

There were unrivalled scenes in the Queen's on Wednesday evening last when Mr. W. E. Wright, with commendable enterprise, introduced a new and welcome feature in "Keystone Night," and during the evening only comedies by this well-known company were projected. It had also been arranged that "rag-time" airs should be the only music of the evening, the words of the choruses being thrown on the screen. A collection for a new Institute for the Blind realised £3 os. 4d. The evening was a great success.

The cinematograph versions of W. W. Jacobs stories, which are exclusive to the Electric Theatre, have brought fame to the hall and incidentally much patronage. The latest of this series is "The Bosun's Mate," and it proved a real laughter producer. "The Story of the Willow Pattern," "The Master of the Mine," "Tree Felling in California," "Rings and Robbers" and "Oh, You Puppy" were other subjects of interest. "Mother" was also a top-liner.

The most talked of picture of the last fortnight has been "Cherry Kearton—the Man who Dared." This Mr. Hart, of the Bee Hive, booked for Whitweek, and he was justified in his selection. Mr. J. T. Taylor, who has accompanied Mr. Kearton on some of his travels, gave an interesting lecture each time the film was projected.—Captain Row, at the Gem, arranged some excellent programmes, and these included "The Streets of New York," "The Measure of a Man" and "His Way of Winning Her." "The Curse of War" was one of the principal items at the Princess Cinema, followed by "Old Curiosity Shop." Each attracted more than usual attention.

There were large Whitsuntide crowds up Daubhill, Mr. Parnell, at the Rumworth Theatre, screening some first-class pictures. "Mabel's Awful Mistake" kept everyone merry and bright. "The Brand of Cain," "In the Slums" and "Fisher Folk" were also greatly enjoyed. The "singing picture" here draws many patrons, and "My Southern Maid" was excellent.—"The White Lie" was the best thing shown at the Atlas, and was well seconded by "The Opium Smoker," "The Clue" and "Broncho Billy and the Bad Man."—At the Queen's, "The Curse of War" interested, as also did "The Claws that Kill" and "A Daughter of Satan." "When Pimple Goes to Paris" and "Scotland for Ever" were the humorous pictures.

LINCOLNSHIRE NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Boston is certainly up-to-date in pictures, and the proprietors of the various houses have every reason to be satisfied with the generous support they receive. I have referred in these notes on more than one occasion to the manner in which Mr. Aspland Howden caters for his numerous patrons at both Boston and Spalding, and I understand this popular proprietor-manager is showing still further enterprise by carrying out extensive improvements at the Electric Palace, Boston. This house closed on Monday for a fortnight for the work of redecorating, reseating, etc., to be carried out. Mr. Howden has done big business recently with "A Tragedy of the Clouds," "The Wastrel," "The Curse of War" and "The Black Spot," in addition to the popular "Pathé Gazette," Sherlock Holmes series, etc. I must also add a word of praise to the fine programmes rendered by Mr. Godber's orchestra.

No less successful have been the efforts of the managements of the new Scala and Quay Picture Houses, and it has been no uncommon thing to see the announcement "standing room only." At the Scala, "The Golden Beetle" delighted full houses, and other popular screenings have been "The Isle of Adventure," "The Opium Smoker" and "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves." This week "The Vengeance of Mapa" and "The Greed of Gold" are the features.—At the Quay "The Iron Trail," "Prisoner of the Harem," "The Man Who Vanished" and "The Dead Weight" are only a few of the latest successes. This week are being screened "Captain Kidd" and "The Buried Crime."

Mr. Will Gadsby, the proprietor-manager of the Central Hall, Lincoln, has the happy knack of picking out the right films to present to his numerous patrons, and his hall has evidently made a name for itself as one of the most popular places of amusement in the city. The comfort of visitors is considered in every way, and the children are specially catered for. "'Neath the Lion's Paw" and "The Great Turf Sensation" have been received with much enthusiasm by full houses..—At the Corn Exchange, Lincoln, business is being well maintained, and the specially selected Sunday programmes are much appreciated. Mr. Kadwell has recently featured "The Murdoch Trial," "Back to Life" and "The Duchess of Dantzig." The Lindum orchestra, under the personal direction of Mr. R. Franklyn Layton, is always pleased to render any selections requested by patrons, and this courtesy is frequently taken advantage of.—"The House of Fear" and "The Outcast" have been very popular at the Grand, High Street.

Mr. Sanderson continues to place the "best" before his well-satisfied patrons at the King's Hall, and the orchestra here is a great feature of entertainment. Sherlock Holmes dramas have been well received at the King's, and these have always been backed by other first-class items. Mr. Sanderson included "The Curse of Greed," "Why Girls Leave Home," "Stolen Tapestries," and the last of "Who Will Marry Mary?" on one programme the first three days of this week.

As usual, music and pictures at the Spalding Picture House have been "top-hole." "The Curse of War," "The Wastrel," "A Tragedy in the Clouds" and "Lord of the Jungle" have been Mr. Howden's latest selections.

NOTTINGHAM & DISTRICT NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Had those carping critics who are ever ready to proclaim the waning popularity of the picture palace seen the relentless manner in which the numerous halls in Nottingham were invaded last week, early and late, they would certainly find the facts all against such an assumption. 'Tis true cinema-lovers in the city have become much more critical, are no longer satisfied with the "blood and thunder" programmes of the past. What is more to the point, those responsible for the successful running of the "houses" know this, and I have yet to find the manager who is not satisfied with the returns when the programmes given are up-to-date and well-chosen. It is pretty obvious there are many who take an optimistic view of the future, and are prepared to put their money in new ventures in the district. At the present time it is contemplated building four up-to-date picture houses at Nottingham—Bulwell, Hyson Green, Denman Street, and Ilkeston Road, but of these I will give details later.

The coming of the King to Nottingham and the surrounding neighbourhood this month is the absorbing topic of the moment, and great preparations are being made throughout the county to give the Royal party a fitting welcome. I understand advantage will be taken of the opportunity to produce topical films of the chief events, and these will undoubtedly prove immense draws at the enterprising houses where they are to be immediately screened.

That ingenious device, known as Kinoplastikon, has aroused not a little curiosity and interest, and the management of the Scala are to be complimented upon their enterprise. Last week this optical illusion brought George Robey and Albert Chevalier, apparently in the flesh, on to the stage, and these famous artistes were heard respectively in "Good Queen Bess" and "The Future Mrs. 'Awkins." The synchronisation of spectacle and sound is something to wonder at. "The Black Diamond" was an engrossing film of the "straight" order.

At the new Parliament Picture House, Mr. Morley continues to do good business, and is screening some excellent features. "Germinal," "A Hateful Bondage," "The Daughter of the Hills" and "The Flames of Vengeance" are a few of the latest leading lines.

"The Filly" alone was good enough to fill the spacious Regent Hall last week, and "The Old Curiosity Shop" accounted for as big business as did "David Copperfield" a short time ago. Another pictorial production from the classics at the Regent has been Oliver Goldsmith's "The Vicar of Wakefield."

Drama, comedy, topical and travel subjects of the latest and best can always be relied on at the popular Victoria, and here Mr. Green's genial personality and sound judgment have been in no small degree responsible for the immense popularity this house has always maintained.

Mr. Sydney Gunn presents a strong and varied programme at the Globe, Trent Bridge, and if any one doubts my assertion as to the continued popularity of the "pictures" in Nottingham, I recommend him to pay a visit to the Globe any evening in the week.

Although Whitsuntide has passed, it is still what might be termed "cinema weather" in Hull, and all the various cinemas appear to be at the zenith of their success. What it will be like next year at this time, with probably half-a-dozen more in the field, one can hardly surmise. The other two picture palaces opened last week have been claiming their fare share of patronage, and if any others have suffered at all, it has not been perceptible so far. Even in the supposed over-crowded centre of the city there does not seem to be any disadvantage, even though there are three cinemas within speaking range, and two within a stone's throw of the others. This is undoubtedly a clear indication of the still increasing popularity of the cinema. It can hardly be realised, but one can only hope that when the others on the way are opened the result will be equally satisfactory all round. After being present at the opening of both the Strand and the Tower, curiosity led me to take a tour round the sites of the other proposed cinemas. The work of erecting the Monica has advanced wonderfully since my last visit to Newland, and it can already be seen that this suburb of the city will have reason to be proud of its own picture palace. The Sherburn Street scheme, in the Holderness Road district, is going up with equal rapidity, and is still nearer completion than the latter. In Prospect Street the Central Picture House premises have been vacated by the old tenant, but work has not been commenced so far. The Empire, on the site of which the Majestic will be built, is totally demolished. As to the Beverley Road and Anlaby Road schemes, these can be regarded as certain. Thus, there are six more picture palaces to come within the city boundary this year.

Last week there was a very interesting event at the Kinema, Anlaby Road, where, at the invitation of the Sheriff of Hull (Mr. E. O. Ohlson), all the inmates of the Beverley Road workhouse were entertained. The guests of the Sheriff were driven to the Kinema in special tramcars, and they thoroughly enjoyed the programme. Mr. E. Chapman, the manager, made excellent arrangements for their comfort, and screened plenty of "comics," which were just what the old folk liked. Owing to the exceptional brightness of the pictures here, they met with the great appreciation of those whose eyes were not as good as they used to be. This week, by the way, Mr. Chapman has been screening "The River's Secret" and "Fantomas," as the principal attractions.

I had the pleasure of an evening at the Strand last week, and was delighted with the excellent pictures that had been secured with their two Gaumont machines in so short a time. The pianoforte accompaniment was worthy of commendation. The principal film was "Justice." I hear that "A Terrible Night at Sea" has produced equally good results this week.

Since the alterations took place a few weeks ago, the de Luxe Anlaby Road, has been one of the most comfortable and cosiest places of entertainment in the district, and with a run of first-release programmes Mr. R. S. Comber has had every reason to be gratified with results. "The Mystery of the Dover Express" has been a great attraction during the last few days, and amongst the specials for the present week are "Hearts Adrift" and "The Scar," two excellent dramas. Despite increased opposition the de Luxe, under such capable management as that of Mr. Comber, should continue to flourish.

With his usual enterprise, Mr. Tom Bogue, of the Prince's Hall, George Street, has secured for this week under "exclusive rights," "Beauty and the Barge." The reputation of this film, or the story it depicts, has gone before it, and its success was therefore assured. I noticed there were big crowds flocking into the Prince's whilst this fine film was on the screen. For the latter part of the week, commencing Thursday, "His Guiding Star" did "star" duty. The educational matinées given by arrangement with Messrs. Pathé Frères, are, I understand, still proving very successful.

The Sherlock Holmes series has all along been very popular at the Holderness Hall, where Mr. Norman Wilkinson has this week been screening "The Adventures of Copper Beeches," another of the series. This was for the first half of the week, and in the latter part Mr. Wilkinson had the fine picture, "The Curse of War," which promises to be the success it has been elsewhere. The Edison Kinetophone is still playing exclusively at the Holderness Hall, and all the latest "talking picture" subjects continue to be shown.

Paying a visit to the Cleveland Picture House on Saturday night, I was able to judge for myself how the people of the populous Wilmington district appreciate a really good place of entertainment. There is no doubt at all that the Cleveland is conducted on lines equal to those of the cinemas in the centre of the city, and there was nothing whatever to marr my pleasure during my short stay. With an excellent manager such as Mr. F. H. Malam, who successfully engineered the Kinema, Anlaby Road, on its first opening its doors to the public, nothing else could be expected, and I am confident that no more suitable manager could have been chosen. The management are making every endeavour to keep the programmes up to the high level of the more central picture palaces, and the bookings include the following, several of which will have been shown by the time these notes are in print: "The Golden Beetle," "The Murdoch Trial," "Lieut. Pimple's Dash to the Pole," "A Little Child Shall Lead Them," "Whimsical Threads of Destiny" and "Lt. Rose and the Sealed Orders," the latter of which will be shown under "exclusive" rights. Good business has been done during the present week with "The Gun-Maker of Moscow," "His Faithful Servant," and others. I hear that Mr. Malam is making special arrangements for securing a film of the forthcoming royal visit to Hull, which will be shown exclusively at the Cleveland. During the past week or two there has been run a special series of educational competitions, which have produced a large number of competitors.

THE BIOSCOPE IN INDIA.

THREE STAGES IN ITS HISTORY.

By WALTER EXLEY.

The evolution of the bioscope in Bombay, and, indeed, throughout India, has been rapid, and its triumphal onward march has never been checked for one single moment. Ten years ago moving pictures were unknown as a form of entertainment in this country; to-day in the Presidency cities there are picture palaces at almost every street corner, while in most of the up-country towns, in which formerly rare visits from concert and theatrical parties were the only amusements, there are now one or more bioscope shows in which regular performances are given.

It might be interesting to go back to the beginning, and trace the history and development of the moving picture in India. In this history there are three distinct stages or epochs—the first, or tent, stage, in which the pictures were shown in a tent; the second, or picture palace stage; and the present, or moving picture-cum-variety epoch. Once upon a time, and that not very long ago, we sun-baked sojourners in this dry and dusty land of Ind were quite satisfied—nay, more, were delighted—to be able to go to a tent and there see moving pictures of the great world; later on we demanded proper theatres or picture palaces, with electric fans overhead and plush-seated tip-up chairs in which to take our evening's entertainment; and now, so blase have we become, we demand a mixture of variety and picture show, or we say, in effect, that we won't play! In regard to the latter remark, however, I must make it clear that it applies chiefly to the Europeans in this country. In the native quarters of Bombay—in which sultry city I for my sins am at present stationed—there are picture houses pure and simple which are flourishing, but in the European quarter the managers of the theatres have found that their patrons demand both pictures and variety turns, and what the public want, that, of course, has to be provided. The same remarks apply in a somewhat lesser degree to Calcutta, although there are in the European quarter two picture palaces which rely on films and films alone to attract their clientele, and both of which, I am informed, are doing very well.

It is not quite certain in which city the bioscope was first established. Bombay claims the honour, and so does Calcutta, with Madras a bad third and Rangoon fourth. Whether Bombay was first, or Calcutta, I cannot say, but I should say it was something very much in the nature of a dead heat. The first bioscope show in Bombay was established in 1906 in a tent on the maidan (an open space common to all Indian cities), and at or about the same time a similar tent was erected on the Calcutta maidan. Within a week or two two more tents were erected in Bombay, and through the cold weather there were three bioscope entertainments in Bombay. When it became too hot to continue to show in the tent, two of the companies closed down, but the third took a hall and gave shows through the hot weather and the rains. In the following cold weather the tents were again resorted to, but by the time the monsoon season came round again two new theatres which had been erected were ready for occupation, and thus the cinematograph came into its own.

Encouraged by the success of the picture palace, many people, mostly Indians, who knew nothing about the entertainment business, went into management, and picture theatres sprang up like mushrooms all over the town. The result of this reckless rush of amateurs into the amusement catering world need hardly be told. Some of the picture theatres which sprang up in a night disappeared in a day, as it were; some of the companies which formed them have been wound up under the supervision of the courts, and some others are still occupying the time of the courts, and providing money for the lawyers.

The slump is now over, and out of the wreckage six theatres have emerged, two in the European and four in the native quarters. In the former pictures form only part of the show, and, as they are mostly patronised by Europeans, it can readily be understood that the topical pictures in the weekly "Gazette" or "Graphic" are the most popular. The animated newspaper takes us right back home, and shows us scenes we know, crowds such as we have ourselves mixed with, and events such as we have witnessed or taken part in in times gone by. It is good to have these familiar sights put before us, and if the pictures sometimes bring on a feeling of home-sickness, they have the counter-balancing advantage of reminding us that, though far away, we are not quite out of the world—which the little island in the North Sea represents to many of us.

I have been surprised to find that in this city the pictures which find favour with the patrons of the picture palaces in the native quarter are the serious and the spectacular ones. In the native quarter of Calcutta the most popular films used to be, and probably are still, the comics; here the big productions take better. Thus, they have shown to good business in these houses "Quo Vadis?" "As You Like It," and any number of long detective pictures and sensational plays.

I have no space to write further of other developments, such as the making of films in India—which has now been set about in earnest—but must reserve that for another article.

NORTHERN NOTES.

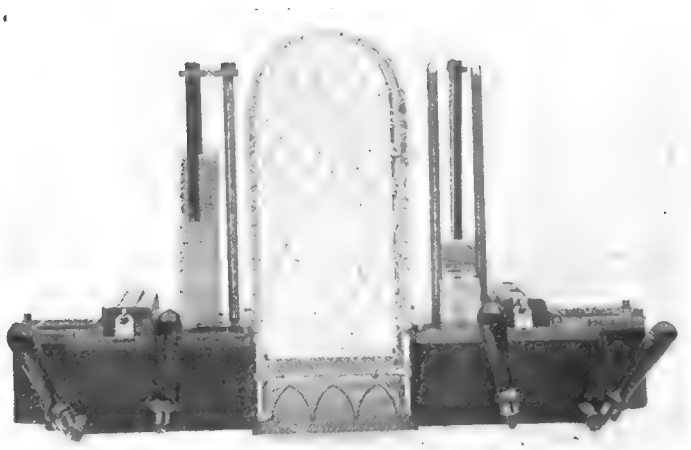
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. A. C. Henderson, of the firm of Messsr. Henderson, the North of England Film Bureau, Irving House, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, was involved in an unfortunate accident on Saturday whilst he was engaged in taking a topical film. One of the athletic events of the year in the Newcastle district is a walking contest amongst the members of the Newcastle Commercial Exchange, from Newcastle to Haltwhistle, a distance of 40 miles. Mr. Henderson determined to secure a film of this year's contest, and for that purpose he engaged a motor-car to follow the walk. There were three other passengers in the car, and everything went well until the journey had been about half completed. Approaching a dangerous bank, however, the motor-car had to overtake a number of cyclists, who apparently failed to hear the warning sounded on the horn of the motor car. The driver of the car attempted to pass the cyclists by taking the car into the side of the roadway, but by some means or other the steering gear became locked and the car ran into the ditch. The vehicle was overturned and the occupants were flung out on to the road. The car was badly damaged, the wind-screen and one of the axles being broken, but the passengers escaped with nothing worse than a severe shaking and a few superficial scratches. Mr. Henderson's cinematograph camera was damaged in the spill.

Holiday audiences of large dimensions thronged the Newcastle Picture House of the Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Limited, during last week, when two excellent programmes were provided. For sheer dramatic interest "The Gambler" was hard to beat, and the presentation of this original subject was faultless. The atmosphere of the Wild West was reproduced in "A Tell-Tale Star," and "Rebecca's Wedding Day." "The Skating Master" and "Sammy is Too Cautious" provided first-class comedy. Those were the leading items during the first half of the week, and from Thursday onwards "Strong Heart" and "Double Crossed" were starred. Mr. James A. Lauder, manager of the Newcastle Picture House, secured the exhibition rights of the film taken by Messrs. Henderson's North of England Film Bureau, at the Barnard Castle Cyclists' Meet, and he showed this exclusively for the city throughout the week.

"The Lady of Morsoreau" was presented by Mr. Barry Rayne, at the Grainger, and so popular are films of well-known book stories that patrons had to wait in patience for their turn to be admitted to the continuous performance. Of course, he had other good fare also, included in which was the pathetic drama, "Rich and Poor" and such comedies as "Rebecca's Wedding Day" and "The Mad Marathon." A good scenic was "Lake Como" and current news was filmed for the "Cinemail." "Over the Cliffs" was featured later in the week, with an equally good assortment of comedies as in the first programme.

The effect produced by the use of an aeroplane in the crime story, "The Flying Clue," was fully appreciated at the Westgate Road Picture House, and the novelty of a gang of thieves being "run to earth" by "an engine of the air" was sufficiently novel to excite a large amount of interest. "The Tell-Tale Scar" and "The River's Secret" were also good attractions, and amongst the other items were "The Kitchen Countess," "Sophie's Birthday Party," "The Warning," "Fast Freight 3,205," "Double Crossed" and "The Servant Question." It was, indeed, a strong programme, of which the management had every reason to be proud. The Viennese orchestra continues to be a strong attraction at the Westgate Road house.



No one has a keener appreciation of the likes and the dislikes of the British public in the matter of entertainment than has Mr. Lindon Travers, manager of the Olympia. His long years of service "in the limelight" as an amusement caterer have fully matured his judgment. Of this he gave evidence when he showed for the Whitsuntide holidays "Master of the Mine," which, together with the remainder of the bill, filled the house at every opening. "Love and Vengeance" was another of his bookings, and the exciting automobile race thrilled his audiences through and through. "Oliver Twist" had a reception, the cordiality of which could not be exaggerated.

The feature of a well varied programme presented by Mr. Crossley Taylor, at the Empire Cinema, Grainger, Street, was "The Master of the Mine," but he had other dramatic numbers of equally powerful attraction. "The Wilderness Mail" was one of the best subjects of its kind in the estimation of his patrons, and the pathos of "Sunny Jim in Search of His Mother," and the humour of "Double Crossed" made a powerful appeal to the sympathies of all.

"The Road to Ruin" had a most successful run at the Gaiety Theatre. "His Guiding Star" and "Creatures of Clay" were also powerful tales, and the comic element was well represented in "Rebecca's Wedding Day" and "Double Crossed."

"The Fatal Wedding" found great acceptance at the Shipcote Hall, Gateshead. Its successor in the second part of the week was "The Black Spot," and both programmes included a fine array of comedies.—"Was She Justified," as depicted at the Scala, Heaton, was followed with the closest interest by large audiences, whose repeated outbursts of applause testified to their approval of the film. The remainder of the entertainment at this place of amusement was such as could not fail to please all comers.

SCOTTISH NEWS AND NOTES.

EDINBURGH.

The increased competition in the centre of the city is having the inevitable result—patrons are getting the benefit. More first releases than ever are being screened, and even in the suburbs the effect is being felt. The film hirers in the capital report good business with city houses, and also with the exhibitors in the East and North of Scotland.

Progress has always marked the management of the Princess Cinema. Recognising the impetus given to golf by the championship being secured by a Scot, Mr. Buchanan has had a series of topicals taken showing Vardon and Duncan, Chalmers and Wheatley at play on a local course, and the screening of these proved a great draw. "The Lady of the Lake," "The Vanishing Cracksman" and "Old St. Paul's" were also delightful films on an exceptionally strong programme.

At the Palace, Mr. Scott keeps up the reputation of the house in a fitting manner, and is this week submitting a finely selected programme. "The Aviator's Love Affair," "The Wedding Write-Up," "Rowdy Comes Back," and a popular Max Linder subject are among the "stars" and several beautiful scenics are included.

The New Picture House scored a distinct success with "America to Europe by Airship," "The Kitchen Countess," and a scenic showing picturesque Ceylon are big attractions.

Variety in subjects shown makes the programme at La Scala doubly interesting. "The Vacant Chair," "The Rise of Officer Casey," "On the Lazy Line" (a picture that has proved exceptionally successful in Scotland), and "The Burglar's Sacrifice" are the top-liners.

The Cinema House programme this week is strong in drama, and ought to draw good houses. With such pictures as "The Price of a Necklace," "A Legacy of Vengeance" and "The Doctor's Trust," patrons ought to be highly pleased. On the comedy side, "Won in a Cupboard" should appeal to all.

It is always a pleasure to look in at the Operetta House, where, if the visitor does not always find first releases, he is at least certain of seeing the very best pictures with just enough variety to satisfy. "The Curse of Greed" and "A Fight for Fortune" are the serious subjects this week, and "Because of a Hat" provides the comedy.

GLASGOW AND DISTRICT.

During the past week I have had the pleasure of visiting most of the picture houses in the following districts:—Shawlands, Bridgeton, Parkhead, Shettleston and Cathcart, in addition to the houses in the centre of Glasgow. The programmes in most cases are being kept up to the busy season standard. This was particularly the case in Bridgeton, which is peopled by a teeming population of workers, and here I found Mr. Biggam, Royal Picture House; Mr. Hamilton, King's; Mr. Will Carre, Star; Mr. Verne, Green's Picturedrome; and Mr. Garrett, Paragon, all doing very well indeed.—At Parkhead I paid my first visit to the Lourne, which is a commodiously built and well-found structure, managed by Mr. Ramsey.—At Shawlands, Mr. Reid, of the Cross Picture House, forges ahead, having had a record year. Mr. Reid takes a pride in his projection, claiming it to be equal to the best. Mr. Cuthbertson, at Cathcart Picture House, provides plenty of topicals, and acts as his own camera man, securing pictures which would do credit to many "professionals." The programmes at the Cathcart include all the latest, and this week sees the commencement of the "Seven Months Big Game Hunting" series. For mid-June, the Sextenary celebrations at Bannockburn are promised.—Mr. Daily, who for a long time has successfully managed the Gallowgate hall on the Scott circuit, has now taken command of the Palaceum at Shettleston, and is already making his influence felt. The Palaceum is a fine property, and here Mr. Daily will find plenty of scope for his abilities.

In the centre of the city, the various cinemas are in the swing of the summer season, and still doing excellent business. The programmes are interestingly varied, and contain many first releases. At the Cinema House, the production of Kinoplastikon still continues a most popular item in the programme.

I regret to record the death on Monday last of Mrs. Gilchrist, the wife of Mr. Alex. Gilchrist, J.P., proprietor of the Eglinton Electreum, and a member of the Executive Committee of the Exhibitors' Association (Glasgow Branch).

OUR AMERICAN LETTER.

Specially Contributed by W. STEPHEN BUSH.

New York, May 30, 1914.

The reign of quality so ardently wished for and so frequently delayed seems to have arrived at last. Mr. William W. Hodkinson, who educed order and prosperity out of chaos and financial misery on the Pacific Coast, has succeeded in uniting three of the most prominent and successful groups of feature makers. The Bosworth Company, which has filmed the "Sea Wolf" and "John Barleycorn," by Jack London, and has acquired the filming rights of all the great London stories, is one of the component members in this new affiliation. The others are the Famous Players and the Jesse L. Lasky Company. It is said with good authority that the capital behind this new organisation is the largest ever invested in any cinematographic venture. Connections have been been made all through the United States and Canada for the easy and efficient distribution of the products of this union of companies. The daily change, the low price of admission, the first run craze, and cheap methods of presentation will be fought to the uttermost by the new corporation which bears the legal title of the Paramount Picture Corporation. I hear on excellent authority that one or two of the licensed producers seriously consider joining the new organisation. What may develop along these lines in the near future it is difficult to foretell, but there seems to be no doubt that the new reign of quality will draw to itself very nearly all productions of a distinctly high grade. Mr. Hodkinson realises that the demands of the high-class theatres which he expects to supply cannot be provided for adequately, unless he supplements the products of the three companies by purchases in the open market. It is significant that he has purchased the American rights of an English-made production. "The House of Temperley," which had a week's successful run at the Strand Theatre on Broadway. I can personally testify that on the first night of this British-made film the audience broke into applause when the title and the artistic trade mark were displayed on the screen.

I have just had a long and most interesting interview with David Belasco, at the Belasco Theatre, and I learn from this great artistic producer that he has turned over the filming rights of all his successful plays to the Jesse L. Lasky Company. This includes such well-known stage successes as "The Girl of the Golden West," "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," "The Rose of the Rancho," "The Darling of the Gods," "Years of Discretion," "The Woman," "The Lily," "Madame Du Barry, etc.

"I have decided," said Mr. Belasco, "to select Mr. Lasky and his associates as the filmers of my plays because I am convinced that they will approach their task in the proper spirit of liberality. These plays cannot be filmed without much careful preparation and a prodigal outlay of money. Personally, I have always found that the public will appreciate generosity in a theatrical producer, and when I have spent twenty-five thousand dollars where I might have perhaps spent fifteen thousand, I always found that the public paid larger interest on the big sum."

From a talk with Mr. Lasky, I learned that the "Girl of the Golden West" will in part be produced in a petrified forest in lower California, while the "Darling of the Gods" will be staged in Japan.

The new combination intends to use as large a share as it can of the European market. Mr. Samuel Goldfish, of the Executive Office of the Lasky Feature Play Company, is on his way to London where he will endeavour to make connections for placing the products of the new affiliation. It is intended, I believe, to cover the entire continent by way of London, which will be the European centre of distribution. Mr. Goldfish will probably look at the best the European market affords, and may make some purchases.

One of the most popular film men in America, Alec Lorimore, a native of England, has been put in charge of the promotion of the Harry Fox Box Office Attraction Company. Mr. Lorimore had been connected with the Gaumont Company, for whom he did much valuable work. He is an able executive and a clever publicity man. He leaves his old employer on the best of terms.

THE "A. & C." GAZETTE.

This handsome little publication is quite worthy of special mention, and contains a well-written description of the films released by the American and Continental Film Company. Nicely printed on art paper, with an attractive cover, the "Gazette" is a publication which deserves to be regularly filed.

EXCLUSIVE FILM.

PLANNING THE INVASION OF ENGLAND.

This is the greatest national drama yet produced and is not a mere romance. It has something of the gift of prophecy and stirs the blood as only war alarms can. It shows the perils of wireless as well as its safeguards. It illustrates how the invader's warships might approach whilst England sleeps.

IT IS MORE TELLING THAN ANY NEWSPAPER ARTICLE.

Another British "Exclusive."

In securing the Hepworth Company's scholarly and effective version of Charles Reade's famous novel, "The Cloister and the Hearth," as their latest "exclusive," Renters, Limited, have given yet another instance of that keen discernment and appreciation for really good work so notable in all their previous purchases. It is, indeed, difficult to think of another firm holding a series of "exclusive" films all of which reach so high a standard of excellence as do those controlled by Renters, Limited, and it is pleasant to find so comparatively young a company making the very most of the advantages offered by the "exclusive" system by buying only pictures which are worthy of the distinction implied by this method of handling.

"The Cloister and the Hearth," one feels, should prove a particularly remunerative investment both for the proprietors of the film and for those exhibitors who are wise enough to book it. We reviewed the picture at length in our issue of December 4th last, so that there is no necessity to reconsider it here in detail; but it may not be out of place to remind our readers of its exceedingly high qualities, which render it so attractive and distinguished an entertainment. Charles Reade's novels are, in all probability, still as popular as they ever were, which is equivalent to saying that they are amongst the most widely admired works ever written, and "The Cloister and the Hearth" easily takes its place at the head of the list as the best of them all. It is a fascinating drama of love and villainy, and, unlike so many historical stories, its sharply defined main theme is not overpowered by a mass of historical detail, but is fully as striking and effective, in spite of its picturesque setting, as any tale of modern life. Thus, although the film contains many delightful pictures of fifteenth century Holland and Italy, contrived with accurate realism which is a credit to the producers, it attracts one primarily by the appeal of its very poignant and wonderfully human story. It is, in short, a film which should interest any audience, irrespective of their familiarity with the original novel, and its great excellence in point of staging, acting, and photography, representing all that is best in the art of the cinematograph, makes it a thoroughly first-rate entertainment worthy to be presented at any theatre whatsoever.

There is nothing more that it is necessary for us to add concerning the picture, but we should like to congratulate Renters, Limited, on the wisdom of their choice in acquiring it. Their repertoire of "exclusives" contains many of the most artistic productions yet seen, and one is exceedingly glad to observe that they are continuing their policy of relying upon films of British manufacture.

A HULL ADDITION.

OPENING OF THE STRAND.

Some little time back a few Hull gentlemen made known their intention of forming a company and building a cinema, to be known as the Strand Picture Theatre, on the Beverley Road, Hull. There were other proposed schemes for cinemas in the very same district, but the builders of the Strand set to work with a will, and had the existing building removed and the new one erected whilst the others were little beyond the earliest stage. The Strand, which is an unique building standing well back from the road, at the corner of Leonard Street, was opened on Whit Friday, and all doubts as to whether it would justify its existence or not have already been removed.

I have had the opportunity of looking round the Strand, writes our Hull representative, and it is an ideal picture palace from every point of view. Mr. Robert Freeman, chairman of the company, and Mr. Tidswell, the managing director, together with their fellow directors, have spared no reasonable expense in making the Strand equal to the most modern and best equipped picture palaces in the country. There is a very large area to draw from, and, as stated, the venture already promises to be the success that was anticipated.

All credit is due to the architects, Messrs. Wellsted, Dosser and Wellsted, for the excellent plan and simple, yet effective, architecture of the Strand. Built of brick and stone, it has a frontage to Beverley Road of 46 ft., and a side elevation to Leonard Street of 145 ft. From the street, entrance is gained to the cinema by passing through a forecourt planted with trees, and ascending a flight of stone steps into a vestibule, with doors on either side leading to the auditorium, and a flight of steps leading through a capacious lounge and café into the balcony. The front is of red brick, with stone ornamentation, and there are two piers from either wall, projecting into the forecourt. The latter, by the way, obviates the necessity of people having to form a queue in the street, and is an advantage. The vestibule or entrance hall is in mosiac paving, with large stone pillars on either side of the entrance. This spacious entrance hall contains the pay-box, right opposite the centre door. The manager's office is at one side of this, and there is a window enabling him to have a full view of the auditorium and the screen, whilst at the other side is the operating box, with which he is in direct communication. Adjoining this is a mechanics' shop, with a store-room between it and the manager's office.

The café is tastefully arrranged in lounge style, and is free of access without paying admission to the pictures. The total holding capacity of the building is about 1,400. The full width of the auditorium is 58 ft., and there are plenty of gangways, both here and in the balcony, which are richly carpeted. Most of the seats are of plush, the cheaper ones being of leather. The balcony is steel framed, and with a front ornamentation, and it holds about 450. The ceiling is arched, made of fibrous plaster and in an artistic design. The walls are treated with art panels, and there are numerous little windows draped with red curtains all round the building, giving it rather a quaint appearance. The directors' room is approached from the café. There are a large number of exits—eleven in all—so that every possible precaution has been taken.

A modern system of heating and ventilating has been installed. A shaft runs the full length of the building, and along this the hot air is drawn by a powerful apparatus. The heating chamber, which is at the rear of the building, supplies radiators with hot water.

The pictures are projected from under the balcony from a couple of Gaumont machines, on a screen which is 18 ft. by 15 ft., and the result is excellent. The cinema is under the personal management of Mr. J. F. Tidswell (managing director), and there is a capable assistant-manager in Mr. Fred. Charles Willson.

In closing, a word should be added regarding the lighting of the hall. Both gas and electricity are employed, the lights being concealed in attractive suspended bowls. A novel feature is that the lights are switched off in the ordinary way, but gradually diminish or increase, according to the amount of light required.

RENOVATION AT SHETTLESTON.

In the course of a chat with Mr. A. S. Albin, the popular manager of the Premier Picture House, Shettleston, an industrial suburb of Glasgow, our Glasgow representative was informed that the building is to be completely renovated, the brick walls to be covered with cement, and the whole building repainted and decorated. Mr. Albin has made the Premier a huge success, and the excellent projection secured by Mr. Summerhill gives the proper value to the varied and up-to-date subjects shown.

WORLD OF FINANCE.

The following information has been specially compiled for THE BIOSCOPE, and includes a Register of New Companies, Mortgages and Charges, Winding-up Petitions and Orders, County Court Judgments, Reports of Financial Cases, etc., etc.

All inquiries respecting financial matters must be addressed to the Editor and the envelope marked "Financial."

ASIATIC CINEMATOGRAPH COMPANY, LIMITED.

A meeting of creditors in the above matter was held at 20A, Charing Cross Road, W.C., on the 12th inst., and adjourned to July 16th.

THE PALACE THEATRES (KETTERING), LTD., PALACE CHAMBERS, KETTERING.

Pursuant to Section 188 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, a meeting of the creditors in this matter was held on May 29th at the office of Messrs. Cattell, Favell and Hodge, when a statement of affairs was submitted showing liabilities to sundry trade creditors amounted to £427 11s. 11½d. The assets consisted of fixtures, fittings, etc., valued at £107 10s., and cash at bank 18s. 7d., making a total of £108 8s. 7s., which was all claimed to cover debenture. There was thus a deficiency of £427 11s. 11½d. as regarded the unsecured creditors, a deficiency of £254 2s. 3½d as regarded the debenture holder, and a deficiency as regarded the share capital of £3,500, making the total deficiency £4,181 14s. 3d. It was reported that an execution had been levied at the instance of the largest creditor at the beginning of last May, and on that being done the money payable under the debenture became immediately due, and a Receiver was appointed by the debenture-holder. The creditors fully discussed the matter and decided that the voluntary liquidation of the company should be continued, with Mr. W. Chas. Cattell as liquidator. They also decided that the liquidator should be authorised to sell the whole of the assets of the company to Mr. J. G. Covington or his nominee for a sum which would be sufficient to pay the preferential claims, the costs of winding up the company, and a dividend of 2s. 6d. in the £ to the unsecured trade creditors, the payment of such dividend to be made by July 11th, or so soon afterwards as the majority of creditors have agreed to the proposal.

PICTURE THEATRES' POSTERS.

On May 28, in Chancery, Mr. Justice Astbury again had before him a motion in the case of T. Longman and Son v. the Fulham Picture Palace, Limited.

Mr. H. Wright said the motion was by the plaintiffs for an injunction restraining the defendants from posting bills, advertisements, or posters on any boarding, wall or shop-front, in which the exclusive right of bill-posting had been granted to the plaintiffs, as was shown by their advertisements posted thereon. It was also asked that the defendants be restrained from interfering in any way with the plaintiff's notices, advertisements, etc., or from trespassing in any way upon such hoardings. Plaintiffs were the lessees of the hoardings in question, which were at Chelsea, and one of their principal clients was the Red Hall Picture Palace there. They hired the hoardings from plaintiffs for the purpose of advertising their entertainments. The defendants ran a rival picture palace, and, it was alleged, had posted advertisements of their own performance, viz., "The World, the Flesh and the Devil," the advertisements of the Red Hall.

Mr. P. Wheeler, on behalf of the defendants, stated that his clients had no knowledge that the advertisements complained of had been posted up in the manner indicated, and it was contrary to orders. He was ready to give an undertaking in the terms of the notice of motion until the first day of next term.

His Lordship, on this undertaking, allowed the matter to stand over until next sitting.

Meeting of Creditors.

The adjourned first meeting of creditors of Gordon Fletcher Hewitt (trading as the Hewitt Film Producing Company), cinematograph film producer, etc., 38, Great Windmill Street, Shaftesbury Avenue, London, late 36, Spring Gardens, Manchester, and formerly 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, Charing Cross, London, was held last week at the Official Receiver's Offices, Byrom Street, Manchester. The failure was attributed to lack of capital, interest on loans, money expended in production of films and failure to exploit same and losses by underestimating the cost of films. Since the first meeting debtor had applied to the Court for the proceedings to be removed from the Manchester to the London district on the ground that he proposed to put forward a proposal which he stated would be of benefit to the general body of creditors. The business was started in Nelson Street, Manchester, but in September last was removed to Great Windmill Street. The circular sent out to creditors by the Official Receiver for Manchester pointed out that in the present state of affairs the matter would have to wait over, pending a decision on the question of transferring the proceedings to the London Courts.

Sunderland and Wearside Sidelights.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Whit-week will be held in grateful remembrance by every local manager, most of whom on Monday and Tuesday were under the pleasant necessity of unearthing their "full" card.

One night last week I dropped into the Queen's Hall Kinema in Bridge Street, Sunderland's newest and luxurious "continuous." Here Mr. Thomas Adamson is the manager, and he certainly is keeping the place well in the limelight. Nearly every week, he tells me, the average of business shows improvement. An exclusive that told there last week was Seymour Hicks and Ellaline Terriss in "Variety" and "Soldiers Three" was also booked as an exclusive. "The Murdoch Trial," too, went well. Mr. Adamson also mentioned that he is starting "Our Navy" series during the current week, and with this in a seaport like Sunderland he should go "great guns."

From what Mr. J. Noble, head of the Weardale Agency, tells me, he appears to have had a great time in London, where he has just been visiting the various film agencies in search of good things for his numerous clientèle. He is quite flattered with the courtesy shown him by most of the big firms, in whose places he saw some 150,000 ft. of pictures, out of which he bought a good number of films excellently suitable for the smaller cass of hall. With these films he feels confident he will be able to do much payable business over the North of England. Several of the films are absolutely new and have never been shown in the North.

High-class films can always be depended upon at the de Luxe, where Mr. Fredk. J. Hudspeth last week showed "The Chavalier de Maison Rouge." Everyone who visits this hall now is speaking in highly appreciative terms of the music discoursed by Mr. H. Pullan's orchestra. The selections played during the screening of the "Chevalier" films were: "Athalie" (overture), Mendelssohn; "Chevaleresque" (overture), Mouchet; "Manon" (fantasie), Massanet; Overure in C, Mendelssohn; and "Byzantine" (march), Ganne. On Thursday "King of the Air" became the premier picture, a stirring story of the latest type that, so far as keeping up the attendances until Saturday night, was a pronounced success.

Even if I had not known the exact whereabouts of the Kine in South Shields, the problem would have been easy of solution, for a huge electric sky-sign is everywhere visible. Here Mr. Dixon Scott (who has just disposed of the Jarrow Kino), has Mr. J. R. Scott's efficient assistance in the management of what has become one of the most successful of the local halls. Their selection of pictures last week was just the thing for holiday-makers. The previous week the Navy films were shown with such acceptance that Messrs. Scott had the utmost confidence in running the companion series dealing with the British Army. Other good things are in store, and the Kino should smile with the sunshine.

As I had anticipated, Mr. Hilton Fox had splendid "houses" with "Chains of Bondage," the Wheatsheaf's accommodation being strained to its utmost at its every presentation. This Monkwearmouth hall always has excellent programmes, a working arrangement with the Avenue Theatre now making this desideratum an absolute certainty.

"The Cage" was the holiday attraction at the Southwick Savoy, where one always finds a Keystone comedy in the programme. Last week it was "Some Nerve."

"Only the best class of films are seen here" was what I was told when I visited the Picture House in Ocean Road, South Shields, and when I mention that "Anne Boleyn" and "The Vicar of Wakefield" were the premier and exclusive pictures last week you will agree that the claim is not only well founded but further endorsed when I add that "Antony and Cleopatra" is being shown this week.

"In the Wilds of Africa" proved a clinking holiday feature at Messrs. Lough and Richardson's Star and Central Hall at Sunderland. At the latter Mr. Cecil Webb, "the one-man dramatist," is making quite a name for himself as a lecturer. Last Friday night the juveniles who patronised the Central's "first house" were each presented with a comic paper, a "surprise" gift which, as you can well imagine, was greatly appreciated.

No matter when you go to the High Street West Picture House—Sunderland's biggest "continuous"—you find a large and oft-times overflowing audience. It must be a pleasant occupation to manage with patronage like this the rule and seldom the exception, and Mr. J. McColl must, therefore, I opine, be a somewhat envied man. So far as I myself am concerned I really enjoy the Picture House, and I certainly did last week when I made a special point of going there to see "She Stoops to Conquer." It had been preceded by "The Great Leap," and both features were well supplemented.

The other morning I almost bumped into Mr. Percy Dawson, in whose care Mr. James H. Tindle has so well entrusted the Horden Empress. Every Wednesday afternoon now he is running a special matinée for juniors, and it is, he tells me, proving most successful, thanks to the appreciation of teachers and scholars alike. That a pit village hall can even get such programmes speaks well for the cinema industry, and that it should run them is to its credit.

The Birmingham Trade.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The first annual meeting of the Birmingham Branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, was held at the Corporation Street offices of the Secretary, C. J. Leopold Ray. Mr. J. P. Moore was re-elected President, and heartily congratulated upon his useful services in that capacity for the last twelve months. Vice-Presidents elected unanimously were: Messrs. Boscoe, Brueton, James and Payne. Mr. C. J. Ray was re-elected secretary and Mr. Hunt, hon. secretary, treasurer, Mr. Brookes. A committee of eight members was then elected, comprising Messrs. Parry, Green, MacDonald, Bradbury, Augustus Collins, Calvert, R. Collins, and Wood.

It was suggested that several members belonging to the allied trades who had rendered useful service to the Association should become members of the committee, but after discussion, it was decided that the committee should be confined to exhibitors and managers.

Reviewing the work of the Association, the following included the most important of its acts:—"The affiliation of the Association to the parent body for Birmingham and the Midlands, the local branch meanwhile maintaining its name. Recognition by the magistrates, including the acceptance by the justices of an agreement between manager and employer. Permission to open a number of picture houses on Good Friday by members of the association. Useful work achieved by Mr. Darlaston, consulting architect to the association, who has greatly assisted the association in matters pertaining to restrictions requiring alterations of buildings.

The question of the cost of electric supply was submitted, when a deputation waited upon the Chairman of the Electric Supply Committees. The matter stands in abeyance, but the question re charging picture houses 3d. per unit for power supply and other manufacturers only 1d. has been referred to the legal department in London.

The Secretary announced that committee meetings would be held every Friday at 3.30 in his offices in view of the enlarged committee, but all members would be welcome.

A deputation by the invitation of the justices attended on June 9th, and discussed the question of a test opening on a settled Sunday evening in August. In this connection it is hoped that if the test is favourable, the magistrates will grant a seven days' licence to those members of the association requiring them.

Mr. MacDonald asked whether the association was concerning itself with the proposed erection of a new picture house at Five Ways, and was informed that as the association opposed every new application within a mile of any existing picture house, its solicitor, Mr. Darby, would duly appear against the application.

A vote of thanks was accorded to the secretary, Mr. Ray, for the enthusiastic and useful work he has performed for the association, and an increase in salary was proposed and passed unanimously. The secretary, in replying, assured the meeting that the work had been with him a labour of love, and he was vastly interested in it.

ROUND THE HALLS.

Trade has been decidedly brisker in Birmingham and district halls this week, and renters have nothing to complain about, for all the good stuff appears to be booked up well ahead. The New Street Picture House ran "She Stoops to Conquer" to packed houses, and screened the Derby film to a well-pleased audience.—Mr. Bradbury, of the Masonic Hall, achieved most pleasing results with "Was She Justified?"

I had the pleasure of looking in to see Mr. Parry, of the Moseley Road Picture House recently, and was pleased to find him doing great business with "The Great Python Robbery" and "Chains of Bondage." Last week he was running "The Master of the Mine" and "The Price of the Necklace." "The Midnight Wedding" was booked for the second half.

Mr. Brueton, of the Selly Oak Picturedrome, who is a vice-president of the Birmingham Exhibitors' Association, reports that business was very good last week at his show, and "The Murdoch Trial" drew big money nightly. Mr. Brueton has not wasted much time in booking up the latest "Fantomas" film, "The False Magistrate," and it will be screened at an early date.

The Picturedrome, Sparkbrook, under the management of Mr. Heath, had a great winner last week in "Absinthe," and the picture is having remarkable success.

"Woe to the Conquered," which is being handled here by the Syd Wright Film Agency, was screened to the Trade at the Scala Theatre, Smallbrook Street. Business on this film is, I understand, very good.—Mr. Grahame Cutts, the manager of this hall, did great business recently with "Moths."

Various managerial changes have been taking place here recently, and Mr. Horton, I understand, who has left the Washwood Heath Palace, has entered into the renting lists.—Mr. Draper, who is leaving the Saltley Palace, was given a public presentation by his directors on Saturday night as an appreciation of his valuable work in connection with this hall.—Mr. Bert Sharp, of the Ladypool Road Picture House, is, I understand, taking up the management at the Saltley Picture House.

By "PADDY."

PROVINCIAL.

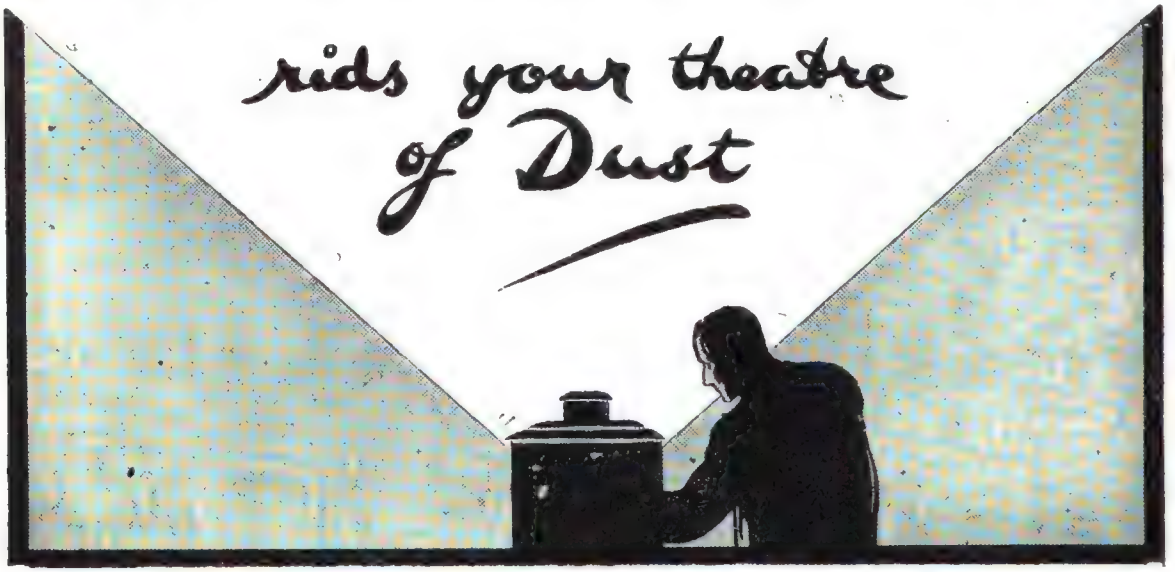
I had the pleasure recently of dropping in to see my old friend, Mr. Louis E. Forster, of the Park Street Picture House, Dundalk. Although it was quite a warm night I found at the commencement of the second house that the theatre—seating some 450 people—was almost full. The entrance to the theatre is very beautiful—the pay-box is set in the centre, and the walls are beautifully tiled and tastefully decorated by posters of famous film favourites. The interior is, perhaps, finer as regards equipment and seating than the majority of provincial theatres. The greater number of seats are priced at 6d. and 3d, but there is also a portion fitted up with blue velvet seats for the benefit of 1s. patrons. While I was there Mr. Forster and Mr. McCourt, the chief operator, very kindly ran through for me the film of the "Dundalk Races," specially taken by Mr. Forster for his own house, and I was agreeably surprised to see such splendid photography. "The Mysteries of Paris" was featured here and proved perhaps the biggest success the theatre has yet had, and their successes have been numerous. It was lectured to by Mr. Fred Charles, who was specially engaged by Mr. Forster for the week. Other films were "Honesty" and "An Hour before Dawn."

"Protea I." received an immense reception when screened at the picture palace run by Messrs. Jas. T. Jameson and Sons at the Beach, Queenstown. Other films were "Scotland for Ever" and the "Pathé Gazette."—At the Town Hall, Galway, Messrs. Jameson had also an exceptionally strong programme on view, a special feature being "On the Minute." "The Calling of Jim Burton" and the ever-popular "Pathé Gazette" were also on the bill.—At the Theatre JRoyal, Tralee, the principal films shown recently were "On the Lazy Line," "Jane Eyre," and "A War-time Reformation."

Messrs. Jameson and Sons also show their pictures at the Gymnasium, Curragh Camp, every Saturday night. Two houses are given, and it is needless on my part to remark that such is the fare provided that the theatre is packed to capacity. Films screened included "'Neath the Lion's Paw," "Broncho Billy and the Red Man" and "Success." Two variety "turns" also appeared on the bill, and I might mention that Mr. Jameson usually presents a "turn" at his other theatres.

BELFAST.

The management of the Empire Theatre have decided to reduce the prices of admission during the months of June, July and August. Some fine films were screened last week, the best being "What Father Saw," "Hearts and Hoofs" and "Big Jim of the Sierras."—At the Panoptican we had "Daughter of the Hills." This was supported by "Our Baby," "In the Mountains," and a host of other short films. The orchestral music under the direction of Mr. J. H. Read was a special feature of last week's entertainment.—For the three days commencing June 1st the Crumlin Picture House showed "The Green Horn." For the latter part of the week "The Hundred Days" was featured, and the success it met with was very gratifying to all concerned.—At the Alhambra "Lieutant Rose and the Sealed Orders" was featured with great success. Mr. Henry Pulling had an "extra" good programme on view at that popular house of entertainment, the Kelvin, including "The Circle's End," "Children of Destiny," "Polidor as Fireman," and "Once Aboard the Lugger."—"The Iron Trail" was featured at the Central, in addition to "Whimsical Threads of Destiny."—Two fine films were provided by the management of the West Belfast Theatre last week, these being "Fiend and His Friends" and "Dare-devil Detective Hayes."—Mr. Stuart recently featured at the Panoptican some of the Selsior dancing films, notably "The Empire Glide," and these met with great success.



CORK.

At the Imperial, in George Street, the films are changed three times per wek. Recent pictures shown were "The Man from the West." "A Muddy Romance," "Why I am Here," and numerous others. A collection was also made in this and other Cork theatres recently for the Lifeboat Institution.—Mr. McEwan showed "A Message from Mars," and did a splendid business. "Thou Shalt Not Steal" and a comic film, "Black Prince," were also on the programme.—On May 25th the "British Army" film was screened at the Palace before upwards of 1,400 soldiers from the regiments in the district, all of whom were in full-dress uniform. The film was supported by "The Story of a Crime," "Diana's Dress Reform," and the "Gaumont Graphic."—At the Coliseum Mr. Tighe has been enjoying a good run of busness, and screened "I Shall Avenge," also "On Lazy Lines," "Hubby's Night Out" and the "Topical Budget."

(BY OUR OWN REPRESENTATIVE.)

Synchronising with the appearance of Miss Florence Turner in person at the Empire, there were few picture theatres which did not screen some film or other in which the popular lady figured. Miss Turner has naturally paid a series of visits to the various premises of the many film hiring concerns now established in Leeds, and has been one of the earliest distinguished visitors to the fine new place just occupied by the Gaumont Company, Limited. This new establishment is more in the public shopping centre, the premises being at the corner of Lands Lane and Albion Place, and occupy a great area on the first and second floors. The whole place is sumptuously appointed and the staff, all of whom are experts from other branches of the company, work under ideal conditions of light and healthful atmosphere. The projecting theatre is one of the most luxurious in the provinces. Though the place could be made to hold a hundred people, the furnishing is in big lounge chairs, in drawing-room style, which limits the accommodation to from thirty to fifty. The concrete projection chamber is unusually large and well-ventilated. Mr. F. Collins is the general manager of the place, and Mr. A. E. Cotton has charge of the exclusives department, and also of the outside camera men who are maintained in connection with the branch. The whole place, of course, has been rebuilt with fireproof walling and teak doors.

Messrs. Pathé Frères' Leeds branch, under the management of Mr. E. A. Boden, is steadily piling up a big business connection in Yorkshire for exclusives, and the other Pathé features. The dem nd in the county of broad acres for the Pathécolour subjects, I understand, is rapidly on the increase.

The New Century Films, Limited, have secured the Yorkshire rights of the Famous Players film, "The Pride of Jennico," to be released in July. The New Century people promise a lot of big stuff for the winter months, and are preparing to give the Trade a few surprises. The firm will enter the new home at 42, Park Place, in July. The difficulties in securing suitable premises have been overcome, and a whole building has been taken.

The Ideal Film Renting Company are working up a very material Yorkshire connection from their office in Park Place, where Mr. Taylor holds the reins locally. Mr. A. E. Beirnstein, from Newcastle, pays periodical visits of supervision.

Messrs. Bottomley and Hawarth, of the Greystone Motion Picture Company, are finding a big demand for their cheap programmes. Business is better than ever, and the latest acquisition to the staff of the office in Wellington Street is Mr. Powell, late of the New Century Company.

Mr. H. A. Whincup, of the Yorkshire Film Exchange, is making a special feature of local topicals, and achieved great success with the pictures, taken by himself, of the recent Leeds Military Church Parade. Mr. Whincup has his eyes on the possibilities of the Yorkshire Territorial camps of the summer.

Classic fare never fails to be fully appreciated at the Briggate Picture House, and Mr. Norman Robertson scored a memorable success in the screening of "Spartacus." "The Derby" naturally figured prominently on the programme.—At the Grand, Mr. Harry Hogton is featuring the "Beauties of France" series of scenic pictures. Among his dramatic subjects, "For Her Husband's Sake" had a special appeal to patrons.—Mr. J. Rogerson secured "Orders Under Seal" at the Savoy.—Mr. H. Broughton continues to fill his big Coliseum. "'Neath the Lion's Paw" was the star film in a good programmme, whilst a valuable Whitsuntide attraction was found in "The World, The Flesh and the Devil."—At the de Luxe, Mr. Teddie Davies brought Miss Turner into his programme in "Wanted, a Grandmother." Mr. Davies also featured "'Neath the Lion's Paw," and is running the Keystone comedies.—At the Golden Cross Picturedrome, Mr. George Spencer screened "The Lost Treasure" and "The Interrupted Wedding."

The suburban theatres, like those of the centre of the city, utilised the presence in the city of Miss Florence Turner to the fullest extent. At the Harehills Picture House, Mr. H. J. Dacre submitted a programme which had been personally selected by Miss Turner, and which included "The Murdoch Trial," featuring herself. "Ashes," "The Battle of Elderbush Gulch" and "The Picture of Dorian Gray."—At the Grosvenor Theatre, Camp Road, Mr. C. Marston was showing "Kissing Cup" and "Black Mafia."—In the same district, at the Alexandra, Mr. G. Fontheim introduced Miss Turner in "Her Mother's Wedding Gown." Other good subjects treated here were "Jack," "The Curse of Greed" and "On the Brink of the Precipice."

Mr. Charles P. Higgins is scoring a big success at the Newtown Palace with his "Home" Orchestra. Amongst his films recently were "A Wrecker of Lives" and "Gives Us This Day ——."—Mr. George Stephenson is running the King's Palace, Holbeck, with success. He recently featured "The Black Spot" and "The Informer."—At Beeston, "The Brand of Cain" was a top-liner, and "The Mystery of Boscombe Vale" was another success.

"The Mystery of Boscombe Vale" also proved of great value to Messrs. Brooks and Smith at the Headingley Picture House, and was preceded by "Primroses."—"The Lost Treasure" appeared to great advantage at the Lyceum, Cardigan Road, Burley, where Mr. Weldon screened a useful picture in "Elephants at Work in India."—At the Haddon Hall, Burley Hill, Mr. C. triumph with "Orders Under Seal," made a big hit with "The Curse of War."—Mr. J. Greenwood, who has charge of the Imperial Palace, Kirkstall, featured "The Master Criminal" and Youanita."—"The Lady in Black" was a leading attraction at the Atlas, Kirkstall.

In the Armley district, Mr. C. P. Metcalfe showed Miss Turner in "The Murdoch Trial" at the Armley Hall, succeeded by "The Antique Brooch" and "His Best Friend."—At the Palace Hall, "Black Roderick, the Poacher," was followed by "Guiding Star," for which exclusive rights had been secured.—At the Picturedrome, Wortley Road, "In the Grip of a Villain" was succeeded by "Honesty." Mr. G. Mann had also secured "The Curse of War."—At the Crown, Mr. Alfred Higgins, and his secretary, Mr. W. Smith, featured "'Neath the Lion's Paw" and "On Secret Service."

At Wortley, Mr. W. A. Musgrave enticed crowded audiences into the Silver Theatre, to see "Behind the Curtain." A good travel film was "Canadian History."—At the Bramley Palace, "Lasca" was screened, and the poem was recited by Mr. Harry Myers.

PATENTS GRANTED.

1,607.—Colour Cinematography.—J. de Frenes, London.—In colour cinematography, different lengths of exposure are given to different parts of the film by the use of a driving-wheel so constructed that the stationary periods of successive parts of the film are different. The wheel is also so constructed that the ratio of the exposures is adjustable.

1,728.—Cinematographs, etc.—O. J. Raush, London.—This invention relates to films recording moving or dancing figures and also having photographed on them the conductor of the orchestra accompanying the dances, etc. In order to enable him to neglect the time of the music and to produce the pictures at equal intervals, the operator manually driving the producing machine is provided with a clock-work or other device giving beats at equal intervals. The conductor is directly photographed on to the corner of each picture, and his movements in the projected picture are seen by the audience as well as by the accompanying orchestra, to whom they give the time for the music.

2,394.—Cinematographs, etc.—A. H. Marechal, Seine, France.—In order to produce stereoscopic pictures, two negative films are taken by means of a stereoscopic camera in such a way that on each film the pictures are separated by blanks of the same size as the pictures. The two films are superposed so that the pictures on one film are above the blank spaces on the other, and a single positive is printed from them. This positive is then projected through a single lens. In a modification two negatives are obtained by simultaneous exposures, the pictures succeeding each other without blanks. A positive is produced from each and the positives are simultaneously projected in superposition.

2,786.—Colour Cinematography. — J. Campbell, Middlesbrough.—A negative film of the recurrent series type for colour cinematography is prepared by exposing each area thereof two or more times in succession, through colour screens of the same colour. A shutter is employed having each colour-filter section formed in concentric coloured area arranged in different order and for example being red filters and green filters. The filters are provided with adjustable opaque sectors rotatable independently backwards or forwards to adjust the exposures. Positives prepared from these negatives are projected through a similar shutter.

2,787.—Colour Cinematography. — J. Campbell, Middlesbrough.—A shutter for use in colour cinematography as described in Specification 2,786. 1913, has the angular measurements of each colour filter determined and fixed for the actinic value of the light transmitted, the adjustable sectors being thus rendered unnecessary. The total angular measurements of the filter of any given colour may be variously distributed over the shutter, so that in one form, for example, a single range filter may alternate with a multiple filter comprising a blue and a transparent orange.

IN THE MANCHESTER DISTRICT.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

A very fine addition to Manchester's growing list of picure theatres was made on May 27th, when La Scala, Booth Street East, was opened by the Lord Mayor. As usual on such occasions the first day's takings were allocated to charity, St. Mary's Hospital being the cause that benefited in this instance. The building is an entirely new one. The verandah outside has yet to be added, but there is a covered way extending along the whole side of the hall. Inside there is plenty of air space even beyond a spacious balcony, and the red-plush tip-up seats throughout are above the ordinary size and number about 1,000. The decorations have been skilfully and artistically carried out and consist chiefly of an elaborate Wedgewood scheme. The orchestra even will harmonise with this, for Herr Wilhelms Morgann's Blue Hungarian Band provides the music every evening. The manager in charge of La Scala is Mr. James Reay, late of the Royal Cinema, Rochdale Road, and opening in time for the Whitsun holidays he naturally has been very busy in the new premises. The entertainment consists of three shows a day, at 3, 7 and 9 o'clock, with three changes of programme a week, and prices of admission 3d., 4d. and 6d. Last week, in addition to the local event—the Sunday School pageant—the chief pictures shown were "Wartime Reformation," "Pendulum of Justice," "Blight of Suspicion," and the comedy "Scotland for Ever."

The Palais de Luxe, Barlow Moor Road, is the latest picture theatre at Chorlton-cum-Hardy, having been opened only about six weeks. It is a very compact place, capable of holding about 670 people, and possesses an air of luxury and comfort. The proscenium decorations and furnishings are particularly good, whilst the heating, ventilating and lighting arrangements are all that could be desired. Mr. Harold Smith, the manager, was late assistant at the Scala, Withington, and has doubtless gained an experience there which in a similar class neighbourhood will be very useful. Of the two machines installed one is a Tyler and the other a Gaumont, and both are giving every satisfaction. Every Saturday an additional matinée to those held on Monday and Wednesday is given specially for children, when selected films of a purely educational or comedy type are shown. With regard to pictures at ordinary performances, last week "Moths" scored a great success, and a good second was found in "Kronstadt." A very fine list of bookings is ahead, which includes "A Lady of Quality," "Hearts Adrift," "Curse of War," "Absinthe," "Tannhauser," and "Richelieu."

The Paragon Picturedrome has been rebuilt and considerably enlarged. Originally possessing a seating accommodation of about 500, it now holds nearer 1,000. It was reopened for busness on Whit Monday, when a daily matinée was given during the week in addition to the two performances nightly. It is proposed to change the programme four times weekly. The seating has been greatly improved with new tip-ups, and one of the latest Kamm machines is installed. Popular prices of 1d., 2d. and 3d. are charged, and this fact will no doubt be appreciated in the immediate neighbourhood. Last week "Dungeon of Steel," "The Two Cowards" and "The Windmill" appeared to be the principal pictures shown.

The Deansgate make a great feature of the café rendezvous, and advertise it as "far and away the best appointed café in the city." The picture house has certainly been doing a wonderful business since it opened, and last week no doubt created a record. At the time of my visit "The Flying Clue," "The Tell-tale Star," "The Kitchen Countess" and "Pimple's Burglar Scare" were the chief items in the early part, followed later by the Whit-week processions and "The River's Secret."

In place of theatrical touring companies the Prince's Theatre last week had an interesting series of travel pictures entitled "All the World Over," presented by the Anglo-Colonial Cinema Company, with Mr. G. Mayor Cooke as lecturer. Some of the scenes shown of remote parts of the world were exceedingly fine, and kept a large audience entertained for two and a half hours. The films are good, and the quality of the pictures was improved by the fact of a Mirroroide screen being used.

The Ardwick Green Coliseum has a strong programme this week, in which detective pictures figure somewhat prominently. The best of these are "Fantomas" (The False Magistrate) and "Cleek"—in the mystery of the Dover Express. Next week "Protea the Second" is promised.

Twixt Stage and Screen.

By GLENN. H. HARRIS.

Although it is my intention to draw a contrast between the possibilities of the stage and the screen, I would confine my remarks more to the second-rate melodrama of the stage than the higher productions. My reason for this is that the cinema is generally accepted as catering for our working classes, and in my estimation the melodrama in the past—and to some extent in the present as well—caters for a similar class. Nevertheless, no small proportion of my comparisons between stage and screen may apply equally to the most perfect stage play as to the cheap melodrama. Certain phases of this subject have already been dealt with freely by the Trade and lay Press, and it is not my purpose to rehash the opinions of other writers on such questions as light effects, artificial scenery of the stage compared with natural settings of the cinema, lack of variety in stage settings, scene shifters scurrying about in semi-gloom to the complete destruction of all realism, etc. Rather, I wish to comment upon certain phases of the stage productions as they presented themselves to me recently when attending a melodrama of the usual sensational type.

A scene is set depicting the workshop of the successful inventor of a new gun. A small table containing a few rude wooden property tools and mechanisms occupies the centre, and the inventor in the course of the scene is observed to toy with these bits of painted wood. The audience knows that it is a workshop, and that the cardboard construction on wheels is a model of the gun, but there the interest in the invention ends, saving the temporary thrill occasioned by the explosion of sundry crackers to present the firing. That is the stage version. Carry your minds to some of the skilful invention stories wherein the silent drama depicted the workshop replete with every possible modern appliance necessary for the work in hand, every detail carefully prepared by an expert. The invention becomes a real and living thing, the inventor ceases to be the actor and becomes the workman. If you know anything about guns you will know that the man who is taking the part of inventor knows something about them, too.

If the reader has ever seen a man who has suddenly lost the most precious of all senses—sight—it will be patent to him that the thing which has touched your heart most has been that man's awful expression of something lost, and the pitiful motions of the arms outstretched as if in supplication. He doesn't rave and tell you he is blind—he just looks blind. Speech seems to lessen the sublime dignity of its overwhelming trouble. The stage actor has played this part well, his gesture and facial expression satisfied the stage-manager and the stalls, but what of the back rows of the pit, and the gallery? Did that fine facial play appeal to them? No, for the simple reason that they could not see it. They heard, it is true, but they only heard the ravings of a figure that performed incomprehensive bodily movements. The man told them, in a voice loud enough to reach, perhaps, the furthermost corner of the theatre, that a mist was creeping before him, a blank wall had taken its place, and so forth; but, as I have already remarked, the dignity of a great infliction lies in silence. That is why, in the writer's opinon, the actor on the silent stage has ineffably more power of making the crowd feel the emotion that is sweeping over the actor, an emotion that mere words are painfully inadequate to describe. In a lesser degree the same applies to a physical infliction of a different nature, such as the loss of a limb, when that limb meant the realisation of a life's work to the owner. Mental inflictions, too, are more easy of interpretation on the screen than the stage.

The cinema is a pair of opera glasses. I disclaim authorship to the above title—it was suggested to me by the producer of one of our greatest films, "The Life of Queen Victoria." "The cinema gives the man in the gallery a pair of opera glasses gratis," he said, "and therein lies one of the greatest adjuncts of the moving picture." Innumerable subtleties incidental to the elaboration of the plot, such as the forging of a cheque, alteration of a letter, reconstruction of torn portions of a telegram or letter, poisoning or drugging food or drink, which are lost to all but the stalls of a theatre, are capable of demonstration upon the screen in a clear and unmistakable manner, perfectly plain to everyone within the walls of the picture house. Reversing the position for a moment, it is the stalls that suffer the disillusionment when the villain fells the hero with a bludgeon—with a light and airy stroke that would barely suffice to disturb the dust on his jacket. The moving picture, on the other hand, depicts a blow sudden, fierce and decisive in form and effects, possessing the same degree of realism for the front row as the back.

The loud and continued applause which greets some exquisite piece of acting, although eminently gratifying to the performer, necessitates his shouting the subsequent lines crescendo in order to silence the appreciative audiences, and invariably valuable words are lost, which a time limit renders it impossible to repeat. People don't waste much time applauding pictures, unfortunately, but even if they did neither the actions nor the explanatory subtitles of the piece would suffer.

We are all familiar with the caste-aristocratic and simple-minded father possessing the beautiful daughter in love with a handsome, penniless hero, whose great achievement is continually frustrated by an unsuccessful suitor, to wit, the villain. The adventurous woman with a Past (backed up with promiscuous lovers and avengers of the said past) succeeds in inveigling the "old fool of a father" into an engagement, and assisting the villain in his evil machinations against the hero. Thrown into the compot are the pretty servantmaid and the comedian-butler, who in a minor degree assist the hero in outwitting the villain. A foreign gentleman appears as "jack-of-both-sides," and a stiletto, that finds its way into the well-porportioned frame of the adventuress in the last act. Half-way through the production one begins to feel a familiarity with some of the characters, and the denouement reveals the identities of the remainder. Now, what is the cinema story? "A couple of girls and a man, or a couple of men and a girl," the basis of a thousand good stories. The interest is centred upon the three characters, and it sticks there right through, until the "outsider" is either ignominiously ejected or stalks dramatically—or rather I should say naturally dramatically—from out the scene. A succint subtitle, a few feet of simple introduction to explain the relationship of the players one to another, an office scene to show that the villain is a stockbroker, engineering works to show the hero is an engineer, the girl in her home, and everyone is at home with the leads, and the play proceeds merrily, the less important characters doing their little deed and passing out of the main interest as shadows. There's a THEME, too, in the picture-play, and that theme grips you right through the story. Indomitably it pursues its way, regardless of all side issues, until it leads you with unswerving faithfulness through aeroplanes, train-wrecks, suffragettes, to the skilfullly staged climax the picture play-writer has planned and the producer visualised.

Invective is where the stage, metaphorically, "gets the drop" on the screen. That impassioned outburst of a much-wronged man against his despicable and unscrupulous enemy, in varying cadences, has only one true interpretation—vox humana—to which the bodily and facial gesture are secondary.

We pass away, from the melodrama to the clean picture-play set in wind-swept prairie or rugged mountains, arousing in us a fierce clamour for "Life's works" and a worthy place therein, hewn byhonest toil. And it is our greatest wish that those many watchers one day will follow.

PLYMOUTH AND DISTRICT NOTES.

In spite of the glorious weather last week, the demands made upon the local picture houses on Whit-Monday were as much as some of the managers could cope with. That splendid film, "Sixty Years a Queen," was reproduced at the Guildhall, Plymouth, and it proved an irresistible attraction to the holiday "trippers." Throughout the week it commanded large audiences, many who witnessed it on the first visit being again induced to patronise the performance.

At the Cinedrome, Plymouth, the management made a feature of the new cinema departure, "Speaking Pictures," by the Clarendon Film Company. It took the form of a beautifully worded poem, "Coming Home," by Alfred Berlyn. The production was loudly applauded. Other leading films in a most enjoyable programme were "The Tango of Death" and "The Passing of Black Pete."

At that popular little resort, the Elite, Mr. Manager Rundle put on a capital lot of fims. "The Modern Delilah" was a most thrilling subject, spendidly screened, and on the comedy side "Fatty's Flirtation" contributed much enjoyment. "The Black Spot" introduced the second half of the week was a powerful story of plotting and counter-plotting, and made a fine impression.

Mr. Knowles, at the de Luxe, presented a luxurious entertainment. "An Hour of Terror" was a most thrilling picture and sustained interest from start to finish. "A Romance of the North-West," a class of film always popular in Plymouth, as no doubt in other towns, was heartily applauded, and among the best of an excellent bunch introduced in the second part of the week was "The Doctor's Trust," "For Her Brother's Sake," and "The Wonders, Hardships and Incidents of an Antarctic Expedition," which was of great educational value and exceptionally interesting.

"Buffalo Bill's Wild West" was the "star" at the Belgrave Theatre, and anything more exciting it would be hard to find. Needless to say, the great reputation of Colonel Cody's wonderful exhibition sufficed to attract big houses to the Belgrave. "The Derby" was also shown and was in great favour. There were several other pictures of dramatic and humorous subjects.

At the Electric, Devonport, the great "turn" in a consistently strong programme was the three-reel drama, "Neath the Lion's Paw," and it was worthy of leading place in the bill-of-fare. Another thrilling production was "In the Wilds of Africa." "Beauty Unadorned" was a most humorous play, and the same remark can be applied to "Fatty's Flirtation," one of the delightful Keystone comedies.

Mr. Cecil Frost's programme at the Tivoli, Devonport, was equally as good as those submitted by his competitors. "Branscombe's Pal," "The Field Foreman," "Scenes in Moscow," and a goodly number of comedies were to be seen there. Mr. Frost has exclusively booked the great picture, "The Fallen Idol."

THE CHEAPEST CURRENT.

If there's one place above another where Crossley Gas and Oil Engines excel, it's in the dynamo room of a Cinema Theatre—and why?

First, because that's a place above all others where reliability must be maintained day by day, week by week, and year by year.

Perhaps the last, the money-saving question, is the most important of any. Even a few shillings a week, judiciously spent, will promote the confidence and loyalty of your patrons to a surprising extent. "Please your patrons, and they'll please you." That's the motto for a Cinema Show. And

New Type Crossley Gas Engine.

Secondly, because it's a place where absolutely steady running is essential to the best pictures. Thirdly, because it's a place where economies must—we repeat must, be effected if the show is to yield its best profits in these days of strenuous Cinema competition.

Cut out these three essentials—reliability, steady lighting and economy—and where would you be? Who would come regularly to your show if breakdowns were always occurring, if the pictures flicker and dance because of the unsteady voltage at the arc, and if it costs so much for current that you can't afford to give your patrons those many little inexpensive attentions that would confirm them into becoming regular occupants of your best seats?

you can earn the money to please them with a

Crossley Cinema Engine.

Shillings a week, did we say? Pounds a week are being saved by Crossleys. How much does your current cost you now? Find out the Crossley Cinema figures and compare them with your own. Every week's delay means more money lost.

Write to-day for full particulars of Crossley Cinema :: Gas and Oil Engines. ::

"GRUMBLES"

I.

SMITH: "Hullo, Brown! How's biz?"

BROWN: "Oh, rotten; never known anything like it."

SMITH: "Yes, it is pretty slack just now. Suppose we must blame it on the Government, or the weather."

BROWN: I say, Smith. What are you doing about OLYMPIA this year?"

SMITH: "Well, when trade's bad go into an Exhibition and advertise for all you're worth."

BROWN: "What! Go into an Exhibition when money is so tight? Besides, the cost is so prohibitive."

SMITH: "Well, suppose you look at it this way. It will cost you the salary of one clerk for half a year, and in return you get a fine advertisement, and have a chance of meeting all the principal members of the Trade. I am quite convinced it is worth while; at any rate, I'm going in."

BROWN: "There's something in that—it is a case of nothing venture, nothing have."

JOKER.

Ma and Pa Play Poker.—Ma and Pa play poker, with frequent interruptions from their little son. The excitement of the game and that of chasing their troublesome offspring, results in a vivid nightmare. They do not wake until they have been almost scared out of their wits by the ferocious inhabitants of cardland. (June 22nd. 624 ft.)

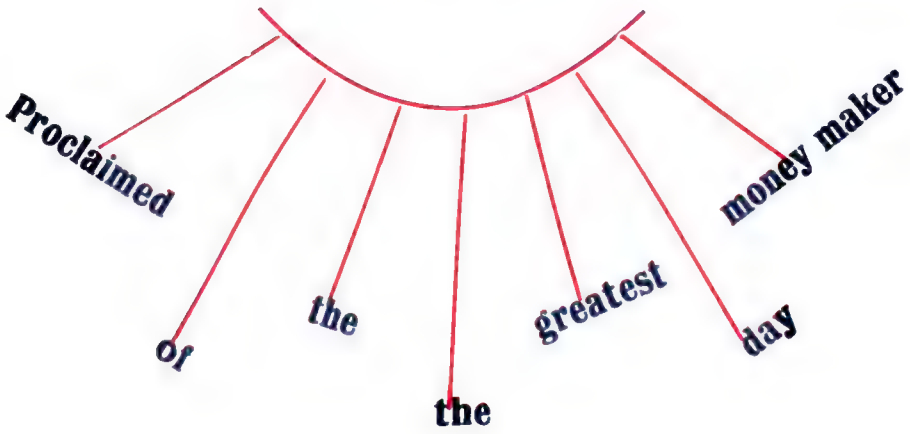
Lazy Louis.—Tired of work, Louis shams illness on every possible occasion until his foreman takes him at his word. The lesson he learns cures Louis of all illnesses—imaginary and otherwise. (June 25th. 938 ft.)

NESTOR.

Breed of the Mountains.—Joe and Sue, both mountain folk, are in love with each other. Brady, Sue's brother, has betrayed a mountain maid, who has left her child at Joe's door. By a series of misunderstandings the happiness of Joe and Sue is threatened until Brady realises the truth of affairs and makes the best reparation possible. (June 22nd. 1,000 ft.)

One of the Finest.—Crane, the "pride of the force," disapproves of his daughter's sweetheart, McCabe, and thus he is delighted when he has the opportunity of arresting McCabe on suspicion of burglary; but the prisoner proves his innocence, and a search for the real culprit results. McCabe "rounds him up," and wins honour, admiration, a big reward, and the girl of his heart. (June 25th. 980 ft.)

POWERS.



Tightwad Buys a Laundry.—Tightwad, having grown tired of seeing his best shirts and collars annihilated by the attentions of the laundress, invests in a new patent washing machine. On its arrival he puts therein a miscellaneous assortment of curtains, sheets, collars, and the like, and turns the crank. To the intense disgust of all, the laundry is delivered torn to shreds. At this moment a man appears with a note to the effect that a grass cutter has been delivered by mistake. (June 22nd. 980 ft.)

The Rival Dentists.—Dr. Payne is the only dentist in the village until Bob arrives. The young man upsets his elderly rival, for he has many ideas for carrying out his delicate profession painlessly. Bob learns to love his daughter, and it looks as though the old man will never consent to the girl marrying his rival until Bob, by a clever trick, forces him to yield both his trade and daughter into his own hands. What "STROLLER" thinks of KEYSTONES.

"A programme without a Keystone Comedy does not count for much. The best theatres now feature two of these enlivening factors to the show. As a rule, the select audiences at the Electric Theatre, Marble Arch, betray no outward signs of appreciation, but hearty laughter rang through the auditorium during the unspooling of "He would a Hunting go." Kinematograph Weekly. May 21st, 1914.

All the BEST THEATRES swear by Keystones, the ALWAYS GOOD COMEDIES.

Featuring—

MACK SENNETT, the inventor of the distinctive Keystone Farce.

"MABEL NORMAND," "The most popular Girl in Pictures."

CHARLES CHAPLIN, late of "Mumming Birds."

CHAS. MURRAY, late of Biograph.

MARIE DRESSLER, the famous American Stage Favourite.

ROSCOE ARBUCKLE the inimitable "Fatty."

Keystones

The Ideal House Fillers.

A FALSE BEAUTY.

The Lady charms all the males and sets the whole town in an uproar. One of the cavaliers determined to watch outside her window. What the window blind revealed will create hearty laughs, and the subsequent incidents are full of Keystone fun.

Released Thursday, July 23rd. App. Length 1,015 ft.

THE RURAL DEMON.

"Fatty" in one of Mack Sennett's typical comedies in which there are a bomb explosion, a side-splitting chase, and a wet finish which absolutely compels a laugh.

Released Monday, July 27th. App. Length, 1,020 ft.

Little Billy's City Cousin.

A delightful skit on the adult drama by a company of clever juvenile performers.

Released Thursday, July 16th. App. Length, 1,040 ft.

Majestic

There are no more improved films than NEW MAJESTICS—now being made under the supervision of D. W. GRIFFITH, the world's most famous producer. These examples will convince you.

THE BRAVEST MAN

This is one of the finest photo plays Majestic have ever given us. It is the story of a man debarred by his physical shortcomings from the ordinary work of the world, but who, in saving his friend and rival from death, shows that a hero's spirit resides in his crippled body.

Released Mon. July 13th. App. length 1,000 ft.

THE HIGHER LAW

The story of a detective and of a counterfeiter's daughter. Duty demands that the officer shall arrest the father of the woman he loves. Their idyll is broken, but in the end the threads are reunited, while the father passes out of their lives for ever.

Released Mon. July 13th. App. length 985 ft.

REX.

The Weaker Sister.—The weaker sister is the daughter of a boarding-house keeper. She fails a victim to the wiles of a rascal, but another girl tries to save the girl from her mad infatuation. She risks her happiness in so doing, but achieves her object. (June 22nd. 992 ft.)

The House Across the Street.—Mayor Walton secretly promises the Reform Party that if he is re-elected he will support the Prohibition Bill. Big Mike, of the opposite party, learns of this, and uses it as a lever to blackmail the Mayor into promising him his daughter in marriage. The mayor secures evidence of "graft" against Mike by disguising himself as a newcomer in the political world. When he has secured the evidence he requires, the mayor throws off his disguise, to the consternation of the discomfited Mike. (June 25th. 1,000 ft.)

VICTOR.

The Stepmother.—Two girls, bosom friends, are in love with the same man, and when one of the former is married, the friendship still continues. The wife dies and her friend marries her old lover. The pair gradually drift apart, but the children bring them together. (June 22nd. 2,002 ft.)

Remember Mary Magdalen.—Repentant of the mistake of her girlhood, the disillusioned woman returns to her native town. The inhabitants are all antagonistic, with the exception of a kind-hearted minister. In defending her the minister is compromised, but the citizens eventually are taught a bitter lesson. (June 25th. 980 ft.)

URBANORA.

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

A Father's Heart.—A man and wife are separated by the tide of fortune and are eventually reunited by the aid of their only child. (June 22nd. 1,185 ft.)

VITAGRAPH.

An Officer and a Gentleman.—To protect the name of a foolish, generous-hearted woman, an officer endangers his own honour. His sacrifice is not in vain, as the happy termination shows. (June 23rd. 2,400 ft.)

Buffalo Jim.—A ranch girl, despite her lover's entreaties, flirts with a cowboy. The two men fight a pistol duel, and the cowboy is defeated. The girl endeavours to win back her lover, only to find that his affection has turned to scorn. (June 22nd. 918ft.)

The Sacrifice of Kathleen.—To repay the kindness she has experienced from a young man, a poor girl gave him her all. Later, he learns the identity of his benefactress; he comes to her aid and wins her love. (June 25th. 1,827 ft.)

The Speeder's Revenge.—A party of motorists, having been fined for exceeding the speed limit in a small town, plan an "awful revenge." With the aid of a scarecrow they convince the villagers that a murder has been committed, and not until the entire town is upset is the trick discovered. (June 22nd. 964 ft.)

Silent Tracks.—This picture is best described as a Western fantasy, and in a series of well-aided scenes, the love story of a cowboy and his sweetheart is prettily illustrated. (June 25th. 751 ft.)

Scenes in Midland.—An interesting scenic, giving delightful views of the great North country. (June 25th. 256 ft.)

A Pair of Frauds.—The young man endeavours to conceal his real position from the girl with whom he has fallen in love, unconscious of the fact that she is doing the same thing. Later, they both learn the truth and confess and forgive. (June 25th. 1,003 ft.)

WESTERN IMPORT CO.

KEYSTONE.

Olives and Their Oil.—Illustrates the process of olive oil making and includes excellent views of a 5,000 acre olive field.

Mabel's Strange Predicament.—A comedy of errors, featuring the popular Mabel Normand and the English comedian, Charles Chaplin.

KOMIC.

Bad Man from the East.—A hen-pecked husband, by a strange trick of fate, arrives at a Western township, and promptly becomes the "bad man." He asks for his friend to join him but the telegram is found by the latter's wife who, accompanied by the "bad man's" spouse, promptly pursue their husbands. (June 22nd. 590 ft.)

It Happened in Haverstraw.—A sculptor persuades his daughter's fiancé to act as a statue, until the young man, tiring of his job, gets the gardener to take his place, utilising the rest of his time by marrying the girl of his heart. (June 25th. 949 ft.)

YORKSHIRE SALES AGENCY.

BAMFORTH.

Winky and the Gorgonzola Cheese.—A piece of cheese is placed in our friend's pocket with disastrous results. (June 25th. 430 ft.)

Winky and the Leopard.—Winky, obtaining a stuffed leopard, frightens the lives out of many innocent folk. (June 25th. 755 ft.)

"Even as the Eiffel Tower rears its head dominantly above the spires and domes of Paris, making them all look puny beneath, so this glorious Dansk production overshadows all its contemporaries. In every single particular it is pre-eminent—an unparalleled exhibition of the heights to which the art of Cinematography can attain."—EXHIBITORS MAIL.

"This picture will live in our hearts and memories when hundreds of others have gone over to the great majority of forgotten productions."—EVENING NEWS.

"PICTURE PLAY PHOTOGRAPHY"

BY

H. M. LOMAS, F.R.P.S.

170 pp. Art Paper throughout. Profusely illustrated.

The author is an acknowledged expert in photography, and gives practical hints and suggestions to the would-be maker of picture-play films. The idea has been not to lay down a series of rule-of-thumb laws, but to consider the principles underlying the work.

THE PICK OF THE PROGRAMMES.

WHAT WE THINK OF THEM.

The Muddletown Fire Brigade.

Of all civil institutions, the rustic fire brigade has probably come in for greater attention at the hands of the parodist than any other. Although the latter's comic exaggerations cannot in honesty be said to have much justification in fact nowadays, their humour remains unaffected by the passage of time. "The Muddletown Fire Brigade" is certainly an excellent piece of merriment. It burlesques in the most pungent fashion all the familiar incompetencies of our old friends, the village fire-fighters, and also affords us a glimpse of the serio-comic function at which the new fire engine is formally presented to the local brigade. The film contains much clever fooling, and should make an acceptable item in any programme. (Bamforth film. Yorkshire Sales Agency. Released July 13th. Length 650 ft.)

The Springtime of Life.

This is a pretty, simple little story, lifted out of the ordinary by superb photography, which is shown in a setting of exquisite beauty. A young student falls in love with a little milliner, and after many weeks of idyllic happiness the boy's mother learns of his infatuation and implores him to return home. The girl waits patiently for her lover's return, but she realises at last that the marriage they have been looking forward to will not be in accordance with the prejudice of Robert's aristocratic family. She learns something of a mother's love by watching a working woman in a public park, so she writes to Robert explaining that his mother should have his first consideration, and she will resign her claims. This letter accidentally comes to the notice of Robert's mother, and struck by the spirit of self-sacrifice shown by the girl, she visits her and reunites the two young lovers.

It is a pretty story, beautifully set, the scenes in the grounds of Robert's home being specially notable, the soft quality of the photography and the beauty of the toning forming exquisite pictures. (Gaumont Company, Limited. Released June 25th. Length 1,175 ft.)

Her Heritage.

This is the story of a woman's fight against an inherited vice, for Dr. Van Arsdale's beautiful young wife is the victim of alcoholism, and her life is rendered miserable by her inability to resist the craving for drink. At a dinner party, at which her husband is not present, she meets an old flame, Preston Warren, but even his presence does not wholly restrain her, and indulging too freely, she is overcome with faintness, and Warren offers to see her home. In order not to cause anxiety to her husband, he decides to take her to his own home, where he leaves her in the care of his mother. Mrs. Van Arsdale awakens in the morning, and realising that she has spent the night in Warren's house, rushes home to her husband and denounces what she believes to be Warren's treachery. Warren calls on Dr. Van Arsdale by request, but a fatal termination is averted by Mrs. Warren hearing a conversation over the telephone. She arrives in time to explain the situation, and Mrs. Van Arsdale realises that her future happiness depends on her determination to conquer her inherited vice.

It is not a pleasant story, and its weakness lies in the lack of motive which induces Warren to take Mrs. Van Arsdale to his own house instead of to her husband, who surely, as a doctor, is doubly qualified to deal with the situation. This weakness is to a great extent lost sight of by the sincerity and conviction shown by the company, Miss Margarita Fischer in particular giving a powerful performance of a part which is not of a kind to elicit much sympathy from the audience. (Beauty film. American Company (London), Limited. Released July 27th. Length 986 ft.)

Footprints of Mozart.

This film may be described as a pictorial setting of Longfellow's "Psalm of Life," and shows how a young musician, dispirited by the failure of his compositions and the fact that his ill-success ruins his hope of a happy marriage, has his courage revived by the consolation his humble neighbours derive from his music and his ambition aroused by the sight of the bust of Mozart and the recollection of that great composer's adversities. The visualisation of scenes from the life of Mozart is interspersed with verses from the poem, the whole conveying a lesson of patience and courage under difficulties. The young musician takes up his instrument with hope renewed, and a stranger passing recognises the work of an artist he has been seeking for. The opportunity of recognition is rendered more valuable by the knowledge that his sweetheart remains faithful through all his trials, and a the very best artistes now working regularly for the cinematograph.

"The Brute" is a very good story, and as we have said. it is very well told. It is almost entirely a comedy of character, as opposed to the drama of physical action, and in consequence it is refreshingly unusual where films are concerned. It is strictly probable throughout, thanks largely to the clever characterisation of the various players, who handle each scene with fine delicacy and restraint. The ending is rather hasty, and even a little weak, but otherwise one can find no flaw in what is a thoroughly excellent and deeply interesting play, which is quite good enough to appeal seriously to the best kind of audience. Films like this come as manna from heaven after the banal inanities which picture theatre audiences are still so frequently offered as pabulum. (Famous Players film. Four reels.)

The Mystery of Coatserbo.

The outstanding feature of this interesting film is unquestionably its magnificent acting. As a story it is rather loosely constructed and somewhat improbable, but whatever faults there may be in the plot are atoned for as nearly as possible by the wholly admirable manner in which that plot is interpreted.

As its title suggests, the picture is a sensational drama of crime of a type of which the Eclair Company have given us many fine examples. It tells how a gullible old gentleman of means falls into the clutches of two dangerous swindlers. His noble-minded, but impecunious, cousin, seeing things more clearly, endeavours to rescue him against his will from the despoilers, and in so doing is suspected himself of dishonourable motives. Ultimately, of course, the villains are exposed, the cousins are reunited, and the two young people, whose love affair provides a very pretty counterplot, tumble joyfully into each other's arms. Without being a masterpiece, it is quite an excellent entertainment, consistently interesting throughout, and as we have said, it is beautifully acted. There are, indeed, very few companies who give us better acting than Messrs. Eclair, and in consequence their films are almost always a pleasure to see if only for this reason alone. (Eclair film. Released July 13th. Length 1,974 ft.)

The Strength of Family Ties.

We have here a popular melodrama of a type of which the Lubin Company have given us many successful examples. The story does not seem very probable, it is true, nor is it very convincing if one examines it in detail, but, as a straightforward melodrama, with plenty of exciting action and any number of well-built-up situations, it is very good and very effective. The acting is in the hands of such capable artistes as Mr. Richard Morris, Miss Mary Cecil, Mr. Edward J. Peil, and Mr. Arthur Mathews, and, as is invariably the case with all Lubin films, the elaborate studio settings are wonderful examples of the modern film-maker's enterprise. In view of the fact that the heroine of the picture does her best to ruin her father and the man she believes to be her step-brother, the title of the film seems a trifle paradoxical, but it is unusual and effective, and is, therefore, on the whole justified. There seems little else that it is necessary to say concerning this film, but all those who are familiar with the Lubin Company's excellent modern dramas will be able to gauge its qualities when we state that it is entirely on a level with their usual work. (Lubin film. Released July 27th. Length 2,041 ft.)

Flowers of Love—and Death.

How little may depend upon the story and how much upon the telling is made clear in this wonderfully presented love tragedy by the Gloria Company. The plot of the film is neither new nor particularly effective, but it is set amidst a series of such notably beautiful scenes and acted with such force and finished art, that for these two reasons alone the picture is a success. No company has attached more importance to the pictorial side of the film play, nor done more to develop that side towards its utmost limits, than the Gloria Company. To watch one of their films is like turning the leaves of some beautifully illustrated book. And the charm of the pictures does not rest with the photographic reproduction alone (although this necessarily does much to contribute to the value of the whole), for each scene in any of their plays is built up, or selected, according to whether it is a studio setting or a natural background, with the maximum amount of care for solidity, realism, proportion, and general effect. The players, too, are fine men and beautiful women, distinguished and dignified, who dress their parts with the greatest care and lavishness. It is a pity that "Flowers of Love—and Death" cannot boast a better story, but in all other respects it is quite above criticism. (Gloria film. R. Prieur and Co., Limited. Released July 20th. Length 2,070 ft.)

The Tin Soldier and the Dolls.

This is quite a charming children's tale of dolls which come to life while their small owner is asleep. The Thanhouser Company have become famous for the clever juvenile performers whom they number among their artistes, and in consequence they are particularly well fitted to give us such a picture as the present. Little Helen Badgley makes a pretty baby heroine, whilst Miss Mignon Anderson—that surprisingly versatile and finished young actress—is excellent as an animated doll. One feels that all three of the dolls would have been more effective if pretty touch of romance closes a charming story.

Though the plot suffers from the inevitable disadvantage of leaving the musician's strains to the imagination, this is compensated for to a great degree by the judicious use of the verses of Longfellow's well-known poem. The scenes from Mozart's life are well produced and, introduced with excellent effect, make this portion of the film picturesque and interesting. The acting is on a high level, Mr. George Field as Mozart having special opportunities to which he does full justice both in his make-up and his rendering of the part. The photography is very fine, and with a good musical accompaniment this film will be received with general favour. ("Flying A" film. American Company (London), Limited. Released July 23rd. Length 1,980 ft.)

The Four Sisters.

Some very realistic and brightly played scenes at a café concert hall lend interest to the early stages of this drama, which deals with the life of four pretty and talented sisters engaged as variety artistes. Their performance consists of impersonations of living statuary, and an exceedingly pretty show seems quite to justify the enthusiastic admiration of the young men who cluster round the wings and dressing-rooms. Lily, one of the sisters, attracts the notice of the Duke St. Just, but she soon finds that he is not worthy of her regard, and she gives him up, each of her sisters vowing to have revenge on the Duke. Maud seems to find an opportunity, for the Duke transfers his attentions to her, and she thinks to lead him on and repay him for his treatment of her sister. Maud, however, has not fully estimated the Duke's powers of fascination and she soon falls deeply in love with him, even resolving to give up everything for his sake. The sisters discover her infatuation, and declare that they will cast her off if she persists in it. By accident she discovers that the young nobleman is already boasting of his anticipated conquest, and horrorstricken she hastens back to her sisters to ask their forgiveness. Her name has been taken out of the bill, and for some time they are obdurate, but her impassioned appeal and the explanation she gives induces them to relent, and a complete reconciliation takes place.

The plot is of the slightest, but the setting is interesting, and the variety of scene and some beautiful moonlit views give novelty to the film, while the acting is excellent throughout. (Cines Company. Released July 16th. Length 1,800 ft.)

The Brute.

In the first place, to begin properly at the beginning, mention should be made of the very novel and effective manner in which the various characters of this play are introduced to the audience at the commencement. A large volume is seen. Father Time comes forward and opens the cover. And then, as he turns the pages, the different persons of the play step out of the volume and make their bow. It is a most excellent idea, excellently carried out, though possibly it will not bear constant repetition.

"The Brute" is a well-constructed dramatic comedy of modern American life—just the sort of story in which the Famous Players Company excel. Its title, one must confess, seems rather inapposite, since the husband to whom it is supposed to apply strikes one as being a singularly tolerant person who only exerts his bare rights when positively exasperated into doing so by his somewhat weak-minded wife. In America, however, the rights of women are generally interpreted in a rather broader manner than here, so it is quite possible that this husband's apparently justified rebellion would there be regarded as a piece of flagrant brutality. In any case, it is not a matter of the least importance so far as the success of the film is concerned.

In the title role of the play we have a well-known American actor, Mr. Malcolm Williams, whose acquaintance English audiences will be very glad to make, although they may be unfamiliar with his name. Incidentally, one may remark how fine a service the Famous Players Company are doing us by introducing to us these excellent American players, whose art we should otherwise have no opportunity of appreciating. Indeed, it is not too much to say that recent Famous Players films have afforded quite a liberal education on the American stage.

Mr. Williams is a trifle elderly in appearance for the part he is called upon to play, but he is an exceedingly fine actor, reminding one a little of our own great artiste, Sir Charles Wyndham. Another actor who appears to considerable advantage in "The Brute" is Mr. House Peters, a gentleman who may be regarded as amongst they had been played in a more stilted and exaggerated fashion. Their faces, too, might have been "made up" to approach more nearly to the true doll's proper stolidity and lack of expression. But, even though there is no great distinction between them and their human mistress in appearance, they are perhaps all the more charming for that very reason. Every youngster will adore this delightful nursery drama, whilst for grown-up children also it will be by no means without attraction. Of its kind it would be difficult to imagine anything better. (Thanhouser film. Released July 13th. Length 1,011 ft.)

Civita.

This very beautiful scenic film shows some delightful pictures of the old town of Civita, its bridge and viaducts dating from the eighth century, the St. Marie Cathedral, a fine relic of the thirteenth century, and the ruins of a magnificent Etruscan temple. Some very beautiful views of the surrounding district are followed by a series of pictures of the art pottery works for which the town has long been famous. We are shown the method of extracting and pressing the clay, and the turning of plates, cups, and vases on the potter's wheel, the whole forming a very beautiful film, with a strong industrial interest. (Cines Company. Released July 13th. Length 385 ft.)

Bloomer's Rendezvous.

This bustling farce leaves our old friend Bloomer in a situation which promises a variety of entertainment in the future, for, calling on his sweetheart in the absence of her master, Mr. Bull, he is surprised by that gentleman when he returns wet to the skin from a fishing expedition. Mr. Bull imagines that Bloomer has come after his daughter, and Miss Bull, realising that her chances of matrimony are getting small, claims Bloomer as her intended. He has the choice of being shot or married, and as he does not wish to be shot he will require all his gymnastic ability to extricate himself from the noose in which he is entangled. A considerable amount of comedy is caused by the disposal of the little maid's two lovers, and the farce is played with that neatness and dash which the popular comedian brings to bear on his most extravagant humour. (Cines Company. Released July 16th. Length 650 ft.)

Bidoni's Wager.

One of Bidoni's most engaging qualities is his simple-minded vanity, without which, we should be deprived of some of his most entertaining adventures. He considers himself perfectly irresistible with the fair sex, and confidently makes a bet with the chef that he can easily cut him out in the regard of Mary, a pretty little housemaid. He sets out with sublime confidence, but makes a mistake in the number of the flat at which Mary is engaged. The recipient of his note is a merry young matron who enters into the joke, and putting on her own maid's apron, receives the amorous Bidoni with effusion. The entrance of her husband opens Bidoni's eyes, but meanwhile the chef has called on Mary, and Bidoni gets no satisfaction from the lady beyond a sound box on the ears. The luckless orderly loses his wager, but not before he has caused plenty of amusement and heightened his reputation as a genuine laughter-maker. (Cines Company. Released July 13th. Length 550 ft.)

The Mysterious Count.

This is the second instalment of Messrs. Pathé's "Rocambole" series, which, if subsequent numbers are equal to the first two, is likely to rank, when completed, amongst the very finest productions yet seen. In our review of the first Rocambole picture we endeavoured to make clear the very unusual qualities which mark this series as being quite above the ordinary criminal melodrama. Rocambole, the Paris gamin with an instinctive genius for crime, who figures as the very human, and by no means wholly repulsive, hero of the story, is a character of quite extraordinary psychological interest, and the fascination of this record of his adventures is not at all confined to the somewhat ultra-sensational exploits which he carries through. The reason for this interest is due, it must be confessed, to the genius of the actor playing Rocambole rather than to any attempt on the part of the author to give his story any but the most trivial value as a rather wildly impossible melodrama so far as its action is concerned. Messrs. Pathé have always realised the paramount importance of acting in the film play. They were among the first to engage competent artistes to appear on the screen, and they have steadily developed this side of the silent drama ever since. French acting is easily the finest in the world, and it is the cream of French acting that Messrs. Pathé offer us in the present film.

Not only is the character of Rocambole drawn with masterly skill, but every other character also. The all-round excellence of the acting is such, in fact, as to render the film far above criticism in this respect, and one is made to realise how a story, which, although ingenious and sufficient for its purpose, contains no outstanding merit or originality, may be turned into quite a wonderful thing by the genius with which it is interpreted.

There is no necessity for us to detail here the happenings which are so admirably set forth in "The Missing Count." To do so, indeed, would be to detract considerably from the character of unexpectedness which marks the story and which is one of its most distinctive features. The drama holds one from beginning to end, and even for those who find no pleasure in subtle character delineation there is a sufficiency of exciting incident to render the film wholly satisfying. The picture is admirably staged with the loving care for detail and for general realism which one is accustomed to expect in all Pathé productions, and it is superbly photographed. There is only one setting which we do not quite like—the sectional view of the cellar in which the hero is supposed to be confined. In opera, or even in the drama of the ordinary theatre, one is able to accept these inevitable stage conventions, but the cinematograph has taught us to demand absolute realism, and in consequence a dungeon out of which the prisoner could obviously walk with the utmost ease strikes one as being a trifle ludicrous. This, however, is but the smallest flaw in a picture which as regards every other particular of staging is well-nigh perfect.

As an entertainment this "Rocambole" series is one of the most admirable productions ever set before the public. It is not, so far as we know, claimed to be a "serial picture," but it is nevertheless one of the best designed stories with a continuous interest running through the different instalments yet produced. Each number is absolutely complete in itself, being the record of an entirely distinct episode, the only connection between the various parts being found in the principal characters, whose personalities and whose relations towards each other remain the same. This is the proper system on which to construct a "serial picture," and, although they may not have endeavoured to do so, Messrs. Pathé have certainly succeeded in producing a series of films each instalment of which makes one eager for the next without leaving one in the disturbingly unsatisfied state arising from abrupt and totally inconclusive endings. The "Rocambole" films should be seen in every theatre in the country. They are suitable for any audience, and can scarcely fail to fascinate all who see them. (Pathé Frères Cinema, Limited.)

BRADFORD BREVITIES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The Bradford Licensing Committee has granted licences for the performance of stage plays to the proprietors of the Picturedrome, St. George's Hall, the King's, Towers Hall and the Elite, in addition to those possessed by the lessees of the two "legitimate" theatres and the three music-halls of the city. In the case of the picture theatres, however, the licences are issued subject to a written guarantee being given by the licensees that no stage play will be performed without application having been first made to the committee and their permission given in writing, and to the proviso that no intoxicants be sold on the premises.

After a week of success with Captain F. E. Kleinschidt's Carnegie Museum Expedition pictures of Arctic life at the Bradford Picture House, in which Mr. Clarence Hurst secured the deep interest of the Lord Mayor and local educational authorities, the fare at the city's newest theatre reverted to programmes of varied character but unfailing excellence. "The River's Secret" was prominently featured last week, and one of this week's leading attractions here has been "The Devil's Eye." At the Picture House, Town Hall Square, Mr. J. S. Clayton had two attractive features in "The Witch of Salem" and "In the Hands of London Crooks," followed this week by "A Tragedy of the Clouds."—Out of the Depths" was the leading line at the de Luxe last week, and prominent in this week's programmes were "The Curse of War" and "Golfing."—Mr. Frank Bentz featured "The World, the Flesh and the Devil" at the Oak Lane Cinema, succeeded by "The Cage" and "The Staircase of Death."—At St. George's, "The Beauties of France" travel pictures have been very popular. "The Guiding Star was one of the principal romantic subjects, but was succeeded well by "The Copper Beeches." "The Midnight Wedding" and "Shadows" were leading lines here this week.—"The Curse of War" has appeared to great advantage this week at the Picturedrome, where Mr. Hamilton secured a big hit with "Chelsea 7750."—At the Hippodrome Mr. Mozley packed his great house with "'Neath the Lion's Paw" and "The Golden Beetle," after successful screenings of "The Mystery of Boscombe Vale" and "In the Hands of London Crooks."—"Unjustly Accused" was one of the items in a first-class programme provided at the Queen's Hall, Laisterdyke, whilst "Auld Lang Syne" was a subject of considerable appeal.

AROUND LEICESTER.

A trio of attractions secured by the management of the Imperial, Green Lane Road, for the current week are: "1812," "Thirty Years of a Gambler's Life" and "A Great Moment."—On the Mere Road, its near neighbour—Clayton's Picturedrome, is also very much alive, and fully maintaining its reputation for good things. This week "Eileen of Erin" and "The Man from the West" are doing special duty.—"The Lure of Gold" is but one of several "lures" at the Knighton Cinema, where Mr. A. Shipton is the resident manager.—Lovers of sport, and of horses in particular, have a treat in store at Olympia, where "The Filly" is making its appearance, another fine item being "Love or a Throne."—A brace of thrillers doing excellent service at the Tudor Cinema are "'Neath the Lion's Paw" and "The Cage."—At the Coliseum, things are, as usual, humming, "The Devil's Eye" and "The Vavasour Ball" being dominant features in a programme of all-round excellence.—At Mr. W. H. B. Emson's Belgrave Cinema, "True Irish Hearts" for the first half of the week, and "The House of Temperley" for the latter end, are assured of a hearty welcome.—In the West End, the Boulevard retains all its old popularity.—"The Golden Beetle" and "The Black Spot" are this week's top-liners.—At the commodious Empire, Wharf Street, with seating accommodation for close upon 1,000, "The Dare-Devil Detective" and "The Tide of Destiny" are leading lines.

"Non-Flam Films Commercially Impracticable."

UNANIMOUS DECISION OF THE TRADE.

As we exclusively announced in our last week's issue, a meeting of the Trade was held last Thursday to consider what answers should be made to the questions put to Mr. Balfour Browne, K.C., as representing the cinematograph industry, by the Departmental Committee considering the London County Council's General Powers Bill. The first meeting of the Committee after the Whitsuntide recess was held on Tuesday, when the questions were answered as follows:—

1.—Do you represent the whole of the film manufacturers and renters in this country?

Mr. Balfour Browne, K.C., represents all the cinematograph traders in this country, with the exception of one manufacturer and certain renters whose business is so small that the payment of a subscription to the Association would be a tax upon them.

2.—Do you represent the only Trade organisation in the country?

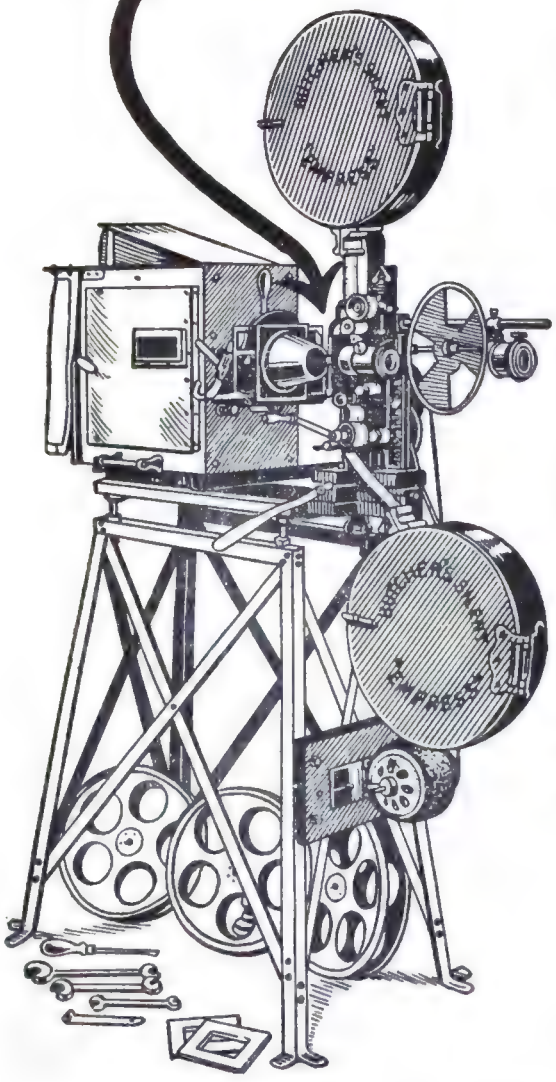
Mr. Balfour Browne represents the only Trade organisation representing the manufacturers and renters in this country. The only other Trade organisation is the Exhibitors' Association, who have expressed their sympathy with us in our opposition.

3.—If so, are those organisations confined to London?

No, they cover the whole of the British Isles.

4.—Would the film manufacturers and renters represented by you accept the principle that non-flam films should be exclusively used after a period of time?

That although non-flam film of all makes has been tried and experimented with by practically all the members of the Trade represented by the Manufacturers' and Renters' Associations, every member present at the meeting was of the opinion that the answer to this question must be in the negative, as they are satisfied that there is no commercially practicable non-flam film in existence at the present time.



5.—See answer to Question 4.

In response to these emphatic and explicit answers, the Committee expressed its regret at the Trade's inability to agree to a settlement on the non-flam question. Evidently the Committee regarded an agreement to the principle of exclusively using non-flam films as the basis of a complete settlement of the dispute between the Trade and the London County Council; and though one may regret that some such understanding cannot be arrived at, we ourselves are of the opinion that, taking into consideration the technical difficulties surrounding the exclusive use of non-flam film, it was impossible for the Associations concerned to arrive at any decision other than they did.

The question naturally arises, Upon what lines will the Committee now proceed? The London County Council proposals are obviously not entirely to their liking, neither do they wish to hamper the Trade with vexatious restrictions. Perhaps the strong opposition against the Bill may have considerable effect, and we trust that the Committee, even if it decides to recommend the Bill to the House, will considerably modify its more objectionable and unnecessary clauses.

The Mechanism can be changed in one minute

THE interchangeable mechanism of the Silent Empress saves the cost of a stand-by machine. Instead of two machines you buy one Silent Empress and a spare mechanism—the equivalent of two machines at the price of one and a half.

THE SILENT EMPRESS

ONE OF BUTCHER'S FAMOUS PROJECTORS.

On the Silent Empress the mechanism is mounted quite separate from the Spool Arms, Boxes and Lantern Bracket—This permits of its being removed and another mounted in its place in a very short time without having to disturb or adjusting any other part of the machine. Simply by unscrewing a pair of wing nuts the mechanism is freed and another can be dropped in its place instantly.

TRADE TOPICS.

Yet another application of the cinematograph is to be found in the exhibitions of films and lantern slides being given just at present at the Prince's Theatre, Shaftesbury Avenue, W., by the International Bible Students' Association, of which body Pastor Russell, the well-known American undeominational evangelist, is president. The object of these films, which are collected under the general title, "Creation, from Star Nebulæ to Perfection," and which constitute virtually a pictorial interpretation of the Bible, is to popularise the study of the Scriptures, and in Pastor Russell's own words to show "that the story of the Creation is not contradicted by modern science, but that in fact science proves the truth of the Bible." No charge is made for admission to the theatre and there is no collection, and the film, which is in four parts, is so long that it takes two days or four attendances to see it in its entirety.

Visiting the Prince's Theatre on Monday we found a large audience enjoying the films and listening attentively to the running commentary thereon, which is supplied, to complete the up-to-dateness of this most modern mission, by means of a gramophone. The films are largely supplemented by lantern slides, many of which are rather crude and which are the least successful portion of the exhibition. The films themselves are of every kind, a large number of them, it is stated, having been specially prepared in the Holy Land on historical spots. Those which we saw on Monday dealt mainly with zoological and botanical subjects, and included magnificent pictures of the growth of plants and the opening of flowers. We understand that arrangements are being made to exhibit the film at large halls in the outlying districts of London and in many of the biggest towns throughout the British Empire.

We learn that the complete projecting outfit used at the Prince's Theatre, including operating box, screen and Brockliss Model A projector, was supplied and installed, at twenty-four hours' notice, by the Bioscope, Film and Supply Company, Limited. Although the conditions must have been difficult, a perfect picture is secured, much to the credit of this enterprising firm.

For some time past, writes our Irish correspondent, there has scarcely been a murmur of discontent against the Sunday opening of picture theatres in Dublin so far as civil and municipal bodies are concerned, and even the protests of the clergy—at one time very evident—had died away. However, although the matter has been thus dormant, it was bound in the nature of things to crop up again, and thus we have the Confraternities Central Council passing the following resolution, which was carried unanimously at their meeting held last week:—"That we, the Confraternities Central Council, representing 800 members of the Confraternities of the city and suburbs, strongly renew our protest against Sunday performances in the picture theatres of the city, the latest feature at one of these theatres being a special performance for children, commencing at the hour that Christian doctrine classes are held in the Catholic churches,—viz., one o'clock, and thereby resulting in a large number of children neglecting religious instruction. We urge upon the Catholic people of Dublin the necessity of resisting by every means in their power this tendency to lower the traditional and proper observance of the Sunday."

This resolution was published in the Dublin papers, and gave rise to quite a discussion on the subject, both amongst the Trade and the public in general. The Irish Times took up the matter very strongly in a leading article which appeared in a recent issue. It points out that there are two views of Sunday observance in Ireland—the Protestant view, and the Roman Catholic view. The former is entirely hostile to all public entertainments of a secular character on the Lord's Day; on the other hand the views held by the Roman Catholics are far less severe. Labour and trade meetings are frequently held, and the day is often used for political purposes. Moreover, all the principal football and hurling matches take place on a Sunday. All these things, the Irish Times points out, come within the Confraternities' interpretation of "the traditional and proper observance of Sunday." From the Roman Catholic point of view, therefore, the picture theatres seem to make out an excellent case for themselves—provided, of course, that the performances are innocuous and do not interfere with religious ceremonies.

It is suggested that the reasons for which picture houses are condemned should be laid before the general public before any steps could be taken by sects or societies. This idea certainly seems an excellent one, and has much to commend it.

It is interesting to remark that the Recorder of Dublin is entirely in favour of picture houses opening on Sundays in the working class districts, but he will not give licences to houses opening under his jurisdiction in the better class streets.

A great deal of interest has been aroused by the announcement that the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool, one of the finest in the North of England, will run a summer season of pictures. This is the first time that such an event has happened, the theatre being usually closed during the coming months. In these circumstances the Hepworth Manufacturing Company naturally feel gratified at the fact that one of their newest exclusives, "The Heart of Midlothian," has been selected as the chief feature of the opening week. "The Heart of Midlothian" is, of course, controlled by Messrs. Renters, Limited, the holders of the exclusive rights for this fine picture.

We have received from the Eclair Company, Limited, a copy of the handsome Kineclair catalogue, containing full particulars and instructions concerning the Eclair school and home projector. Copies of the catalogue will be sent gratis to every applicant who is interested in the question of school cinematography.

A great deal of controversy has arisen out of the recent important discussion at the conference of the National Association of Head Teachers at Lincoln, on the question of the attendance of children at picture houses. The conference drew attention to the important part which is being played in national life by the cinema, and urged that films should be of a pure and elevating character. The question has been freely discussed in the Press during th last week, and there is no doubt a strong feeling that the educational possibilities of the cinema are enormous, and it is due to the producers of films to do all that is possible in favour of educational cinematography. In supporting the views expressed by a previous writer, a correspondent in the Nottingham Daily Guardian pointed out that "things seen are mightier than things heard, and the cinema has the added power of impression which is given by motion. The problem is how to use this new educational force. . . . Most important is the creative side—the manufacture of films which will have high educational value. If stories of good moral import are shown to the children enormous benefit will accrue both to them and through them to the whole nation."

Some interesting remarks were made on Monday evening at a meeting of the Hertfordshire Insurance Committee upon the cinematograph lectures at the Barnet Cinema upon consumption. The county tuberculosis officer (Dr. Hyslop Thompson) presented a report upon the screening of the film "The Story of John McNeill." Great interest was taken in the film locally, and several went twice to see it.

Mr. E. B. Barnard (Chairman of the Metropolitan Water Board) and Chairman of the Committee, said that this lecture brought home to them knowledge without much trouble; people could understand it and feel it to be of great use.

Mr. Marchand (Chairman of the Barnet District Insurance Committee) said that he was sure any cinema theatre company would receive them in a very kind way if they wanted to show this film in other districts. At Barnet, the company were delighted to do it. It brought them an entirely different class of clientèle, people who perhaps would not think of going to a cinema. Besides being useful for propaganda work it would be of benefit to the cinema theatres.

Writing from New York under date May 30th, our American correspondent says:—The International Motion Picture Exposition in the Grand Central Palace, New York City, will open June 8th, and the Governor of the State will probably make the opening speech. Vital topics will be submitted for discussion, such as: "The poster subject in all its phases," "The effect of the multiple reel on the 5 and 10 cent show," "Uniform charges for regular film service and features," "Entrance of manufacturers and exchange men into the exhibiting business." One of the features of this convention will be an invitation to every visiting exhibitor to state any topic or grievance to the grievance committee. The latter will have stenographers to take down the suggestions or grievances in detail, and they will be brought to the attention of delegates when the question of general welfare is taken up. Dr. Albert Shiels, of the Board of Education, delivered an address on "The school and the moving picture theatre"; Rev. Dr. William Carter will speak on the "Church and the moving picture theatre"; Mr. Stuart Blackton, of the Vitagraph Company, will address the Convention on the topic; "The manufacturer and the exhibitor"; Mr. F. A. Richardson will speak on "Projection," and the subject of the "Press and motion pictures has been assigned to Mr. W. Stephen Bush (the American correspondent of THE BIOSCOPE). All signs point to a far greater success of the exposition than last year, when discordant elements largely impaired the usefulness of the convention. A special anti-censorship booth will be open to the public, which is invited to record its protest against censorship on a huge petition. This petition will be sent to Congress. The Press of New York is taking great interest in this exposition, and exhibitors from all over the country will attend.

We have received the following letter from a reader and have pleasure in giving publicity to the suggestions contained therein. At the same time we would point out that no distinctions as to sex are made by the judges at these competitions, the prizes in which are awarded solely according to merit, and, therefore, that ladies and gentlemen have a perfectly equal chance. Our correspondent writes as follows:

"Having read in THE BIOSCOPE that suggestions are permitted regarding the pianists' contest to be held at Olympia, I write to ask whether two gold medals could be given—one for the best lady and one for the best gentleman—as I have noticed that at former competitions, at the exhibitions at London, Manchester and Glasgow, the gold medal has always been awarded to a gentleman. I do hope the ladies will be allowed an equal chance to gain a first prize this time. Also I thought it a good plan that the prize-winners should be filmed and shown on one of the animated journals. Prize winners in other competitions having no connection with cinematography have been shown on the screen, so why not the prize-winners from the cinematograph exhibition?"

His many friends will be interested to learn that Mr. F. D. Bowden has left Mr. J. F. Brockliss, with whom he has been associated ever since the latter gentleman opened his present premises, and has taken offices at 7, Rupert Court, W., where he is launching out with the American and Continental Film Company, and the Imperial Film Company.

"We shall do agency business only," said Mr. Bowden in the course of a chat on Tuesday. "We are starting with Films d'Art and have a great many other important agencies coming in the near future. No, I am afraid I must not give you any further names for the moment, but I may tell you that they will include English, American, Spanish, Italian and German brands. So you see we shall have an international programme, representing nearly every class of film.

"I shall be very pleased to see all my old friends here—and I can promise them that I will not show them any junk!"

As a Pietersburg correspondent has pointed out in a letter before us, there is considerable trepidation in South Africa at present over the question of the proposed tax upon imported films. Anyone who knows the difficulties of transport and the cost of running any enterprise in Africa, whether for amusements or otherwise, will agree that the proposed impost, 5s. per 100 ft., is most unreasonable and will practically cripple the showman until such times as films are made in the country. Even then there would be the difficulty of limited scope, so that the vision of a big revenue is, where the Customs tariff is concerned, problematic in the extreme. As this gentleman points out, it may be of advantage for manufacturers to keep a watchful eye upon South African politics, yet all the same we imagine that the "natives" will take a decided stand for a free and open market, thus securing the pick of the world's productions.

There is also, while upon the question of Transvaal doings, a cutting from a South African journal which voices a complaint that a producing company recently asked for a substantial subsidy in return for taking a film of the Pietersburg gala, the film to be used as an advertisement for the town. It now appears that a counter scheme is suggested—that the Publicity Association and business people should combine, and under the guidance of a well-known local exhibitor have the film produced themselves. Whether the latter scheme has come to anything or no we cannot as yet say, but the situation is certainly decidedly interesting.

Passers-by in Leicester Square at about 1 o'clock on Wednesday last were astonished to behold an apparently sane young man distributing to the public several hundred very delectable cream tarts. It was not, as might have been imagined, the pleasing vagary of a philanthropic lunatic, nor was it the novel advertising idea of an enterprising pastry-cook. The young man was simply a B. and C. cinematograph actor, and the tart distribution formed part of a scene in a pictorial version of Robert Louis Stevenson's well-known story, "The Suicide Club," wherein such an incident figures, as was made clear by a visiting card accompanying each tart. Where clever and effective publicity ideas are concerned, the British and Colonial Kinematograph Company may be said, figuratively and literally, to "take the cake."

On Monday last, our Birmingham representative informs us that a large party of members of Trade circles and the Press were conducted round the huge works of the General Electric Company, Limited, Witton. After a look round some of the up-to-date shops the party were courteously entertained by the directors at the Grand Hotel, thence returning for a further tour of the various departments.

The Eclair Company, Limited, inform us that the release date of "Sybil's Rose" has been fixed for July 30th instead of July 27th while "Bertie at the Ladies' College," due for release on July 30th, will be released on July 27th.

In another column of the present issue it will be noted that our Parisian correspondent gives a brief report of the action recently brought by the Cines Company of Rome in the Civil Court of the Seine against Mons. Aubert, of Paris. The Court declared that Mons. Aubert had no ground for his claim and awarded heavy damages to the Cines Company. The managing director for the latter company, by the way, is Mr. Mario Serra, brother of Messrs. Cines' agent in London. The case is an important one, and we learn that an appeal has been lodged against the decision.

The success of the British Army film is now a matter of history in connection with our industry, and we believe that some of our managers can fairly claim to have aided the recruiting officers more than a little in their task during the showing of the pictures at their respective halls. Something of a record has been claimed in this respect at Faversham, where Mr. Comfort, of the Gem Palace, ran the film for a week and obtained thirty-one recruits for one territorial corps—viz., the well-known heavy battery of the Kent Artillery. Needless to add, another big succcess attended the arrangements made at the Gem for the week in question.

We learn that Mr. Herbert Blaché is at present engaged upon the preparation of a film version of Charles Dickens' famous story, "The Chimes." No less than 200 "supers" have been engaged for the production.

Albion Exclusives, Limited, inform us that the Trade show of their latest exclusive "Rob Roy," and "For the Wearing of the Green" will be held at the Electric Pavilion, Shaftesbury Avenue, W., on Wednesday next June 24th, and not on the 19th as originally arranged.

The London Film Company's Trade show of their exclusive film, "England's Menace," to be held at the West-end cinema to-morrow (Friday), at 11.30 a.m., will be attended by many notable people, including Sir E. R. Freemantle and Lady Freemantle. Mr. Northam will be obliged if intending visitors will be in their seats punctually at the time appointed, as the interest commences with the opening scene.

Messrs. Walker's World's Films, Limited, request us to notify the Trade that the Reynolds Film Agency, 143, Charing Cross Road, W.C., are the Yorkshire agents for the former firm's exclusive "Tessibel of the Storm Country."

We are requested by Mr. F. H. Waters, the Hepworth Company's well-known publicity manager, emphatically to contradict the rumour that he is leaving this firm.

We understand that Mr. Charles Vernon was the producer of the four Planet films, in which Mr. Bransby Williams appears, and which are reviewed elsewhere in this issue of our paper.

The Dominion Exclusives Company are giving Trade shows of their films, "Battle of the Sexes" and "The Adventures of our Mutual Girl," at Weisker Bros., Limited, Kinema House, London Road, Liverpool, on Wednesday next at 3 o'clock. A special exhibition of these films will also be given to-morrow (Friday) at the Electric Pavilion, Shaftesbury Avenue, W., at 10.30 a.m.

Mr. Charles Weston, the well-known producer, who sustained serious injuries through a fall from a high wire whilst appearing in one of his films, as reported in THE BIOSCOPE, is now back at work again. Although Mr. Weston's broken leg has not yet set, he is producing films at the Regent Studio, and has to hobble about with the aid of two short sticks. Mr. Arthur Finn is also producing at the studio for Regent, Piccadilly and Pussyfoot brands, all controlled by the M.P. Sales.

Mr. James Woolf, of Wonderland, in the Whitechapel Road, E., addressed an appeal to the audience at his Battersea Picture Palace on Sunday evening last on behalf of those who so dramatically and suddenly lost their lives that afternoon on Wandsworth Common during the great storm, when a sum of £1 6s. was collected on behalf of the widows and orphans. A pathetic incident in connection therewith was enacted the following morning, when five tiny children presented themselves at the theatre, and requesting the manager's permission to be allowed to contribute to the fund, each handed him a farthing.

We tender our hearty congratulations to Mr. G. H. Pickard, the popular secretary of Messrs. Warner's Features Incorporated, who was married on the 7th inst. to Miss Acht, who has been associated with the firm ever since they opened offices in England. The staff presented Mr. and Mrs. Pickard with a marble clock and pair of vases.

ESSANAY

NEW SAMPLES of Attractions showing in Essanay's London Theatre, June 22nd to 25th.

SOMETHING SUITABLE FOR EVERY THEATRE ALL THE TIME.

Sophie Clutts, Slippery Sam and Mustang Pete Put Another One Over.

RELEASED 10th AUGUST.

A SNAKEVILLE EPIDEMIC

About 994 ft.

Here's a Snakeville comedy subject which would get a dozen laughs out of a wooden Indian. Through a mix-up in prescriptions, a farmer's wife who is ill gets medicine and treatment for a sick donkey on a nearby place, and vice versa. The story is well worked out, and there is little recourse to horseplay. Six and two-sheet posters for all Snakeville comedies.

RELEASED 10th AUGUST.

IN REAL LIFE

About 989 ft.

An excellent drama, winding up with good comedy. To prove that there are happenings in real life as exciting as the wildest melodrama on the stage, incidents supposed to have actually happened are pictured.

RELEASED 10th AUGUST.

BRIDGET BRIDGES IT

About 994 ft.

An amusing little comedy number, in which Robert Bolder appears as the washerwoman who goes to a reception on an invitation intended for another. She wins a motor car at bridge. The plot is unique and has several good laughs in it.

A Dramatic Feature That Will Hold Any Audience.

RELEASED 13th AUGUST.

ASHES OF HOPE

About 1,984 ft.

A powerful dramatic feature that is full of appealing interest and tense situations. Francis X. Bushman, Bryant Washburn and Ruth Stonehouse interpret rôles of a character eminently suited to their popular personalities. An excellent entertainment and a magnificent production.

12, 6 and 2 sheet posters.

A Western Photoplay Gem.

RELEASED 13th AUGUST.

BRONCHO BILLY'S SERMON

About 994 ft.

Another good comedy drama, which affords Mr. G. M. Anderson opportunities to display his exceptional abilities in all lines of motion picture acting. "Broncho Billy's Sermon" mixes laughter and melodrama in just the right proportion. Six and two-sheet posters with every "Broncho Billy" attraction.

HELP IN TROUBLE.

FOR PROPRIETORS, MANAGERS, AND OPERATORS.

"J.A.C." asks: "How many amperes would be required on a 50-volt circuit to satisfactorily operate a cinematograph arc lamp."

It is a pity, "J.A.C.," you do not mention the particular conditions of the projection you have in view, as the current required depends to a considerable extent upon the size of the projected picture and to a certain extent on the length of throw. Density of film picture also affects the resultant screen brilliancy and so has a bearing upon the amperes required.

Amperages varying from 30 to 100 are in every day use. The majority of projection currents vary, however, between 40 and 80 amperes, and of these by far the greater number are with currents of between 50 and 70 amperes. With throws varying between 80 and 100 ft., a 16 ft. picture would need about 50 amperes and an 18 ft. picture about 65 amperes and a 20 ft. picture 80 amperes. These figures are average ones, as the brilliancy of the projected picture as seen by an audience depends to a great extent upon the type of screen used. A special screen of high reflecting power may be the means of reducing the current about 40 per cent.

On the question of pressure a 50-volt supply is too low for a satisfactory arc lamp operation. At least 60 should be used, but preferably 65-70 volts. The arc lamp terminal pressure may be in the region of only 45 volts, but to maintain a steady arc a fair amount of ballast resistance is required. Certain special machines have been designed to eliminate the use of ballast resistance and thereby make for more economical running, but on the whole there is nothing to equal a 65 to 70 volts continuous current supply where both economy and a steady arc are required. If your contemplated 50-volts supply be from an ordinary shunt wound generator we can hardly advise it as a suitable one for the arc.

"W.P." is troubled with colour upon the screen. He says he is using a 2-inch diameter 4½-inch focus Dallmeyer lens, but is troubled with a blue spot in centre and rainbow colours on the border of his picture. He says: "I use 60 amperes, at 60 volts; am I correct in supposing it to be the arc which is the cause of the trouble as I have tried without success altering the position of the lantern house?"

If the lens you are using is a standard Dallmeyer projection one and has not been interfered with in any way by you, it can safely be assumed that the lens itself does not contribute to the trouble of which you complain. That is apart from the fact that any lens must be used in conjunction with a correctly designed and properly placed condenser.

The trouble of which you write is probably due to a combination of condenser aberration and wrongly placing of the light spot in relation to the condenser, and condenser in relation to film. You probably find in your endeavour to remove the colour border that you only increase the central dark patch, whilst on the other hand if you draw your arc lamp further from the condenser with a view to removing the central spot, the marginal colour spreads more into the picture. The only way to overcome the difficulty is to experiment, carefully using alternatives in the way of condensers. If you are now using a plano-convex combination, change to that of the bi-convex meniscus combination. If you are now using the latter try the former, although we think with a 4½-inch focus lens the meniscus condenser will prove the more satisfactory of the two.

Experiment on the following lines. Strike the arc after correctly setting the carbons. After burning-in properly see that the crater has formed on the condenser side of the positive carbons and is emitting a clear and steady light. Centre the arc, and with the mask in the centre position of its travel (this applies only to machines where the masking device consists of a movable aperture plate) "square" the light upon the screen. By "squaring" the light is meant correctly balancing the colour sides and centring any dark spot there may be, ignoring for the time being the presence of colour. Now loosen the clamping screw of the lamp house runners and draw the lamp house back to the fullest extent of its travel. This will probably flood the screen with a reddish light or leave only a central white spot. Now with the lamp house in this position move the arc towards the condenser. By doing so the centre white spot will enlarge, the colour marginal rays appearing more to the edges of the screen. Continue moving the light towards the condenser until the dark spot appears in the centre of whatever white patch there may be. Then withdraw the arc just sufficiently to remove this spot and finish up by moving the lamp house bodily towards the film. This is the correct procedure to adopt where maximum light and evenness and clearness of illumination are required, and we think that if you systematically work on the lines indicated, making a change of condenser between each test, you will arrive at a certain combination and setting where all colour will be removed.

SUBSCRIBER S.A. writes: "I have an electric light plant generating 43 amperes at 60-70 volts and am using 40 amperes on the arc. The town will shortly be supplying electricity at a pressure of 240 volts, and I should like to know if I reduce this to 60 volts and use 40 amperes on the arc, how many units of electricity would be consumed per hour.

We assume, SUBSCRIBER, that in the event of your taking the supply you would use a motor-generator plant for conversion to the lower pressure. The efficiency of this class of machine varies with different loads and also different makes. We should not recommend you to use a machine of too small dimensions, and although you are using but 40 amperes we think the machine you should use should be of 60 amperes capacity. Probably such a machine working on a 40 ampere load would have an efficiency of 66⅔ per cent. The current consumed then is ascertained as follows:—

The output is equal to 60 volts × 40 amperes, equalling 2,400 watts.

This figure represents but two-thirds of the input, the remaining third figuring as losses. The input, then, must equal output 2,400 watts plus losses 1,200 watts, totalling 3,600 watts, representing the energy measured by the supply meters. The current used per hour will therefore be 3.6 units.

Probably, to allow for the short periods when the machine will be running, but the arc lamp switched off, it would be advisable to take a round figure of 4 units per hour.

You can use this, SUBSCRIBER, as your basis for comparison between your private generating plant costs and the supply company's proposed charges.

THE SOUTHAMPTON SHOWS.

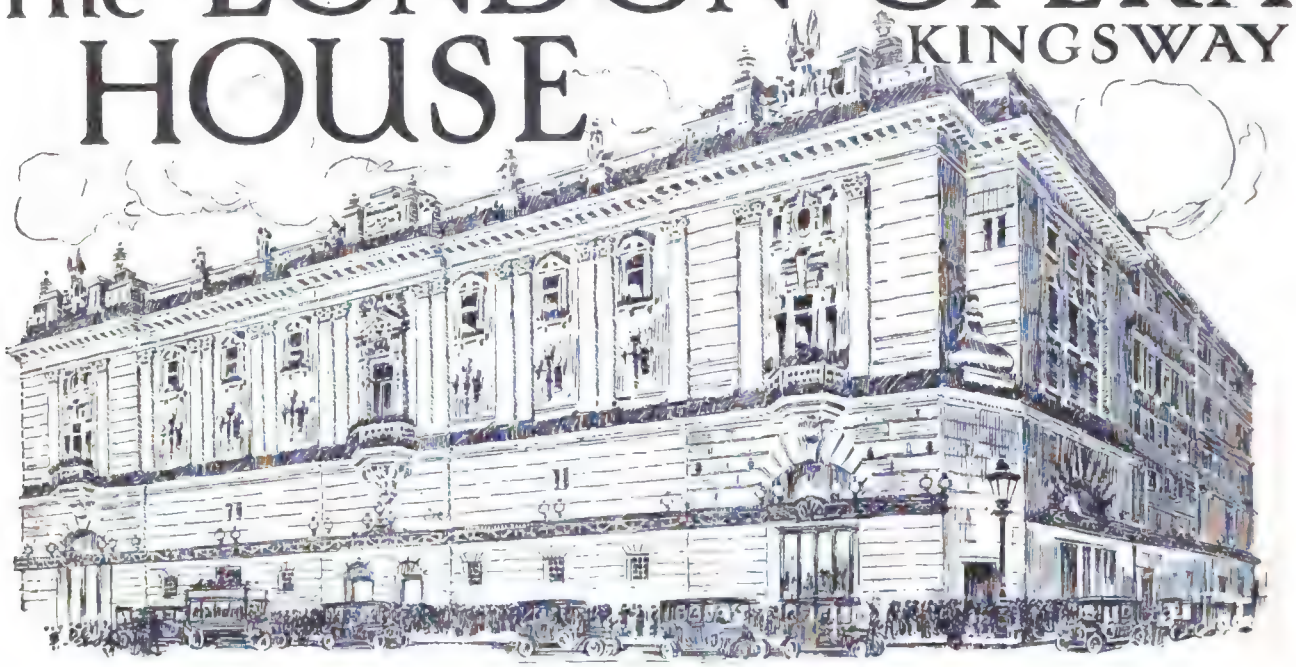
The rescating and redecorating of the Atherley Theatre will probably be completed this week. A little has been done at a time, without interfering with the shows, and the extra accommodation afforded will be greatly appreciated by the public, for Mr. Buck's hall is a most popular one. His last week's programme featured "The Lady of Monsoreau" and "Double Crossed." On Monday "Caught with the Goods" was screened, and this week-end an extra long programme will be submitted, the show lasting four hours. The leading films will be "The Wastrel" "Tell-tale Star," and "Travel in Alaska."

Considerable enterprise has been shown by Messrs. Hood and Bacon, proprietors of the Portswood Palladium, in securing sole cinematograph rights of the Southampton Tudor Pageant, which has been enacted during the past week at the Deanery grounds. Southampton is rich in historical associations of the Tudor period, and the pageant has been made a most picturesque spectacle. The film will be shown next week. "The Hundred Days" and "The Heart of a Cpecialist" were screened last week, and on Sunday "Officer Jim," a stirring picture of American police life, was presented. "The Lady of Monsoreau" was billed on Monday, and "Traitors to Their King" is the top-liner to-day (Thursday).

Mr. Apperly has started Sunday pictures at the Carlton and is very well satisfied with the result of the experiment. "The Hidden Witness" was screened last Sunday, and has been followed by "The Auto-Bandits of New York." Some good things have been shown at the Carlton lately and the hall is going ahead.—Mr. Kuntze, at the Scala, supported the bandit film with "The Diamond Hunters" during the week-end, and on Monday screened "Rescued From the Burning Stake." Another good film was "Woman Pays the Penalty." To-day (Thursday) "In the Fighting Line" and "Ashes" will be shown.—At the Shirley Electric, Mr. Marrey presented "Woman Pays the Penalty" and "The Boomerang" during the week-end, following up with "Love's Triumphs" and "In the Clutches of the Klu Klux Klan" this week.

"The Romance of Old Brittany," which was Mr. Lang's leading picture at the Kingsland last week, is a very attractive film, and was well received. "The Black Spot" was Sunday's feature, and on Monday "The Black Thirteen" was submitted, with "Barney Oldfield's Race for Life" and "The Smuggler's Sister." For to-day "Wheels of Fate" promises well.



Mr. P. G. Lambert still reports full houses at the Southampton Palace, and this is an excellent criterion of the merits of the programmes submitted. "The District Attorney's Duty" and "The Cartoon Copy" were last week's dramas, and three rattling good pictures were shown on Sunday in "Hidden Death," "Mystery of the Dover Express," and "The Parson and the Bully." On Monday "The Soul of the South" was the star film, and this week-end "Out of the Depths" and "A Race with Death" will be shown.—Mr. E. H. Turner is also doing well at the Standard Theatre. I looked in at this hall on the afternoon of one of the slackest days of the week and found hardly an empty seat. "The Reckoning" was screened last week, and this week's "specials" are "A Heartless Woman's End" and "Port of Doom." The second programme also includes "Love and Dynamite," "Simple Simon and the Dromedary" and "Stanton's Last Stand."

Mr. Lewis had a good exclusive at the Shirley Cinema last week in "The Master Criminal," "The Three Red Spiders," another leading exclusive, was presented on Monday.

At the Alexandra Mr. Miller had a very successful run of "Thou Shalt Not——" last week.—"The Devil's Eye" was shown by Mr. Will Murray at the Palace on Sunday night.—"The Two Sergeants" was very well received at the Empire last week.

The LONDON OPERA HOUSE KINGSWAY

Mr. EXHIBITOR, read what the Press says:—

In short, CINEMAZOO is as absorbing to witness as it was thrilling to take.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Arrangements have been entered into for CINEMAZOO to run four weeks. I doubt, in view of the interest attaching to the series, whether the brief period will satisfy the multitude, who take delight in witnessing travel films over and over again.—Sunday Times.

The pictures. . . . are remarkably good and bring the animals to within a few feet of the camera.—Daily Mirror.

One of the many exciting incidents recorded shows the party stalking an antelope unaware that a lion was stalking them.—Observer.

They carry the cinematograph a step nearer the miraculous than anything ever seen in town before.—The Globe.

. . . The most thrilling and instructive travel films ever exhibited.—The Star.

A very thrilling entertainment.—News of the World.

Altogether there is more real drama and interest about CINEMAZOO at the London Opera House than is to be found in half-a-dozen cinema dramas of the film "faked" variety, and then the films have educational value.—Sporting Life.

Several times during the performance the audience showed their approval by enthusiastic outbursts and applause. As this unusual entertainment will only be shown for one month, all animal lovers should lose no time in witnessing what is without doubt one of the finest performances of this character ever produced.—Morning Advertiser.

A VITAGRAPH OUTING.

Traffic in the neighbourhood of Charing Cross Road resumed its normal proportions shortly after 10.15 on Saturday morning last, when Mr. George H. Smith, driving his 35 h.p. Vauxhall car, left the premises of the Vitagraph Company, followed by a number of other cars, in which were seated the male members of the Vitagraph staff and a number of friends who had been specially invited to participate in the day's outing. Among the latter were Messrs. W. F. Jury, J. C. Squier, E. H. Montagu, E. E. Blake, E. T. Heron, J. Brooke Wilkinson, J. J. Tipping, Graham Edwards, F. R. Griffiths, J. H. Beaumont, B. Allen, P. W. Parry, and J. Cabourn.

Favoured with magnificent weather, a most enjoyable run of three hours through some of the fairest scenery to be found in Kent brought us to the Swan Hotel at Charing, where mine host Whyman delighted everyone with a splendid bill of fare, to which full justice was accorded. After luncheon Mr. George Smith, in a very few words, paid a graceful tribute to the Vitagraph staff, and proposed the health of "The Visitors," to which Mr. E. T. Heron suitably replied. The cars having again taken up their full complement, proceeded by way of Faversham to Sea Salter, a quaint little hamlet some 3 miles from Whitstable, where Mr. Dorrington, the landlord of "Ye Old Sportsman," gave ample proof of his catering abilities. The home journey was made viâ Faversham, Sittingbourne, and Maidstone.

UNCLE SMITH.
"TO OUR GUESTS"

There are few who can excel Mr. Smith in the art of entertaining, and he was ably seconded by Messrs. J. M. Lyons and F. R. Reader. Needless to say that a most delightful day was the result, and one which was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Our local correspondent reports unusually large crowds attending the Picture House at Faversham that same evening, where some fine Vitagraph subjects were screened.

(BY OUR OWN REPRESENTATIVE.)

Miss "Lucille Love" visited Leeds on Tuesday last in the course of her provincial tour advertising the coming of the Trans-Atlantic Film Company's 'Lucille Love—the Girl of Mystery." The lady, who created no little sensation in the streets of the city paid a visit to most of the film agencies and the picture houses.

I learn of one picture theatre manager in Leeds who found the exhibition of "Unto this Day" so effective in reducing his audience to tears that he hit upon the idea, with immense success in changing the "atmosphere," of throwing on the screen the words, "Handkerchiefs may be obtained from the attendants, 3d. each."

Messrs. Bennett and Tolfree, Limited, report that business has shown a decided fillip recently, despite the summer weather. The firm are not now handling feature films at all except exclusives. They have secured the rights for Yorkshire and Durham and parts of Lancashire for all the coming productions of the London Exclusives Company, Limited.—The New Century Company, Limited, have been appointed sole booking agents throughout Yorkshire, Derbyshire, Lancashire and Notts for the whole of Jury's exclusives. The pick of the market will be coming along in the August and September releases. Many of the pictures have been seen privately and the expert criticisms suggest that they are out-and-out winners. Amongst the choicest of these subjects may be mentioned "Sea Wolf," "The Spoilers" and "Vendetta," for which, with others, a large number of bookings have already been arranged. The New Century Company hope to move into their new premises in Park Place in the first or second week of July, the time depending a little upon the reconstructive builders who have the place in hand.—"A Child of the Slums" is a gripping film, the story for which has been written by Mr. H. Granville Taylor, of Messrs. Denham and Taylor. This is, I am given to understand, the first film story written by a Yorkshireman, and holds special interest in that fact for the county of broad acres. Mr. H. A. Whincup, of the Yorkshire Film Exchange, Leeds, was appointed selling agent for the film, and the English rights have been bought by the Ideal Film Renting Company, Limited. Mr. Taylor, who has retired from the management of the Elland Central Pictures, is devoting his attention now to producing, and is busy on the writing of a film story dealing with industrial life in Yorkshire and Lancashire, which will be entirely unique in many respects.—The Greystone Moton Picture Company are reaping a rich harvest in the summer demand for cheaper hire amongst the outlying halls. The extent of the progress of Messrs. Bottomley and Haworth since their commencement together six months ago may be gauged by the repeated staff increases which have been noticeable in King Street Chambers lately.—Messrs. Pathé Frères' Leeds office are preparing to boom the new exclusive, "The Dungeon of Despair" which appears in the city this week. The success of "Le Chevelier de Maison Rouge" in the north was phenomenal. The theatre controller, Mr. H. B. Hilton, ran the subject simultaneously for a whole week from June 8th at the Burley Picture House, the Harehills Picture House, and the Morley Picture House.—The new and lavishly equipped Leeds offices of the Gaumont Company, under the control of Mr. F. Collins, are already impressing upon Yorkshire and Northern showmen the huge facilities offered by the Gaumont concern, and the Yorkshire centre holds promise of being made into one of the most satisfactory of the firm's branches.—Exclusives are the speciality of the British Isles Exclusives, Limited, whose office is situated directly opposite the Leeds Town Hall and within easy reach of the railway stations. Business is reported to be increasingly brisk and the tone here is that of practically the whole of the Trade in Leeds: "Business was never better."

Mr. Hary Hogton, at the Grand Assembly Rooms, is running the "World's Fashion Review," in natural colour photography, and he finds these pictures to be a big attraction for more than the ladies. Mr. Hogton's ladies' orchestra is now under the bâton of Miss Robertshaw, and performs afternoon and evening, earning the highest commendation of patrons. Topping the bill last week were "The Mystery of the Dover Express," the second of the series of "The Chronicles of Cleek" and "The Better Way" a new Selig drama. Mr. Hogton found "Love and Vengeance' and "Love and Gasolene" highly successful.—Mr. H. J. Dacre, who has the management of the Harehills Picture House, is one of the most energetic of men and has ways and means of attraction which are often unique. His latest poster, giving in picturesque language the situation of his house and the fare which "rolls before the unwearied vision" of the patrons, is certainly the last word in the way of catching the attention. Mr. Dacre provides for his patrons public telephone, writing-room and other handy conveniences.—At the Picture House, Briggate, public appreciation was freely expressed of the screening of pictures of the recent Boy Scouts' review in the city by Lieut.-General Sir Robert Baden-Powell, the Chief Scout. One of the leading dramas was "She Stoops to Conquer," though on the same programme appeared "Powers of the Air," featuring wireless telegraphy.—At the de Luxe Mr. E. B. Davies had as a principal attraction "The Battle of Virginia Hills," but another strong drama here was "The Man Within." Mr. Davies has also featured "The Mystery of the Dover Express."—"The Diver" was of great value to Mr. J. Rogerson and kept the cosy little Savoy very busy. "Withering Roses," in colour, was of subtle appeal, and one of the leading dramas was "Chasing the Smugglers."—At the Coliseum Mr. H. Broughton continues to give first-class shows, and in his fare were the pictures of General Baden-Powell's review of Boy Scouts at Leeds last week. The entire proceeds of a special matinée on Saturday last were devoted to the funds for the erection of a convalescent home in connection with St. Mary's Orphanage.

At the Crown, New Wortley, Mr. Alf. Higgins, the managing director, ran "Absinthe" and the continuation of the "Fantomas" series, accompanied also by "Fortune's Wheel."—Mr. W. A. Musgrave is running the Silver Royd Pictures at Upper Wortley with conspicuous success, and in his recent top-line subjects have been The Burning Train," "Paying the Price," "Her Boy" and "The Trail of the Lost Chord."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

A PETERBOROUGH PAR.

At the Broadway Kinema, the special attraction for the latter part of last week was "The Port of Doom." This week "Sixty Years a Queen" heads the bills. There is a strong programme presented at the Theatre Royal Cinema week by week, under the personal direction of Lieut-Colonel J. A. Winstanley.

A TIMELY ISSUE.

The Gaumont Company, Limited, have this week issued a good film in connection with the disaster to the Empress of Ireland. The pictures are remarkably comprehensive and form an admirable tribute to the firm's organisation. They should prove especially valuable in cases where charity performances are being organised for the various funds being raised for sufferers by this great mercantile disaster.

PROLIFIC LADY AUTHORESS.

We are told that the Marchioness Townshend has just had three further scenarios produced by the Clarendon Film Company—"The Love of an Actress," "The Family Solicitor" and "The Gosforth Strike," and they are each 3,000 ft. in length. It will be recalled that her Ladyship's two last productions, "The Convent Gate" and "The House of Mystery" were both strikingly original and sensational in treatment. We trust that the latest productions will be quite as successful as, or even more so than, their predecessors.

BUILDERS BUSY AT LEICESTER.

A very satisfactory week's "innings" has just closed at the Granby Street Picture House, Leicester, where "America to Europe by Airship" has made a great hit. Another feature much appreciated was "A Golf Demonstration," by J. H. Taylor. For the current week "She Stoops to Conquer" takes the prominent place.—At the Silver Street Electric, things wear their accustomed prosperous aspect. Special attractions include "Back to Broadway" and "Guilty or Not Guilty." Always a matter of importance, the excellent ventilating arrangements are especially welcome during the summer months.—"Doing our full share" was the concise report at High Street, where Mr. Kingstone Trollope is the local managing head. "The Ruby of Destiny" has just concluded a gratifying week's run, while "Jim, the Fireman," "The Price" and "Love and Gasoline" are among tip-toppers for the current week.—"A Sensational Escape from Prison" makes its exclusive appearance at the Floral Hall for the first half of the week.—A batch of good things is promised at the Coliseum, chief among these are "The Mystery of Mr. Marks" and "Love and Vengeance," and next week, "The Baboon's Vengeance."—Large and varied as is the fare provided by Leicester's thirteen picture houses (to say nothing of the bioscope displays at the variety theatres) it is apparently not yet equal to the popular demand. The commodious new building erected in the Belgrave Road by the Star Picture House Company, is rapidly nearing completion at the hands of local contractors, and will very shortly be opened.—Plans for yet another picture house in the town have recently been passed, and the building is to be commenced upon almost immediately.

ON THE SURREY SIDE.

In connection with the forthcoming opening on June 27th, of the Stockwell Palladium, Clapham Road, we hear that Mr. H. Louis Wilson is to be the manager. He has had great experience in the business, being connected at various periods with the Palais de Luxe, Piccadilly, Electric Pavilion, Brixton, and Empire, Kingston, etc., and should prove popular at this handsome new theatre.

EXETER EXHIBITIONS.

"Moths" is the chief attraction at the Palladium during the present week, and is attracting large houses.—"Always up-to-date and a little ahead" is the motto adopted by the Empire, and judging by the programmes exhibited by Mr. Robert G. Butler, the motto is an appropriate one. "A Tragedy in the Clouds" is the star film for the first half of the present week.—Mr. Harold Mock is arranging a great attraction for his patrons at the City Palace for the week commencing June 22nd, having secured the renowned Channel swimmer, Jabez Wolffe, who will stay at Exmouth from Saturday next. While there he will undertake long distance swims daily, accompanied by a cinematograph operator on a yacht, who will take records for the City Palace. Each evening Wolffe will give a lecture illustrated with films of his swims. This will, no doubt, attract large crowds to the theatre.

THANET TOPLINES.

Ramsgate's principal attraction was undoubtedly "Judith of Bethulia," shown at the Queen's to full houses. The excellent selections rendered by a special orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Bernard W. Clarke, helped towards the film's success.—"The Devil's Eye" met with a big reception at the King's, and "Gentleman or Thief" was another capital drama while "The Assistant Commissioner's Predicament" was a delightful comedy.—Mr. W. J. Attack provided a capital entertainment at the Royal Palace, every item being well received. "The Cage" and "District Attorney's Duty" were the star pictures. "Tragedy of Big Eagle Mine" and "The Executioner's Secret" were responsible for full houses at the Star, the latter meeting with enthusiastic applause. Mr. A. Waldock finds the introduction of "The Warwick Chronicle" a pleasing addition.—At the Marina, Vitagraph's occupy the major portion of the bill, "Seneschal's Diamond" and "Daniel" being the stars, the latter in particular meeting with a big reception.—At the Cinema, Broadstairs, "Caprice," "Heartsease" and "In the Bishop's Carriage" drew appreciative audiences.—At Margate every praise is due to Mr. C. W. Stanley for the excellence of subjects screened at the Parade Cinema. "In the Bishop's Carriage" and "Horrors of War" were principal headlines, whilst continued laughter greeted "Pickles, Art and Sauerkraut" and "Scotland for Ever."—Mr. C. W. Ellis made a big hit with "Was She Justified?" and "The Red Spiders" at the Clifton Cinema.—"Judith of Bethulia" was responsible for capacity business at the Lounge, Cliftonville, and was followed with marked attention. Mr. Bernard Clarke's orchestra added greatly to the evening's entertainment.—"Victory or Death," "Return of the Emigrant" and "Failure or Success" head a list of good things at the Town Hall, Westgate.

PICTORIAL PERSHORE.

The outstanding attraction during the past week at the Electric Theatre has been "The Three Shadows," and for the latter portion of the week "The Gem of India" was the means of securing good houses. Mr. Spiers is advertising for this week "The Diver" and "Voice of Angels," together with a sprinkling of comic items.

CONTRACTS SECURED.

Messrs. Beck and Windibank, Limited, of Clement Street, Birmingham, have, we hear, been successful in obtaining the contracts for the whole of the furnishings and latest "tip-up" chairs, carpets, etc., at the following:—Hippodrome, Belfast; Premier Palace, Dublin; New Empire, Kingston-on-Thames; New Cinema, Llandudno, and for the South Parade Pier, Southsea (for the Portsmouth Town Council). These are large and important contracts, and we tender our congratulations to Messrs. Beck and Windibank on their successes.

FOR LORD MAYOR'S FUND.

Members of the Trade are usually to the fore in the cause of charity, and we are pleased to once more be able to record a performance in aid of a worthy object. Our readers would, no doubt, be thrilled by the reading of the disaster to the Empress of Ireland, and one of the first exhibitors to give practical effect to his sympathies has been Mr. Douglas Cornfoot, manager of the Gem, Faversham, whose proprietors generously gave the entire proceeds of a special performance to the Lord Mayor's Fund for the distressed. The entire staff gave their services gratuitously for the occasion, which was under the patronage of the Mayor and Mayoress. Special thanks are due to Messrs. Ruffells, Limited, who lent an exceptionally fine programme free of charge.

ROYALTY ENTERTAINED AT HITCHIN.

The town of Hitchin was en fête recently when the Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, brother of the Czar of Russia, motored from Knebworth House to attend a performance at the Playhouse, at the invitation of Mr. L. G. Parry, the manager. A distinguished party accompanied the Grand Duke, and flags were displayed by the tradesmen, while the exterior of the theatre was handsomely decorated. A special souvenir programme, printed upon yellow satin, was presented to the members of the party, the Russian National Anthem being played by the orchestra. His Royal Highness greatly enjoyed and stayed throughout the entire performance, and subsequently sent the management a substantial cheque as a token of his appreciation of the excellent programme.

EVENTS AT EVESHAM.

The past week's programme at the Grand Cinema has been exceptionally entertaining. At the beginning of the week "A Woman of the People" was the feature. For the latter end "The Great Python Robbery" was also very attractive. For this week "The Heir of Lagardères" and "The Golden Beetle" will be the special features.—The Electra continues to do good business, and some really fine pictures have been screened, chief amongst them being "Dare-Devil Detective" and "A Scapegrace." For the last three days of the week "A Son of His Father" was a great attraction. This week's programme should be a good drawing medium, as it includes "Beauty and the Barge." It is interesting to note that this piece has been played by the Evesham Dramatic Society, so that the picture is assured a successful reception. Other items on the programme include "Confederates in Crime" and "His Father's Wife."

HARROW HEADLINES.

Messrs. Tipping presented such excellent fare to their patrons at the Harrow Cinema last week that there was no slackening off in attendances right through the week. They are following up with "The Curse of War," "Out of the Depths," and the charming story of "The Willow Pattern."—During the current week the Harrow Picturedrome is featuring "The Blight of Wealth" and "Jack the Wolf."—At Wealdstone's popular little house, "Jack the Wolf" has also been screened, and this week patrons have "A Cruel Revenge" and "Under the Black Flag."

STILL ADVANCING AT GLASGOW.

From last Thursday onwards, the tearooms at the de Luxe, Sauchiehall Street, Glasgow, came under the direct control of the manager, Mr. Thomas Butt. The transference of the tearooms will mark a change in their history, and the De Luxe's patrons will find the same methods in vogue in the refreshment department as have popularised the Picture House upstairs. Complete services of dainty china and Elkington plate have been installed, and from 3 till 5.30 every afternoon patrons are supplied with afternoon tea, ices, or iced minerals free of charge. The innovation has proved most successful.

COMMONS AND THE CENSOR.

In the House of Commons on Wednesday of last week, Mr. Agg-Gardener asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the British Board of Film Censors had the official recognition of the Government or Home Office, and whether he was satisfied with and aware of the class of films that received the Censors' certificate.—Mr. Ellis Griffith (Under-Secretary), replied: "The Board is an unofficial body established by the Trade itself for the purpose of preventing the exhibition of objectionable films. It is not subject to the Secretary of State's directions or supervision, but he approves of the objects of the Board, and in his opinion it has done very useful work."

IMPORTANT TRADE SHOW.

We would direct the special attention of our readers to the fact that the Dominion Exclusives Company are holding their first Trade show at the Electric Pavilion, Shaftesbury Avenue, to-morrow (Friday), at 10.45 a.m., and that the films to be shown are "The Battle of the Sexes," or "The Single Standard," and an instalment of the "Mutual Girl" fifty-two reel serial which Dominion are releasing every fortnight in two-reel parts. Both features are to be handled on the exclusive rights plan. Trade displays of these two films have also been arranged for all the chief provincial cities. Full details will be found in the Dominion Company's advertisement in this issue.

LINES FROM LANCASHIRE.

We are told that the Enterprise Cinema Supplies Company, of Cromwell Buildings, Blackfriars, Manchester, are giving to-morrow (Friday) a special Trade show at La Scala, Manchester. The subjects to be screened are the City Exclusive's patriotic drama, "The Blood of Our Forefathers," a two-reel issue and a fine Canadian production, also the all-Australian exclusive, "The Two Bushmen," and the X.L. exclusive, "The Secret of the Wreck." It is interesting to note that special Ideas posters and reprints are available for the Australian story, which is to appear in that paper and one of the Amalgamated Press publications. There is a large attendance in prospect, and we are asked to remind our Lancashire readers that 11 a.m. is the time for commencement.

ONE FOR WINCHELSEA.

Ancient and picturesque Winchelsea, which stands on a hill in the marshes between Hastings and Rye, will probably boast of a cinematograph theatre before long. Acting on behalf of some gentlemen interested in the moving picture industry, a Hastings builder has purchased the most prominent site in the old town, namely, a house known as "St Helen's," in North Street, and the adjoining ground, upon which are the ruins of a monastery.

NEWARK JOTTINGS.

Good audiences attend the picture houses in Newark, and the programmes are maintained at a very high standard of excellence. At the Corn Exchange, Mr. H. Boardman shows a special sacred picture every Sunday, and these performances are always extremely popular. "Branscombe's Pal," "Alexia's Strategy" and "Shadows of Night" have been the latest successes.—Mr. Wheeler, manager of the Barnbygate Kinema, screened last week "Detective Finn" and "The Gambler's Wager."

ANOTHER FOR ILKESTON.

At Ilkeston Sessions last week Mr. T. F. B. Beck, on behalf of Mr. John Brailsford, of Arnold and Ilkeston, laid before the Bench plans of the proposed new King's Picture House, to be erected in Bath Street, Ilkeston. Mr. Beck asked the Bench to say that if the building was erected according to plans and to the satisfaction of the local authority there would be no objection to the granting of the licence. The Bench said Mr. Beck might take it for granted that the licence would not be refused if the conditions were complied with.

BRISTOLIAN'S OUTING.

The managers of the Bristol picture houses have arranged to hold their "picnic" on Sunday next. The Bristol Tramway Company's motor-charabancs have been engaged to convey the party to Minehead. Mr. Alec Grant has arranged to write a film scenario, the leading parts to be played by various managers and their wives. The film will be taken by Mr. Rolph, of Messrs. Hibberts, Limited. The feature will afterwards be on show at the various local theatres. The arrangements for the outing are in the hands of Mr. Channing, of the Palace, Baldwin Street, Bristol.

PROJECTED BY "PHŒNIX."

On Saturday next the combined Phœnix studio, works and agency staff will go to Margate for their annual outing, when it is anticipated (weather permitting) that a most enjoyable day will be spent. Pimple's Seaford "escapade," as he calls it, turned out so successful that one of the Newhaven halls used such persuasive powers that Pimple will appear at the latter town on Wednesday next, both in film and person. Mr. E. T. Williams (of Phœnix) will also go down, but positively will not appear before the footlights.

WITNESSED AT WORKSOP.

Dante's "Inferno" proved a great success at the Worksop Art Gallery last week.—At the Royal Electric, Mr. Gibson has adopted the continuous show, pictures and varieties being intermixed from 6.30 till 10.45. "The Curse of War" and "The Bride of Mystery" were last week's stars. Special matinées are given to children every Saturday, and a pleasing orchestra is under the bâton of Mr. R. Grisenthwaite. —"Greater Love Hath No Man," "The Convict's Son" and "Seven Months' Big Game Hunting" are the latest successes at the Gaiety Picturedrome. Special picture concerts every Sunday evening prove a great draw.—The management of the Empire have returned to the system of pictures and varieties.

MOVEMENTS AT MORECAMBE.

Tip-top programmes are being presented to holiday makers at the Morecambe houses. At the Tower Mr. H. V. Addenbrooke made a big hit in the screening of "Antony and Cleopatra."—At the Winter Gardens Mr. A. H. Read provides attractions of a varied nature.—In the King's Pavilion the selection included "The Dancer" as a top-liner. "The Eternal Barrier" was Mr. Read's succeeding feature.—Mr. Walter Howson provides a big bill at the White Hall, and made a special boom of "Treasures of the Earth."—Another good line at this West-end house was "Psyche."—At the Alhambra, the other West-end rendezvous, "The Return of Jack Bellew" and "The Vanishing Cracksman" were among the items presented.—"The Maelstrom" and "Saving the Old Homestead" drew big houses to the Albert Hall, where Mr. Harry Hargreaves has renewed his activities.—Pictures take a place in the programmes at the West-end and Central Piers.

A ONE-BRAND SHOW.

"All-Keystone Nights" look like being a regular and popular feature of certain programmes. The first exhibitor to realise the possibilities of a "Keystone" programme was Mr. Teddy McKew, of Green's Picturedrome, Rutherglen, who recently gave his patrons a bill of fare made up of five comedies and three "interest" films, and reports "we did really good business, and at the present time it takes something good to draw the crowds."—The Queen's Hall, Bolton, has since fixed up an "All-Keystone" night, and Mr. A. E. Mainwaring, of the Western Import Company, Limited, informs us that he is in touch with a large number of other managers. He asks us also to state that he will be pleased to assist exhibitors with advertising matter, and to advise them as to the composition of their programmes. It is important to bear in mind that the programme need not be entirely made up of comedies. "Keystones" issue a large number of interesting short-length "travel" and "interest" films which will supply the necessary variety in a very agreeable form.

SELIG SPECIALS.

Mr. William H. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, returned from California recently, bronzed and hearty, and stated that "The Rosary," a six or seven-reel subject, taken from the play, will be produced in the near future. Preparations for the production are now under way, and Miss Kathlyn Williams, Thos. Clary, Wheeler Oakman and other Selig stars will be in the cast. After completing these pictures, Producer Campbell and his company will go to the Panama Canal zone, where Mr. Rex Beach's "Ne'er-do-Well" will be put into films. The locale has been selected in order to give the proper settings and from the fact that the main incidents of the story take place there. Mr. Selig also stated that the animal pictures now under way are even greater than those of the past. The Selig Zoo at the present time holds more tigers than can be found in any other similar aggregation in the world. These and other animals are now being trained by special trainers, under the supervision of Mr. John G. Robinson, who is now managing the Zoo. Mr. Robinson is securing excellent results, and the animals are finer in appearance that at any previous time. The Zoo grounds are fast assuming a finished aspect, trees being planted daily and fountains being placed in readiness. The new buildings are under rapid construction and the magnificent entrance will be ready in September. The opening is to take place in that month.

LENS DISCOUNT, LIMITED.

We are requested by J. H. Dallmeyer, Limited, the well-known optical manufacturers, to give publicity to the following facts. Their attention has been drawn to the circumstance that their Series XII. and XIV. projection lenses are, it is alleged, being sold to the general public at a larger discount than 5 per cent. They desire it to be known that their projection lenses only bear this discount to the public.

"BALBOA" GETS BUSY.

We are told that one of the biggest deals made in the history of the film business has been consummated by Mr. H. M. Horkheimer, of Balboa Feature Films, Long Beach, California, who has just returned from New York after a lengthy stay. Mr. Horkheimer signed contracts with Mr. William Fox, President of Box Office Attraction Company, whereby that Corporation will handle exclusively the entire output of Balboa Feature Films for the United States and Canada, amounting to over 300,000 ft of positive print per week. Mr. Horkheimer also signed contracts with Messrs. Bishop, Pessers and Company, Limited, London, which firm will handle exclusively Balboa Feature Films for the European market, using a similar quantity as used for the American markets. The plant at Long Beach is the scene of great activity, the working staff and laboratory department having been doubled in order to ensure prompt delivery of all films throughout the world.

EAST ANGLIAN EVENTS.

Mr. T. Hallisey, manager of the de Luxe, Norwich, records improved houses, especially in the afternoons. Last week the picture in connection with Mr. A. Pearson's appeal for Braille books for the blind was shown.—Great things are being done at the Picture Playhouse under the new manager, Mr. J. McCormic, large houses being the rule. "Judith of Bethulia" and "In Mid-Atlantic" have been the talk of the town. Other films in a strong programme include "Bloomer's Magic" and "How Pimple Won the Derby."—Mr. J. W. Bruce provided a splendid programme last week at the Cinema Palace, which included "The Worker." After an interval the educational films matinées were commenced again on the Wednesday, when children assembled in large numbers.—Fine programmes are always to be found at the Newcastle Electric Theatre. "The Leopard Detective" and "The Stolen Papers" proved very attractive.—Recent attractions at the Empire are "The Life-saver" and "LittleKaintuck."—Yarmouth houses are always to be relied upon for good pictures, and this week the rule is not departed from. Winners of recent date were:—At the Coliseum, "The Duke's Talisman" and "The Black Gang"; at Filmland, "The Parasite"; at the Gem, "The Daughter of Satan"; and at the Empire "The Duke's Talisman."—Several entertaining pictures were shown last week at the Ipswich Picture House and the Keystone comedy, "Double Crossing," caused great laughter.—The feature last week at the Lowestoft Palace was "Margaret Catchpole." "Saving the Old Homestead" was a taking drama, while "A Daughter of Satan" found great favour.—At the Cosy Corner, Mr. C. J. Carpenter presented an interesting bill last week, the "specials being "A Hateful Bondage" and "John Lincoln, Millionaire."—The Gainsborough Theatre Company, at the recent meeting of the Sudbury Town Council, applied for a renewal of their cinematograph licence. The Mayor explained that the plans for the proposed alterations had been before the committee, but had been withdrawn, and further plans would shortly be submitted. The licence was granted for the coming year.

SCORING AT STOCKTON.

Mr. Victor M. Lewisohn, who is scoring a success with Clarendon "speaking pictures" is attracting large audiences this week at the Theatre Royal Cinema, Stockton-on-Tees.

GEORGE ROBEY PRODUCTIONS.

We hear that the Burns Film Company, Limited, of Rupert Street, W., have secured the exclusive rights for the world of all comedy pictures in which Mr. George Robey is to appear. A Trade show of the first of the series will be held during the next month, to which those in the business will be duly invited.

MEMS. FROM MELTON.

Although we are now getting well into the summer season, so excellent is the fare provided at the Melton Palace that there have been crowded and enthusiastic audiences. The British Army film was an unqualified success. This week Mr. Cox is featuring "Shadow of Guilt," "When Society Calls," and "The Opium Smoker."—No less successful are the efforts of Mr. Marshall at the King's, and great appreciation has been expressed for giving inhabitants an opportunity of seeing "Sixty Years a Queen." "Fight for the Great Black Diamond" and "The Tattooed Will" have also done well.

TRADE'S UP-RIVER TRIP.

We understand from the honorary secretary of the forthcoming annual up-river outing, Mr. A. E. Mainwaring, of Western Import Company, Limited, Gerrard Street, W., that the issue of tickets is to be strictly limited for this important event, and that early application is advised. Tickets, which are inclusive of special saloon and lunch, also meals on board, can be obtained from the hon. secretary or from members of the committee, whose names can be seen upon the special posters showing in the various offices of the Trade. As previously mentioned, the objective of the trip will be the charming village of Walton-on-Thames, while the return journey will be made by launch to Windsor and thence to London.

BREEZES FROM BRIDLINGTON.

Messrs. Field's Oriental Lounge Cinema has been undergoing redecorations for the season, and has been practically remodelled according to a scheme of Messrs. Blackmore and Sykes, architects. Work has been proceeding day and night for three months. A promenade facade at the front has been carried out in white faience, with a blue and gold mosaic fascia, which during the evening is lighted by two intensely brilliant electric lamps, each of 1,500 candle-power. A pair of mahogany swing-doors lead to a beautiful foyer, through which access is gained to the lounge café, where the pictures are exhibited. There is a handsome dome-shaped ceiling, and the whole interior decoration is carried out in elaborate and artistic plaster work. There is a small angle balcony, very tastefully decorated, in which an efficient orchestra plays. The indirect system of lighting is used, and heating and ventilating arrangements are very up-to-date. It is claimed that the new building is so constructed that it could be cleared in three minutes in case of necessity.—Last week's special film at Field's was Mr. W. W. Jacob's "Beauty and the Barge," which had a very successful week's run.—Good business has been done at the Royal Victoria Rooms, where Mr. Palmer, who manages the cinema for the Corporation, has been showing "The Last Days of Pompeii" to large audiences.—Mr. Austin has been in keen competition with the pictorial adaptation of Oliver Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield" at the Picture House, in Prospect Street. This powerful attraction was followed in the latter part of the week by "The Clue of the Wax Vesta," which also resulted well.

IN THE METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

(NOTES ON THE LONDON HALLS.)

With the aid of traders and others who sold tickets, Mr. R. Pearse, the proprietor of the Pavilion Palace, Tooting, has been enabled to hand over a sum exceeding £20 to the Tooting Gazette's fund for the relief of the families affected by the building strike. The amount represents the result of one evening's proceeds of the theatre.

A local company is, it is reported, being formed to acquire the Tooting Pavilion from Mr. Pearse, who will, it is stated, join the board of directors as managing director after allotment. The house has had a very successful career since it was opened towards the end of April last. This week it scores with "Fedora" and "The Outcast."

Of all the dreary working-class localities opened up in South-west London, Earlsfield is hard to beat. Through it runs the 2-mile-long thoroughfare known as Garrett Lane, which connects Wandsworth with Tooting. Judged by the amount of Sunday trading which goes on in the district, little can be said for any elevating influences arising from religious bodies. Yet the latter have combined to prevent the district having the benefit of special entertainments on Sunday evenings at the picture palaces. The proprietors of the latter found it an easy matter to secure the support of the necessary charitable society required to take the profits of Sunday representations, but the religious bodies have again managed to induce the societies to forego the benefit. A local writer expresses surprise at success having again favoured the Puritan-minded clericals, and observes that the latter cannot contend that Earlsfield people are church-going folk, as, he states, not 5 per cent. attend a place of worship.

Probably the Puritan-minded people might have cause to alter their attitude could they but see the film dealing with Sunday cinema shows and the drink curse, which was exhibited last week at the Central Hall, Upper Tooting, by Mr. H. Sidney. A special feature is the Saturday afternoon shows for children. As the chief attraction for the first three days this week "A Tragedy in the Clouds" was billed.

The three Balham houses continue to do good business despite the hot weather, which at the Palladium is made a peg by Mr. Nathan upon which to hang a placard setting forth the coolness and ventilation of this new house. Last week Asta Nielsen in "Vengeance is Mine" drew good attendances, and present and future screenings include "Fools of Society," "Tragedy of the Clouds," and Sir Charles Wyndham in "David Garrick."—At Pyke's Circuit, Mr. Thom last week gave his patrons "Her Sense of Duty" and "Blow for Blow." "The Old Curiosity Shop" held sway there during the initial half of this week.—Mr. Cutler continues his spirited catering at the de Luxe, where vaudeville is added to the films. This week Mr. Cecil Ward stays to continue the success he achieved last week, and Hilda Burkin is also engaged. For the chief screenings to yesterday (Wednesday) there were "The Pendulum of Justice" and "The Girl at the Curtain." Until Saturday evening there are "The Painting of Repentance" and "The False Bride."

At the King's Picture Palace, Kensal Rise, Mr. Dudley Benda, the manager for the Acme Picture Palace Company, provided a special attraction. On visiting the house I found Mr. Harry Buss and Miss Elsa Brettingham, both of whom were in excellent form, appearing personally in "On and Off the Film." They interpret their parts with a great deal of vivacity and expression, and the interlude is received with appreciation. They appeared twice each evening throughout the week by permission of the Hepworth Company. This was the star item in a programme which contained many other attractions, with the change at the middle of the week as usual. Last week it was arranged to show a film of the Willesden and District Schools Sports of Saturday, specially taken for this theatre.

At the Prince of Wales Playhouse, Harrow Road, star films were "Outwitted," "Won in a Cupboard," "Rocambole," and "Flotilla, the Flirt." "The World, the Flesh, and the Devil" paid a return visit last week.

The Broadway Cinema, Hammersmith, did good business with "Jim, the Fireman," "A Hidden Death," "In the Grip of a Villain," and "The Parson and the Bully" as star films.

At the Park Cinema, Hammersmith, the principal attractions were "Detective Daring and the Thames Coiners," "The Devil's Gap," and "A Riverside Crime."

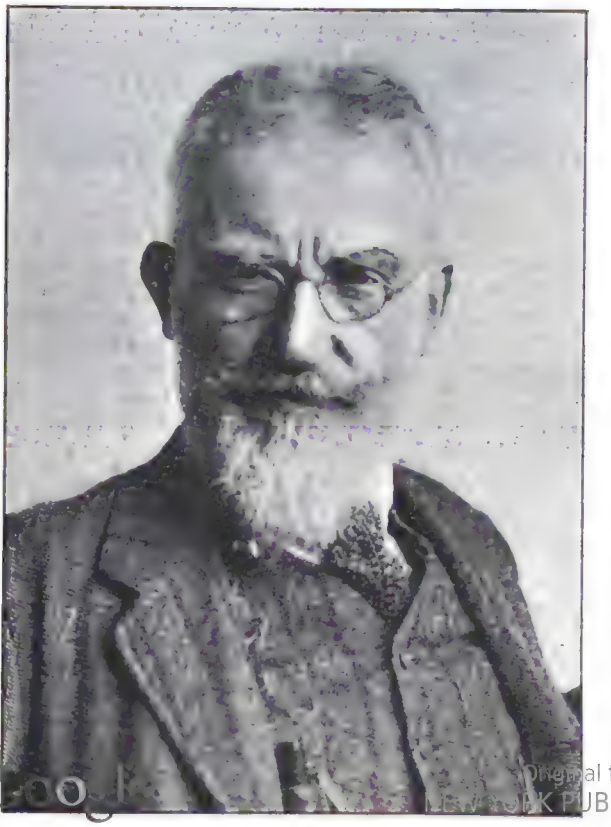
Education and the Cinematograph.

SOME IMPORTANT EXPRESSIONS OF OPINIONS.



For our Second Educational Supplement we have obtained statements of opinion upon the possibilities of the cinematograph in education from the following well-known gentlemen, whose very kind replies to our questions we have the pleasure of printing below.
In each case we asked for replies to two questions:—

(1) To what extent and in what direction do you consider that the cinematograph has possibilites as an educational medium?

(2) In what manner do you think that the cinematograph could be best applied to education?

The replies to these questions which we have received from Mr. G. Bernard Shaw, the editor of the Educational Times, the headmaster of Oundle School, the headmaster of Haileybury College, and Mr. A. P. Graves, M.A., are as follow.

Owing to pressure upon our space we are compelled to hold over several other replies to our next Supplement.

Mr. George Bernard Shaw, the famous dramatist, writes:—

"(1) The cinematograph begins educating people when the projection lantern begins clicking, and does not stop until it leaves off. Whether it is showing you what the South Polar ice barrier is like through the films of Mr. Ponting, or making you silly and sentimental by pictorial novelettes, it is educating you all the time. And it is educating you far more effectively when you think it is only amusing you than when it is avowedly instructing you in the habits of lobsters.

"(2) It is impossible to say how the educational powers of the cinema can be best applied, because no cational subject is most important; and in any case what is most important for Tom may be thrown away on Dick. Probably at present the best work the cinema does is the exhibition to masses of poor children of the habits, dress, manners and surroundings of people who can afford to live decently.

"An obvious application of the cinema to education is the reform of the Art School, with its 'life class' studying an absurdly unlifelike naked human being in a condition of painful and hideous simulated petrification and paralysis. Our art students slave for years at this abomination, and finally deprive themselves of all power of drawing or even see-

The cinematograph can not only show the figure in action, but can arrest the action at any instant, and thereby not only surprise here and there a moment at which the figure is graceful and expressive, but—what is more important—prove that ninety-nine times out of a hundred the arrested action is artistically impossible, and that when the really successful draughtsman or sculptor presents a figure in action he combines several successive moments in his representation, and thus arrives at an outline no model can possibly give him.

"In all athletic exercises, and in dancing, what is called 'showing form' can be done by the cinema. Much of the clumsiness and ugliness of our habits is simple ignorance; we have never seen anything better, and are even ashamed of pleasing our natural taste for something better, because it would make us look peculiar. The cinematograph, by familiarising us with elegance, grace, beauty, and the rest of those immoral virtues which are so much more important than the moral ones, could easily make our ugliness look ridiculous. The moral virtues can take care of themselves only too well; it is our deficiency in the immoral ones that is keeping us back in the march of civilisation."

The Editor of the Educational Times:—"The Editor of the Educational Times would draw a distinction between performances in public halls and the use of the cinema in schools. He regards the former as frequently unsuitable for young children, and would not object to the education authorities laying down regulations for the attendance of children under fourteen years of age. With regard to the latter, he thinks that every school should be provided with an apparatus for showing moving pictures. Of the films at present produced, he regards two classes only as suitable for school use: (1) Films dealing with natural history, plant or animal life; (2) views of the earth's surface, or of industrial centres and processes—buildings, railways, harbours, canals, scenery, etc. He regards fictitious films produced on a stage, as unsuitable for school purposes."

Mr. F. B. Malim, M.A., Headmaster of Haileybury College:—"I think it highly doubtful if the cinema has any educational value at all. It sins against the cardinal principle that what educates a child is what he does himself, not what he watches some one else do."

Mr. F. W. Sanderson, M.A., Headmaster of Oundle School:—

"Uses of the Cinematograph in Schools:

"(1) For entertainment—dramatic, romantic, to bring life and interest to young children—especially to those in some of the elementary schools in town and country. Films will require fairly careful selection.

"(2) As an aid in the teaching of various subjects—of History, Geography, Biography. Special films required.

"(3) To aid in Science Teaching—either in actual experiments, or in bringing the development of a particular science or branch of science before the attention of a class, e.g., films illustrating the life work of the great founders of science.

"The above notes may be of use—but I have unfortunately been too occupied to give attention to your letter.

"I have great belief in its use in schools, especially in elementary schools."

Mr. Alfred Perceval Graves, M.A., late H.M. Inspector of Schools and Chairman of the Representative Managers of the London County Council Elementary Schools:—

"A couple of years since I began to feel that a new and vital educational force had arisen in the cinematograph, capable of effecting perhaps as much for the improvement of the mind as the aeroplane is effecting for material locomotion. I read up what was going on in this direction, in Germany, America, and elsewhere, and then wrote an article on Picture Teaching for the Educational Supplement of The Times for August, 1912, from which I now quote:—

"'The teaching of the picture has come down to us through the ages. When we enter the British Museum, its educative appeal to the imagination through the eye meets us everywhere. We first find it in the figures of the chase scratched upon bone in a Derbyshire cave by one of our savage ancestors: we realise it in the hieroglyphics cut upon clay and stone by the early Assyrians and Egyptians, and in the lovely and noble lines of Greek art graved upon coin and tablet. Even more arresting to us is the teaching of grace and beauty and character that meets us in Athenian and Roman marble. We pass from our National Museum to our great picture galleries, and at once understand what a momentous part the picture has played in the world's instruction from Mediæval down to modern times: how it has made the sacred and secular chronicle unfold itself again before human eyes, thereby stimulating religion and good citizenship in a way that the littera scripta alone could never have done.

"'When teaching was divorced from the eye by the degeneracy of the theatre and Puritanism wrecked religious works of art in the cathedrals and churches, and when pageants and religious processions were suspended, England suffered so severely from the loss of popular pictorial education that the subsequent reaction was almost inevitable. It was followed, not unnaturally, by a return to that inartistic evangelicism which dominated the eighteenth century and much of the nineteenth. Hence the dying out of the religious folk-play and ritual Morris, and the decadence even of the folk-song and country dance. Hence, too, the decline of that village art which beautified the lychgates, screens and choir stalls of so many of our country churches. It is good to think that these harmless arts which helped to make England merry are again reviving amongst us.

"'When the master worked with his men, when the squire was the Sir Roger de Coverley of his tenantry, the talented son of the people could become a poor scholar, by the intervention of his superiors, without difficulty. In those days there was not that fear of educating folk above their stations which has not yet got out of the heads of our upper and middle classes in England, after mentally starving a generation of its people, while the sons of German princes and Scotch lairds sat side by side at school with the children of the peasant and the artisan.

"'Picture teaching in the schools has been making progress ever since the Act of 1870. The rude, crude woodcuts have been succeeded by finely engraved illustrations in Primer and Reading Book, and latterly colour process had begun to brighten the pages of the School History, Geography, and General Readers. Kindergarten teaching, little more than a generation old in this country, brought pictures into all infant rooms; thence they passed in limited numbers to the walls of the upper departments. They came in freely when assembly halls began to be attached to the schools, and now no newly built council school is without such a hall.

SCENE FROM A PATHE NATURAL HISTORY FILM, "THE SEDGE-WARBLER AND THE CUCKOO." (Coloured in the original.)

"'A voluntary society, "The Art in Schools Association," has done much to promote the introduction of good engravings and pictures into the elementary schools by supplying them at cost price to their managers. Round these pictures and engravings groups of scholars are gathered, and they are talked over to them by the teachers. Nor is there any doubt that the taste for form and colour thus engendered in elementary school children, coupled with good instruction in drawing and brushwork, is showing valuable results in the art classes throughout the country.

"'The attention of city children, whose minds are so full of so many things, is specially hard to engage. And the Board of Education and leading educational authorities have recognised that this flightiness of mind may be best checked, not only by pictorial appeals to the imagination, but also through acted lessons in history, such as are so well carried out under Miss Finlay-Johnson's dramatic method of teaching, and by the Village Historical Plays Association at Winchelsea and elsewhere, a reversion within the school walls to the village folk-plays of their forefathers.

"'No doubt hand and eye training by which what are called the motor activities of the scholar are evoked, and the interposition of physical exercises, hall and playground games, and latterly of folk-songs and folk-dances between the time-table lessons, have done much to prevent education flagging during the long school sessions. But in spite of this judicious admixture of artistic movement and seated study, a good deal of information still goes in at one of the average school child's ears and out at the other. This is more especially true in lessons in history, geography, and science, unless these are given by teachers who possess personal magnetism as well as special enthusiasm for the subject in hand.

"'Here the great value of magic lantern lessons comes in. For even such lessons, when taken by teachers without a special faculty for controlling attention, are listened to by their scholars in enthralled silence. The beautiful pictures before them awaken their imaginations, and their keen interest is aroused. Nearly every London County Council school has a room appropriated for lantern teaching, and it is usual to give lantern lessons towards the end of the day, when, therefore, concentration of mind is most difficult, and an easy method of securing it is most desirable.

"'The stimulus of the lantern lesson is always effective; how much more, therefore, would instruction be brought home to the average child if it could be given by moving pictures early, not late, in the day? For a living picture lesson, whether historical, geographical, or scientific, if judiciously connected with the instruction following it, would almost certainly awaken the intellectual energies of a classroom full of children, which would carry them contentedly, if not eagerly, forward through the long morning session.'

"I followed this article with lectures on the subject of the Kinematograph in Education which I delivered to teachers in training in Dublin and North Wales, and as a consequence I was asked by the Kinematograph Exhibition Association to organise an educational conference at their International Exhibition at Olympia at Easter last year.

"Although most of the elementary teachers were unfortunately at that time in conference elsewhere, we had a most successful educational congress. Valuable papers on the use of the cinematograph in education by educational experts were read, and these were illustrated by Messrs. Pathé Frères' fine educational films. Much discussion of a critical kind ensued, and resolutions in favour of the guarded use of the cinematograph as an educational force in religious, moral and secular instruction were passed. The conference, moreover, appointed a committee, with power to add to their numbers, consisting of Sir Albert Rollit (president of the conference), the Hon. and Rev. Dr. Lyttelton (headmaster of Eton), and myself, whose duty it would be to issue a circular to the local education authorities of the United Kingdom dealing with the present condition of the cinematograph in human society and urging upon these authorities a right educational control upon its far-reaching powers. Such a circular was drawn up between us, and after being approved and signed by the heads of the Established, Roman Catholic, and Nonconformist Churches, leading educationists, and other prominent men and women in England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales, was issued to the educational authorities in the four countries, and afterwards to the leading papers throughout the United Kingdom.

"As was to be expected, the most practical results of the circular followed in Scotland, and some of the signatories to the circular took a prominent part in the second Educational Conference of the Kinematograph Exhibition Association held in Glasgow last February. And here I should like to pay tribute to the public spirit of this Association, which, in spite of the want of response to their forward point of view, mainly no doubt on economical grounds, by the London County Council and other great educational authorities, has yet gone on independently of them in an educational direction. There is no doubt that their action at Olympia has encouraged the introduction of a Kinematograph Education Section into the proceedings of the International Educational Congress to be held at Leipzig on September 24th next, and at which English education will be represented by the Right Hon. J. A. Pease himself. Furthermore, I understand that the Kinematograph Exhibition Association have planned a Congress and Educational Conference at Olympia just before this International Congress to which the result of their Congress's deliberations might fittingly be reported.

"So much for the history of the movement hitherto. But to what are we to look forward here in England. I believe that the London situation amounts to this: The Education Committee of the London County Council approves the principle of the use of the cinematograph in education, but, until they receive more money from Imperial sources, they are not likely to make a practical departure in this direction, and I should imagine that much the same feeling prevails throughout the country where it is felt that the education rate should be largely supplemented from the Imperial taxes. Meantime, some of the film-makers, backed by the enterprise of such journals as the Evening News, have been making experiments on their own account outside school upon Saturday afternoons, and, indeed, on other days, where the local authorities have co-operated with them, have drawn children together to moving picture shows of an educational character. I cannot say, as an old educational hand, that I have been quite satisfied with such of these exhibitions as I have seen or read reports of. They appear to me to want methodising, but they are in the right direction, and, with the advice that might be given by educational experts, they would be entirely effective.

"Finally, it is obvious that if we are to go forward successfully with this movement it must be done by means of a well-endowed voluntary association, at any rate, for the time being. Ours is not a paternal Government like that of Germany, where the education authorities, teachers, and professors have combined with the cinematograph trade to carry out an education propaganda Imperially supported. Nor is it usual for the head of our Board of Education to take such a bold step as that taken by the corresponding French Minister who, a few weeks since, had the wisdom to call together the heads of the cinematograph industry in France and to confer with them on the great educational responsibilities that they were incurring. Such a voluntary association was created on the 20th of last month, and already numbers more than seventy important representatives of leading educational and social societies. It has been blessed in its inception by the Established, Roman Catholic, and Nonconformist Churches, and, if it can only be provided with sufficient endowment by interested individuals and by such corporations as the City companies, has a fine field of work before it."

NOTES AND NEWS.

We have been exceedingly gratified by the very warm reception accorded to our first Educational Supplement, both by the Press and by individual correspondents, on its issue last month, and we shall hope to maintain it as a regular monthly feature of our paper. As will be seen, this, our second, Supplement is twice the size of its predecessor.

At all times we shall be happy to give our best attention to inquiries concerning cinematography from schoolmasters and others interested in its application to education, or to give disinterested advice as to the purchase of apparatus, hire of films, etc. We shall also welcome general correspondence on the subject of educational cinematography.

The next issue of THE BIOSCOPE Educational Supplement will be published on July 16th.

As briefly announced in the last issue of our Educational Supplement, an International Congress of Education and Public Instruction will be held at Leipzig from September 25th to 29th in connection with the Leipzig Exhibition, a special section of the Congress — Section 4 — being devoted to the subject of "Juveniles and the Cinematograph."

In the prospectus of the Congress the scope and objects of Section 4 are introduced as follows:—

"The leading artistic and pedagogic circles of all civilised nations demand fundamental changes in the cinematograph system. The greater the extent to which dramas and comic films are shown, the more are juveniles inclined to superficiality; they grow accustomed to a mere external contemplation of serious things. The subject-matter of many dramas belongs to the worst kind of trash. All this has a deadening effect on the child's finer feelings.

"On the other hand, pedagogues and psychologists insist that the enormous importance of the cinematograph for the preparation, support and animation of all kinds of school instruction should be turned to better account by the provision of proper technical arrangements.

"Moreover, private societies ought to provide for entertainments of a social type, which might be accompanied by songs, lectures and good music.

"Here the licensing committees of cinematograph theatres and the censor of films must co-operate with special regard to the requirements of juveniles. Associations embracing all civilised countries must be formed for the preparation and supply of good films. Perhaps it might be possible, in connection with the Congress, to amalgamate suitable associations in one great International Cinematograph Union.

"The views of the lecturers will be illustrated by the exhibition of appropriate films designed partly for school purposes and partly for general requirements."

An example of the direct appeal of the Cinematograph as it may be employed in propaganda work. A picture from the Pathé film, "Why You Should Kill That Fly," which deals with the dangers of the fly as a germ distributor.

English education will be represented at the Leipzig Congress by the Right Hon J. A. Pease, President of the Board of Education, and Mr. A. P. Graves, M.A., will also either be present personally or send a paper. The Education Kinematograph Association will be represented by Mr. Graves.

We believe we are correct in stating that the cinematograph and its educational aspects will engage attention at the forthcoming Canterbury Diocesan Conference at Lambeth Palace.

The Honorary Secretary of the Educational Kinematograph Association, 22-24, Great Portland Street, W., informs us that he would be glad to receive from the Trade particulars of any new educational films or new machines, which he will always be pleased to bring to the notice of his Association. All communications should be addressed to him at the offices of the Association, 22-24, Great Portland Street, W.

Moving picture lessons on history, geography, and science have been regularly adopted for some time by Mr. Mortimer Gunnell at Broomfield Park College. So far as we are aware, the use of the cinematograph at a school has in no case been discontinued when once it has been tried. This surely constitutes a practical proof of its value.

At the Association of Education Committees' Annual Conference, which was held last Thursday and Friday at the Hotel Cecil, Mr. J. Best, B.Sc., gave a demonstration of Pathé educational films. Amongst those present at this demonstration, which took place in the Grand Hall of the Hotel Cecil, were from four to five hundred directors of education.

The following are the terms of a resolution which was recently adopted by the Texas State Sunday School Association, Fort Worth, Texas, U.S.A.:—

"Whereas, in educational work, the Sunday Schools and Missionary Societies of our churches are resorting more and more to the motion pictures for instruction and entertainment, and

"Whereas our churches are having great difficulty in securing the right kind of educational pictures as well as Bible and mission pictures, and

"Whereas we believe if the motion picture companies would enter more largely into the production of this type of motion pictures there would be a tremendous demand for such pictures;

"Be it resolved that we, in convention assembled, urge the film producers to prepare for supplying such pictures to our churches, and

"Be it resolved, second, that a committee be appointed by the Chair to convey this expression to the leading film producers."

The Municipality of Charkow, Russia, has voted a sum of 3,000 roubles for the inauguration of a travelling cinematograph theatre which will journey throughout the villages of the district giving exhibitions of films, accompanied by lectures on hygiene, national industries, agriculture, etc.

It is very gratifying to observe that many of the British educational journals now regularly devote space to notes and articles upon the subject of cinematography as applied to education. There exist several foreign journals dealing exclusively with educational cinematography, amongst these being Die Lichtbildkunst (Schultechnik-Verlag, Storkow-Mark, Germany), edited by Hermann Lemke; Le Fascinateur (5, rue Bayard, Paris); and La Cinema-Docet; the last of which is issued as a supplement to the Italian Trade journal, L'Illustrazione Cinematografica (Via F. Cavallotti, 14, Milan).

At the International Cinematograph Exhibition which is to be held in Budapest in August and September next, special demonstrations of educational films, suitable for use in schools, will be given to audiences of teachers and others.

EDUCATIONAL KINEMATOGRAPH ASSOCIATION.

On Thursday last, June 11th, the Executive Committee of the above Association held a meeting at which it was decided that the educative work of the Association was to be as follows:—

(a) Propaganda work—i.e., introducing the subject of cinematography at meetings of educational and other bodies, such as the Leipzig Congress, the Canterbury Diocesan Conference, and the Brighton Summer School for Teachers, at which Mr. J. H. Jay will take part.

(b) Films. The Council of the Educational Kinematograph Association is largely composed of members of different special associations, such as the Historical Association, the Nature Study Union, and the Eugenics Association. It is the intention of these members (1) to discover precisely what good films, dealing with their own special subjects, are at present in existence, and (2) to draw up plans for the manufacture of suitable films on these subjects. It is hoped that the Association will thus eventually become a sort of clearing house for all kinds of educational films and the recognised authority for the future production of such films.

Amongst those who attended this Committee meeting were Mr. A. P. Graves, M.A. (chairman), Mr. Albert Smith (chairman of the Committee of the London Teachers' Association), Mr. Hitchcock (secretary of Toynbee Hall), Mr. J. W. Bunn (National Union of Teachers), Mrs. Chambers (Eugenics Education Association), Mr. White (Historical Association), Miss Hughes, B.Sc., Mr. Ernest Schofield, and Mr. Morley Dainow, B.Sc. (hon. sec.).

SOME EDUCATIONAL FILMS.

The Eclair Company, of Paris, have recently published, in connection with some of their remarkable educational pictures, a series of brief discourses, written by competent authorities, and designed for delivery with the films either in schools or elsewhere. These discourses, we understand, are being translated into English, and will shortly be obtainable from the Eclair Company's London offices, together with the films to which they apply. From those of the discourses which we have had an opportunity of inspecting, we gather that their object is to provide the teacher or lecturer with a short address, which is calculated to supplement the educational value of the film, whilst always bearing strictly upon the particular aspect of the subject illustrated on the screen. They are admirably written, in a scholarly yet lucid style, and should prove of the greatest assistance to teachers.

Amongst the films in connection with which these discourses have been prepared are pictures dealing with the following subjects:—

"Manufacture of Steel," "Manufacture of Corks," "The Tea Industry in Indo-China," "Life at the Bottom of the Sea," "The Crayfish," "The Frog," "Bee Keeping," "Phenomena of Crystallisation," "The Cities of Constantinople, Athens, Prague, Berne," "Madrid and the Spanish Army," etc.

The Kineto Company have always been amongst the largest producers of educational films of every kind, and their repertoire now includes admirable pictures upon almost every subject. The following are a few of their more recent films:—"Killarney," "Some Interesting Experiments in the Chemistry of Combustion," "Torquay and Surroundings," "Views In and Around Victoria, B.C.," "A Trip Through North Wales," "A Trip to the West Indies," "Unfamiliar Animals," etc., etc.

SCENE FROM AN ECLAIR "SCIENTIA" FILM, "THE BERNESE OBERLAND."

The Gaumont Company have a well-organised educational department, and regularly produce many first-rate educational and scientific films. These are a few of their more recent productions:—"Life Beneath the Sea," "The Customs of the Arabs," "Hot Springs, New Zealand," "Northern Italy," "Life in Morocco," "Marseilles to Port Said," "The Manufacture of a Briar Pipe," "Waterfalls of America," "Views of Munich," "The Limpet," "Fish Curing on the Volga," "On the Bavarian Frontier," "Cairo," "Industries of the Soudan: Textiles," "Saxony."

From the M.P. Sales Agency come two interesting and well arranged H. and B. films:—"Famous Castles of England," including views of Pevensey, Bodiam, Berry, Pomeroy, Norwich, Carisbrooke, Allington, Lewes and Arundel, concentrated into 454 ft., and "Famous Cathedrals of England," including glimpses of the famous piles at Salisbury, St. Albans, Canterbury, Norwich, Winchester, and other cities. Further recent and forthcoming pictures from the same source are the Welt films, "The Ant," "The China Industry," "The Chalk Industry," "In the Berne Highlands," the special films, "Wild Birds and Their Young," "General View of a Gold Mine," etc., etc.

The Cines Company regularly produce many beautifully photographed scenic films, chiefly of Italian subjects, amongst the more recent of which are:—"The West Coast of Italy," "Trani," "Visions of Rome," "Amalfi," "Recco and Comogli," "Sicilian Costumes and Customs," "Siena," "Villas of Tivoli," etc. The geography of Italy could be illustrated completely by a selection of the films which this company have issued.

Other excellent recent and forthcoming educational films among the very great number of current productions, all of which it is impossible to mention here even by name, are:—"Farming in British East Africa" (Anderson), "The Moon and Its Phases" (Cosmograph), (African Sea Birds" (Edison), "In the Basque Country" (Milano), "The River Danube" (Nordisk), "Volendam" (Cosmograph), "Danzig" (Urbanora), "Scenes in Moscow and Tiflis" (Urban-Radios), "Southern Norway" (Svea), "A Visit to an Iron Foundry" (Cosmograph), "Marine Animal Life" (Cosmograph), "Construction of a Lifeboat" (Universal), "Moscow and Its Environs" (Keystone), "Lake Lugano" (Sascha), "Holland" (London), "Between the Balkans and the Adriatic" (London), "Sea Anemones" (Ambrosio), "The Ostrich Feather Industry" (Cosmograph), "The Cat" (Cosmograph), "Snapshots of Niagara Falls" (Vitagraph), "Down the Rhine" (London), "Life at the Bottom of the Sea" series: (1) "Crabs," (2) "Molluscs" (Ambrosio), "Making Baskets" (Prieur), "Cathedral and Leaning Tower of Pisa" (Selig), "The Art of Making Silver Plate" (Imp), "Waterfalls of Wales" (Heron), "Olives and Their Oil (Keystone), "Industries in Normandy" (Cosmograph), "How Plaster is Made" (Cosmograph).

The Educational Department of Pathé Frères issues an admirably arranged descriptive catalogue of Educational Films, classified under numerous headings, and a copy of this should be in the hands of everyone who is at all interested in the question of educational cinematography. In spite of the vast number of such pictures which they have already produced, moreover, Messrs. Pathé regularly add new educational and scientific films to their repertoire every week. Among the most interesting of their recent and forthcoming pictures are the following:—"Coast Fish of the English Channel," "A Visit to the Spider," "The Art of the Furrier," "Down the Thames: Oxford to Windsor," "Dynamite as an Aid to Agriculture," "Life in a Freshwater Aquarium" (Pathécolor), "In Picturesque Normandy," "Street Scenes in Naples," "Three Leading Canadian Cities," "Studies in Bird wood, I found the audience following with keen amusement "Pickles, Art and Sauerkraut." "The Love of Tokiwa" occupied the premier position earlier in the week among the films screened. Mr. Frank C. Adams, who manages the theatre for the United Cinemas, Limited, told me that alterations are contemplated which will have the effect of more than doubling the present accommodation of nearly 500.

The Britannia Theatre, Hoxton, has reopened as a picture theatre, under the management of Mr. Hardiman. The prices of admission are from 1d. to 1s., and the programme usually lasts about two hours. There is a continuous performance from 2.30 p.m., and matinées on Thursdays and Saturdays. The star films for last week were "Jim, the Fireman," and "The Crime in the Tunnel."

Dropping into the Kingsland Imperial, I was informed that business was very satisfactory. "Fantomas, the False Magistrate," is attracting large audiences. A word of praise is due to the orchestra for the efficient manner in which they render delightful accompaniments.

Arriving at Stoke Newington, I had a pleasant chat with my friend, Mr. Courtney Crocker, manager of the Electric Coliseum. He had a very busy time last Thursday, when he was honoured with a visit from the Mayor of Stoke Newington and all the local celebrities. It was the occasion of a matinée in aid of the funds of the Hackney Reserve Battalion, and the result was extremely satisfactory. Mr. Crocker has booked a large number of excellent films. Last week "Fantomas, the False Magistrate," and Sherlock Holmes in "Copper Beeches" proved successful top-liners.

Mr. G. E. Williams capably manages the Alexandra Theatre, one of Moss's halls. In addition to an excellent picture programme, there are always one or two good variety turns. Prices of admission are 3d., 6d., and 9d., and there is one show nightly lasting over three hours. There are matinées on Thursdays and Saturdays.

I paid a visit to the Picture House, Leyton, a new theatre owned by Picture Playhouses, Limited, and managed by Mr. S. R. Hilton. It has an imposing appearance, the entrance being a fine one, while the interior is furnished with red plush seats, and has seating accommodation for 650 persons. The balcony is handsomely carpeted with a rich Axminster, and from here a very excellent view of the picture is obtained. Two Gaumont Chronos are installed, and a British Thomson-Houston generator supplies the current. The stage has red plush hangings and black drapery to the screen. There is a continuous performance from 3 p.m. daily.

Mr. Harry J. Benjamin is doing excellent business with pictures and varieties at the People's Palace, Tottenham. Prices of admission are 2d., 4d. and 6d.

The Castle Electric Theatre, Homerton, seats nearly 1,000 persons. "The Lights o' London" proved a remarkable draw. — The Victoria Cinema, Grove Road, has undergone alterations, and the auditorium is now capable of seating 500 instead of the former 300. Excellent business was done during Whit week with "The Convent Gate" and "Sapho."

Pyke's Recreations Theatre, Edgware Road, under the capable direction of Mr. Chandler, featured "The Fall of '64," which was heartily enjoyed by all.

Calling on Mr. Ashdowne at the Electric Pavilion, Edgware Road, I found this gentleman quite satisfied with his crowded house. "Antony and Cleopatra" was a recent success here.

The Grand Cinema, Edgware Road, had its "house full" boards out. "Caught With the Goods" was topping the programme, which was an extra liberal one.

At the comfortable Royal, Maida Vale, "Elusive Diamond" was successful in attracting large crowds. Afternoon teas are served here free to all, a feature which is very popular with the residents of this district.

Messrs. Soula and Deroy, directors of the Eldorando Electric, continue to do well with their hall, where plush tip-ups have been installed in place of upholstered benches.

The imposing Maida Vale Palace is under the directorship of Mr. H. Carter. "You Puppy" was a well-received item of a good programme.

I notice that the Cosy Corner Playhouse has closed for alterations, and will be reopened in about three months.

Messrs. Clavering and Beck's Kilburn Palace, Belsize Road, continues to do remarkably well. The sliding roof here is successful in keeping the hall cool even when "standing room" is taxed to its utmost.

At the People's Playhouse, Mr. Edwards was delighting his crowded house with "The Black Spot," which was one of the best received subjects on the programme.

TEES-SIDE TOPICS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Last week's programme at the Hippodrome, Stockton, was given under new proprietorship and management, and there is no doubt that the brilliant shows will be continued. "Love and Vengeance" and "The Carrier Pigeon" were the two feature films shown.—"His Guiding Star" was a big attraction at the Empire, whilst the drama with a moral, "Out of Evil Cometh Good," was also shown. "The New Stenographer" and "Love and Vengeance" were popular attractions.—The engagements in which Generals Huerta and Villa took part in Mexico were conspicuous features at the Royal Cinema. Other items were "Oil and Water" and "Lincoln, the Lover," a laughable comedy.—Several excellent dramas proved powerful draws at the Globe Theatre. The films were "Fortune Hunters," "The Secret of Adrianople" and "A Fiend and His Friends." The Keystone Company's comedy, "Schnitz, the Tailor," was much appreciated.

The cinematograph stories which Mr. Eric Williams is now producing at the Grand Opera House, Middlesbrough, are becoming increasingly popular with local audiences. Last week "Fra Giacomo, or The Count's Revenge" was shown, in which Mr. Williams, who is a brilliant elocutionist, gave the speaking part in a forceful and vivid manner while the action was shown on the screen. "His Guiding Star" was also shown, and its appeal received greater force by the able lecturing of Mr. J. C. Padden. Among other interesting pictures was "The Devil's Eye."—A varied programme was submitted at the Grand Electric. The films shown included "The River's Secret," "The Secret Road," "The Devil's Eye," and "Double Crossed."—A children's beauty contest attracted considerable attention at the Hippodrome, where a film 1,200 ft. in length was shown, depicting hundreds of Middlesbrough's beautiful and healthy youngsters. "The Footballer's Honour" and "Fantomas, the False Magistrate," were big features.

"The Open Door" proved a big success at the Empire, Darlington, where it was shown nightly to crowded houses. As a sequel to this, the management had booked "The Accusing Skeleton," and great interest was evinced in its exhibition on Thursday night.—Good business was done at the Court Kinema and Arcade Cinema, where "The Doctor's Honour" and "Mabel's Stormy Love Affair" were excellent topics.

USEFUL TO THE MANAGER.

We have to hand the second edition of the handy little volume, entitled "How to Run a Picture Theatre," and note that its publishers, Messrs. E. T. Heron and Co., 9-11, Tottenham Street, W., have added several very useful new chapters to the work. These deal more particularly with the management and clothing of staffs, the decoration of the theatre, and that important aspect of the business—finance and the systematic control of the monetary side of an enterprise. There are, in addition, a number of valuable little "tips" for the showman, the whole being brought up to date and rendering the book a distinct advance upon its very successful predecessor. Advertising receives attention in a lengthy chapter, while a dissertation upon "topicals" forms an effective ending to the work.

LINES FROM CARDIFF.

"Caprice" was the chief attraction at the Castle Cinema during the first three days of last week. The projection here is enhanced by a special "Silver Screen."

Calling at the Panoptican, I found Mr. Percy Wilde doing exceedingly good business. Two new Ernemann machines have just been installed.

"The Clue of the Wax Vesta," together with "Lieutenant Rose and the Sealed Orders," and a strong programme, are drawing big houses at the Cardiff Hippodrome. The excellent billing display outside this hall deserves special mention. Two new Power machines have been recently installed here.

Edison's Kinetophone is the feature of the performance at the Gaiety Cinema, and it is greatly appreciated by crowded houses. Mr. Wallace Churchill, the manager, is to be congratulated on his enterprise.

The Canton Coliseum is now running its second Annual Beauty Competition. Last year this event was very successful, and this year's promises to be even more so. This week's programme includes one variety turn. Mr. Barron J. Solomon is the manager here.

"Whither Hatred Leads" tops the bill at the Central Cinema this week. This, together with "The Doctor's Trust." "Zanda's Vengeance," and three comics, form a very attractive programme. Mr. J. Trevethan, the manager, caters for a very cosmopolitan class, and although accommodation is provided for over 2,000, one can rarely find a vacant seat.

Considerable enterprise was shown by the management of the Cardiff Cinema in screening the topical film of the Pageant at the Sophia Gardens by the Cardiff United Choral Society last week.

ROUND THE CAMBRIDGE CINEMAS.

At the Playhouse, "In the Fall of '64" has proved a very popular item. For the latter part of this week, "Out of the Depths" should prove a boon to the proprietors. It is supported by "Gentleman or Thief" and "A Lucky Elopement." In addition to the picture programme, the manager's have specially engaged Miss Maud Hess with a selection of English songs and ballads.—With a large influx of visitors for the "May Week," the Electric was packed out every night, and the excellent programme was greatly enjoyed. For Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the following were shown: "A Woman Scorns," "Max Cures Cinemania" and "A Hateful Bondage." The end of the week saw "The Shadow of the Coast." Pictures of special local interest in "The Cambridge May Races" and the "Cambridge University Military Tournament."—Good business is being done at the New Palace, East Road, where the feature films for this week are "Silver Blaze" and "In the Firing Line." "The Master Criminal" and "After Many Years" were chief pictures at the Empire this week, and attracted large audiences.

NORTHERN NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

A important case as between employer and employee has been taken up by the North of England Branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, and brought to a successful issue. A cinematograph operator left the service of Mr. Robert Hogg, of the Imperial Theatre, Trimdon, Durham, without notice, and was sued, through the instrumentality of the Exhibitors' Association, in the County Court, the sum of nine guineas being claimed from him as damages for alleged breach of contract.

Mr. R. Strother Stewart, who conducted the proceedings against the defendant, said the latter received a wage of 30s. a week from Mr. Hogg, and the case against him was that he left his employer "in the lurch" by taking similar employment at another hall. On February 7th, the manager of the Imperial Theatre was informed that the defendant was leaving on the following Monday to take up the work of an operator at another theatre, and he interviewed the defendant on the matter. Defendant said "There is no fear of me leaving on Monday," but when Monday came he literally ran away, and as another operator could not be immediately obtained, the hall could not be opened that night. The damages claimed included £3 16s. 3d., the takings estimated to have been lost on the Monday night, and £5 losses in the takings during the remainder of the week.

His Honour gave judgment against defendant for £7 2s., and remarked that people who were employed must conform to a contract just as much as the people who were the employers. It seemed to his Honour a monstrous thing that the defendant should have left Mr. Hogg's employment after having led his manager to believe that he was not leaving.

Mr. Fred W. Morrison, secretary of the North of England Branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, has recently been paying fraternal visits to some of the managers of the halls in the district, and is delighted at the cordial reception he has received. At the Empire, Whitley Bay; the Pavilion, Whitley Bay; and the Albion, North Shields, the respective managers, Messrs. Lincoln, Turnbull and Yeates, went out of their way to make him welcome, and this he duly appreciated. Whilst mentioning the Albion, it may be added that this pretty theatre is right in the forefront in the estimation of the North Shields public, and its comfortable and artistic interior is an exceedingly popular rendezvous.

Mr. Lindon Travers had a particularly strong bill of fare last week, included in which were both the exclusives, "Orders Under Seal" and "In the Hands of London Crooks." The former was shown in the first half of the week, and the latter from Wednesday to Saturday, and, in addition, in each programme was an interesting list of other features. The theatre was well filled throughout the week.

A feature of great local interest was shown at the Westgate Road Picture House. Mr. Christian Neuper, a well-known sculptor, has been commissioned to make a marble bust of the Right Hon. Thomas Burt, P.C., D.C.L., the Member of Parliament for Morpeth, and he has kindly allowed a film to be taken showing him at work upon the bust. The film was produced by the Gaumont Company, Limited, at their Newcastle Branch, and it was reproduced throughout the week at the Westgate Road house, where it proved a strong attraction.

Another good entertainment was provided by Mr. W. M. Patterson at the Scala Electric Theatre, Heaton. In the first half of the week he had as the feature "The Devil's Eye," and in the second programme he included "The Tiger's Paw," and the first part of the films showing life in the British Army.

With the open amateur golf championship in progress, and the Northumberland and Durham County championships pending, the film of J. H. Taylor, the well-known professional, giving practical demonstations on how to play the game, was a very popular item, and at the Newcastle Picture House, and also at the Grainger, where it was shown, it was quite an attraction in itself.

Mr. Barry Rayne, the popular manager of the Grainger, has been turning his attention to dramatic authorship. At the Pavilion Theatre last week, he had produced a sketch, entitled "The Eighth Commandment," which was very forcibly written, and deserving of a warm reception.

"A Tragedy in the Clouds" was secured by Mr. P. J. Lehmann for the Heaton Electric, where it had a first-class run. "The Training of Italian Cavalry Officers," "A Daughter of the Hills," "The Derby" and "How God came to Sonny Boy" were others of his features.

PEREGRINATING PIMPLE.

Mr. Fred Evans, better known as the famous picture comedian, "Pimple," paid a visit to Seaford last week, and was accorded a right royal reception. At the time of his arrival the streets were thronged with an expectant crowd, and outside the Empire Cinema the car and Pimple were received by Mr. Cyril Bravery, the manager. The fact that the comedian was to appear in person drew a bumper house. The programme included a burlesque, entitled "Father and Son," the characters being sustained by Fred Evans and his brother Joe, the author of the sketch. At the conclusion "Pimple" thanked the people for his cordial welcome, and Mr. C. J. Bravery, the proprietor, and Mr. Cyril Bravery, manager, thanked Mr. Evans for his short but very interesting visit.

Quick Deliveries.

MY DEAR ——

Pleased to hear from you. Re Petrol Set, I can put you on to the very thing you want. Send to FYFE, WILSON & CO., 155a, St. Vincent Street, GLASGOW, they are the makers of the ONLY RELIABLE PETROL Sets on the Market. I have been using one of their small Sets continuously for two years and have never been stuck with it. I have recently purchased another Set from them, so you will see how all-satisfied I was with the first. I am using both now. It is the most simple "Fool Proof" set you can find. A lad can attend to it.

They have a special truck for carrying it about on always ready. All you do is to open one side of the box and start the engine and your electricity is there. I don't know the exact price of the Portable Sets, but you will be able to do business with them, I am sure. I should think you are on a "winner" to tour through ——, I took £—— with it in ——. FYFE, WILSON'S may have a second-hand set in stock. Whatever you do don't go and buy a cheap and nasty Set, or you will be always in trouble and probably hung up when you have a Big House. You can depend absolutely upon the "KELVIN" Set as supplied by FYFE, WILSON.

SCOTTISH NEWS AND NOTES.

EDINBURGH.

The management of the Tron Picture House screened "The Master Criminal" last week, "The Multi-Millionaire's Caprice" and "A Tale of Two Tables" supplying excellent comedy.—After a week's vacation for redecoration, the Salon reopened on Monday last, and renovated and rejuvenated, is ready for the good run which its programme for this week forecasts. "In the Fall of '64," "Where the Road Forks," "The Pearls of Death" and "A Queen's Love" are strong subjects, and, with other attractive items will form a fine magnet to draw the crowds.

The new management at Elm Row are providing good picture programmes in addition to their variety turns, and excellent business is resulting. "Lieutenant Daring and the Thames Coiners" was the star subject during the first three nights, and was received with unstinted appreciation.

"The Mystery of the Seven o'clock Express" last week proved a winner at the Easter Road Picturedrome, and "The Craven Heart," and "Love's Sunset" are no less attractive.—The Tollcross Cinema, despite strong opposition, keep up the number of its clients. "In the Days of the Trojan" was very popular, and "The Mysterious Hand" for the week-end also filled the house.

The picture programmes at the Palladium, Tivoli and Coliseum, and the suburban halls are well up to the city standard, and the respective managements are leaving nothing to chance in order to secure a good share of the summer patronage.

GLASGOW'S HOLIDAY RESORTS.

Glaswegians who visit the various holiday resorts on the Clyde and elsewhere will find that the second city has no monopoly of up-to-date subjects, and that the patron away from home is as well catered for as he is in his own city. Dunoon, Helensburgh, Rothesay, Largo, Saltcoats, Ardrossan, Troon, Gourock, Campbeltown, Girvan, etc., all have excellent picture houses, and from what I have seen there is no need of the city folks to lose the "picture habit" while at the coast.

ROTHESAY.

The Madeira of Scotland, as Rothesay people claim their town to be, is well supplied with cinemas, and the summer season is now in full swing. At the de Luxe, where Mr. Nettleton now manages, strong programmes are provided, and that being presented this week includes "A Woman of the People" and "By Unseen Hands," while next week a treat is promised with "A Tragedy in the Clouds."—At the Palace Cinema, the only picture hall on the front, continuous programmes are given. "In the Lion's Cage" and "The Mysterious Airship" ought to draw crowds in the first half of the week, while the exclusive, "The Hand That Condemns," will fill the hall at the end of the week.—Patrons of the Empire have been accustomed to first-class dramas, but a change has now been made to the popular pictures, "The Blue Rose," "Robespierre," "The Story of David Greig," "Mexican Rebellion," and "A Lost Treasure" are a pretty good lot to begin with, and ought to go a long way to attract crowded houses.

LERWICK.

Even in far-away Lerwick, in the Shetland Islands, the cinema has it votaries, and though far from the nearest hirer, the management are able to give three changes weekly at the Star. "Dublin Dan" and "Life in the British Army," "A Speaking Chance" and "When Life Fades" are the outstanding features, and the Derby, 1914, also finds a place in the programme.

ARBROATH.

Both houses in Arbroath are making bold bids to capture the summer trade, and both are succeeding to the point of having nothing to complain of. At the Palace, Mr. Arthur Dean is this week starring "The Clue of the Wax Vesta" and "The Crook's Revenge," while the remainder of the programme includes items light and gay, grave and pathetic, and a fine example of the best of scenics. "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves," is at the Olympia, Arbroath, and "London by Night" is another of the attractions. On the whole, the Arbroathians are fortunate in their picture houses.

ST. ANDREWS.

The programmes being submitted at the Cinema House, St. Andrews, are being kept up to the standard Mr. Yorke has marked out as the only one that will ensure success. The ideal aimed at is attained every week, and the programmes never fail to please. "The Antique Brooch" and "The Story of David Greig" are good films to rely on, and both are in this week's programme. On Friday a special programme is being submitted, when the management will devote the proceeds in aid of the Harbour Fund. —Very good business is being done by Messrs. Herman and Benton, the new lessees of La Scala, St. Andrews, and the knowledge both these gentlemen possess of the entertainment business, to say nothing of their exceptional resources, points the way success lies.

BUCKIE.

Enterprise marks every move of the management of the Lyceum, Buckie, and this was exemplified last week, when the film of a collision between the Empress of Britain and a collier was screened to full houses. "The Derby" was also starred last week, and "Red and White Roses," shown during the week-end, was also a good draw. Mr. Paterson has several other exceptional films booked, and the Buckie habitues are in for a treat. Plans were passed at the Council meeting last week for considerable improvements and extensions at the Lyceum, and when completed the building will be one of the finest in the North.—Still another house is on th tapis for Buckie, and plans are being invited from tradesmen who wish to tender for its erection. The new hall is to be situated in East Church Street, and from the plans prepared is to be a handsome building.

DALMUIR.

The inhabitants of Dalmuir, on the Clyde, have a pleasant resort in the Palladium, where Mr. Percy Byatt screens some excellent programmes. Last week "The Tongue Mark," "Penalty of Folly," "Pimple Self-convicted," etc., made up a good programme.

CLYDEBANK.

The new building for the Cinem Varieties is proceeding apace, and by the opening of the autumn season the new house will be ready for occupation. At the present hall this week Mr. R. Stewart was deputising for his brother, Mr. D. A. Stewart. "In Mid-Atlantic" and "The Inheritance of Remi Daubrais" proved big attractions.

KILBOWIE.

The New Kinema at Kilbowie, where Mr. Flockhart has done so well since taking over the management, still forges ahead. "To Shield Her Son" was the "star," along with "A Hero and His Blind Master," and a fine selection of other subjects.

HAWICK.

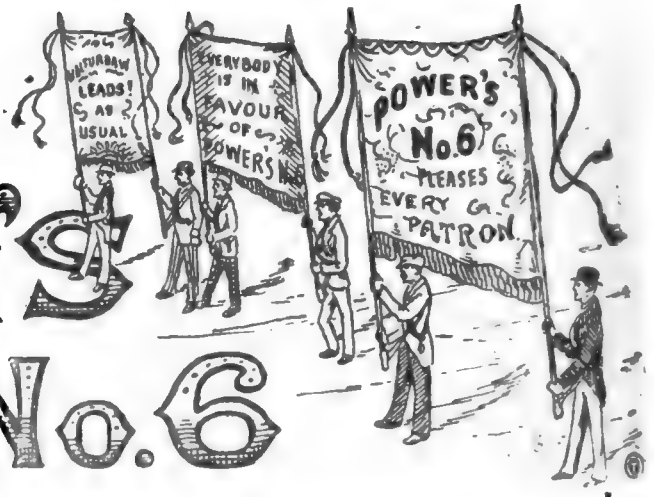
Last week was a great event in the history of Hawick, and Mr. George Urie Scott, of the Picture House, secured some excellent permanent records of the proceedings. These were screened during the week, and crowded houses were attracted. The chief attractions, apart from the topical, were "Give Us This Day—" and "'Neath the Lion's Paw." Business at Hawick continues excellent.

BARRHEAD.

The manner in which the programmes of pictures are presented at the Barrhead Pavilion does credit to the proprietor, Mr. G. V. Scott, and Mr. R. Richardson, the manager. The pictures are well screened and always a finely balanced selection. Last week's "tit-bits" were "The Chest of Fortune" and "The Bride of Mystery," while "The Vanishing Cracksman" and "The Escape" were included, along with many comedies. The all-picture regime is taking well.

LARKHALL.

This Lanarkshire centre has recently been in the throes of a football fever, and the local club came out on top. Football being the cause, Mr. Scott secured fine topicals of the final games, and these, on being shown at the Empire, "brought down the house." Mr. Scott generously provided the team with a complete outfit to commemorate the event. The general programme at the Empire is one of all-round excellence, and would be hard to beat at any time.



CHANNEL ISLANDS CINEMAS.

The French Government having presented to the States of Guernsey a marble statue of Victor Hugo, who spent several years of his exile in Guernsey, steps have been taken to unveil it with due eclat, and the proceedings are to be filmed by Mr. J. M. Nisbet. The statue will be unveiled on July 7th, when members of the French and English Governments, as well as of the States of Guernsey, will be present.—The pictures at the Rectory Hall have included "The Mysterious Airship," "Count Zarka" and "Her Legacy."—A peep into St. Julian's Theatre gives a very good idea of the future formation of the interior. The balcony is to be much larger, and beneath a portion of it there will be a spacious cloak room. Another exit will have a double outlet into two thoroughfares, therefore everything is being done to make this building as safe as possible.—Mr. Albany Ward has again come to the fore in Jersey by giving special shows on behalf of the Empress of Ireland fund, at the Opera House and Alhambra. At the first-named place, "Grip of Circumstances," "Seven Months Big Game Hunting" and "The Hopi Raiders" have been the features.—At the Alhambra, "A Question of Right" and "The Doctor's Deceit" have been seen.—At West's Picture Theatre, "The Colonel's Wife," "The Calling of Jim Barton" and "His Indian Nemesis" have been the top-liners.

IN THE MANCHESTER DISTRICT.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

There have been a good many changes of late among the managers of Manchester picture theatres. Mr. Murphy, late of the Labour Hall at Gorton, which has been closed, is to be congratulated on having secured a similar position at Olympia, which almost adjoins the old premises. Having spent thirty years in the locality, Mr. Murphy is an exceptionally well-known and popular personality, with the result that the present difficulty consists in finding sufficient seating accommodation for the visitors. Miss Murphy, the pianist, is the daughter of the manager, and although only eighteen years of age, shows considerable ability both as a musician and in the appropriate selection of music for the pictures. The programme, which consists of three changes a week, had for the two principal items last week "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" and "Blight of Suspicion," whilst at the present time "Should a Woman Tell?" is arousing exceptional interest.

The Premier, Cheetham Hill Road, finds business as good as ever. At Wednesday evening's performance 400 seats were reserved on behalf of the Manchester Hebrew Sick and Benefit Fund, and this charitable action on the part of the Premier proprietors was much appreciated and well supported by the public. One of the more important pictures shown last week was "One Hundred Days in Napoleon's Last Campaign," and among the pictures this week are "The Painting of Repentance," "Daughter of the Hills," "King in Name Alone," and "Heart of Midlothian." Mr. Seddon mentioned some very fine bookings which will be shown in the near future. Among them will be found "A Lady of Quality," "Vengeance is Mine," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "She Stoops to Conquer," "The Lights o' London," "Cloister and the Hearth," and "Tessibel of the Storm Country."

There has been a change in management at the Globe, Cheetham Hill, Mr. Yates now being in charge. Very good houses were secured last week, when, among others, "Facing the Footlights" and "In Mid-Atlantic" were shown. As an extra attraction for the whole week a film showing the sinking of a collier by the Empress of Britain, sister ship to the Empress of Ireland, was exhibited. During the present week the two chief items are "The Judge's Vindication" and "Supreme Sacrifice." Next week great results are expected from "Younita" and "The Curse of War." During the showing of the latter picture Ex-Councillor Will Phillips will deliver a lecture. Speaking of future events, Mr. Yates mentioned that he had booked "The Inheritance of Remi Daubrais."

The Shakespeare, Halliwell Lane, Cheetham Hill Road, is the newest picture palace in that district. After several changes, Mr. James Rolmaz has been installed as manager, and is doing his best to secure business against competition in the immediate neighbourhood. He has had a very wide experience in various parts of the country, which should prove of great assistance. The Shakespeare is certainly a very fine theatre, upon which no expense has been spared, and among other attractions music is provided by Mr. Kelsall's orchestra. Last week the programme chiefly consisted of "East Lynne," "The Sunday School Processions," a scenic entitled "Northern Italy," and "Uncle Tom's Cabin." During the present the chief pictures to be seen are "A Terrible Night at Sea" and "Her Great Sin."

The claim of "possessing the finest pianist in this city" is frequently made by picture theatre managers. There are quite a number in Manchester who have secured the services of musicians of more than ordinary ability, but a very remarkable pianist is to be found accompanying the pictures at the Cosmo, Gorton. The pianist here is totally blind, and a man sits by him describing the picture that is appearing on the screen. Very good business was done during Whitsun, when "Orders Under Seal" was shown. Last week was well up to the average, with "The Curse of War" and "Kronstadt." Among the good things coming are "Traitors to the King," "The Midnight Wedding," "The World, the Flesh, and the Devil," and "Lord Chumley."

A successful Trade show was given by the Progress Film Supply Company, of Great Ducie Street, on June 7th, at the Salford Cinema, when the following films were shown: "America to Europe," "The Great Sinner," "Pride of Jennico," "Tessibel of the Storm Country," "Atlantis," "Tasso," and "Saints and Sinners."

BREEZES FROM BLACKPOOL.

There is no more live man in the cinema world than Mr. J. Fenton, of the Hippodrome. He secured "Little Lord Fauntleroy" for the first three days of last week, and it proved a huge success. For the remaining portion of the week "Robin Hood and Maid Marian" also proved a good draw. This week "The Heart of Midlothian" gripped the attention of large audiences from start to finish.

Mr. Beck has been very pleased of late with the good houses at the King Edward picture house, Central Drive. As a matter of fact, the programmes submitted merit good business. "In the Power of a Hypnotist" and the "Devil's Eye" were two of the most appreciated films last week. This week he has been showing "A Lady of Quality."

The Casino Cinema, the charming picture house on the pleasure beach, South Shore, is rapidly gaining in favour. The principal attractions this week are "The Master of the Mine," "Fast Freight No. 3205" and "Broncho Billy and the Bad Man." The pictures are changed twice weekly, three performances being given daily.

The Progress Film Supply Company, of Great Ducie Street, Manchester, have arranged a Trade show on Sunday next at the Central Cinema, Central Beach, Blackpool, of some of the best exclusives. Local exhibitors and others are cordially invited. The first picture will be screened at 2.30..

All the picture theatres in Blackpool are submitting special programmes, there being large numbers of visitors in the town, and the various places of entertainment are doing remarkably good business. Mr. Sillars ,at the Imperial, scored heavily last week with "Vengeance is Mine." This week "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" tops the bill.—The Princes screened "Her Great Sin" and "'Neath the Lion's Paw," a future booking being "True Irish Hearts."

SCARBOROUGH SHOWS.

The cinemas, at the popular East Coast resort have been quite on a par with those in the city in getting newly released pictures. The three picture palaces on the South Foreshore can all be relied on for the very latest, and the keen competition gives patrons an obvious advantage. At Mr. Will Catlin's Olympia, for instance, there has been "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" and "Life," followed by "A Woman of the People." The two latter, each 3,000 ft. in length, were shown in one programme.—A good deal might be said against "long films," but they appear to hold the sway at the Queen of Watering Places. The same thing also applies at the Palladium, which is under the management of Mr. Catley, on behalf of Mr. Will Catin. At the time of writing, the pictorial adaptation of "The Midnight Wedding" and W. W. Jacobs' "Lawyer Quince" are both drawing big crowds to the bottom of Bland's Cliff.—At the other end of the Foreshore, the Grand, on the site of the old skating rink, keeps in keen competition, and Mr. H. A. Whitaker and his manager, Mr. Parnell had a strong counter attraction in "The Lights o' London."—Up in the town, Mr. Quinton Gilson, of the Picturedrome, Newborough, has been showing "Riddle of the Tin Soldier" and "Big Jim of the Sierras" as the top-liners.—At the Theatre Royal Cinema, St. Thomas Street, Messrs. Gibson and Garside featured "A Leader of Man."

PRESTON'S PICTURES.

The proprietors of the Preston picture theatres are displaying a real spirit of enterprise in trying to attract patronage during these hot days, with country and seaside resorts appealing so strongly to the public fancy. The policy adopted is to provide one film at least of such interest and excellence that its attraction cannot be avoided. At the same time they are always careful not to allow other features of the programme to degenerate, and it may safely be claimed that the halls provided at the Preston houses will compare with the very best elsewhere. In spite of the fine weather, the charm of the picture still holds the people, and, in the circumstances, satisfactory business is being done.

The picture that had quite an exceptional vogue in the town was "The Lure of London," shown at the Imperial. Every performance was crowded out, and the management enjoyed quite a memorable week. At the same place last week there was again such variety as to please the most exacting person. The dramtic items included "Married by Proxy," "Temptations of Drink," "The Girl and the Gangster" and "Jack Shepherd," while the comedies were "Double Crossed," "The Honeymooners," "A Game of Poker" and "Willie Minds the Dog"—all of the best.

"The Woman Thou Gavest" was shown at the Prince's Theatre with success. The picture made a magnificent head piece for an excellent all-round programme, which included a picture that gave a pretty version of the Chinese legend of the "Willow Pattern Plate."—At the Picturedrome, which is under the same management as the Prince's, there was also on view many tip-top pictures, with a strong drama, "Heaven Will Protect the Working Girl" at the forefront.

The Cosy Cinema and the Alexandra Picture Palace are also under one management, whose enterprise could scarcely be equalled. The controlling force is an ambition to present the very best pictures in the town. That is most laudable, and is sure to bring its own reward. With the management so minded, it is not surprising that the shows at both places are always of special merit. The Cosy had for its masterpiece of the week a thrilling drama, "Seed of the Fathers," and that at the Alexandra was "Relentless of Life"—a film full of striking scenes.

The Marathon had such tempting headlines as "The Curse of Greed" and "The Tiger Countess," while "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves" was the chief attraction at Bennett's Electric Theatre. There was at the Embee Hall, "The Water War," "The Italian Navy of To-day," "The Tragedy of Ambition" and "The Champion."

PICTURES AT SALTBURN.

Mr. Leon Wood, manager of the Pictureland, Milton Street, Saltburn-by-the-Sea, Yorkshire—maintains by continuous example his contention that a valuable side-line in addition to the best of pictures is a short entertainment by a refined concert party. During the Whitsuntide holiday period Mr. Wood had the advantage of the presence of Miss Millicent Sadler's company, "The Merry Jovials," whose performance, along with the highest fare in pictures, kept Mr. Wood's theatre always full.

THE GRANGE PICTUREDROME.

In the Chancery Division on Tuesday, before Mr. Justice Sargant, the Grange Picturedrome, Limited, of 11, Roper's Terrace, Trimdon Grange, Durham, asked for an extension of time in which to register allotment of shares.

Counsel said the Company was registered on February 9th of this year, with a capital of £1,500, divided into 1,450 preferred ordinary shares of £1 each, and 1,000 deferred shares of 1s. each. Of the preferred ordinary shares 1,176 were issued on which 2s. 6d. was paid on application and 2s. 6d. on allotment. This allotment had not been registered, and apparently neither the Chairman nor any of the directors was aware of the company's act or its provisions, and it was only in May, when they had occasion to go to a solicitor, that they discovered it was compulsory on them to register the allotment. Counsel now asked for three weeks in which to register.

His Lordship said he would grant twenty-one days.

ACTION AGAINST THE WALTURDAW COMPANY.

In the King's Bench Diivsion, on June 10th, before Mr. Justice Darling (without jury by consent) Mr. Sigmund Brandon, of Mile End Road, brought an action against the Walturdaw Company, Limited, of Gerrard Street, Shaftesbury Avenue, claiming damages for alleged trespass and for having been wrongfully ejected from possession of the Memorial Hall, Church Street, Islington. Defendant denied the allegations.

Mr. Langdon, K.C. for the plaintiff, said Mr. Brandon was engaged in the cinema trade and leased the hall in question from the defendants for the purpose of cinema exhibitions. The place, said counsel, was in a poor state of repair, and plaintiff spent a sum of money on doing it up. He took the hall for four years from March 25, 1913, at a rental of £145. In consideration of a certain sum being paid to the defendants by the plaintiff, the defendants let to the plaintiff certain fixtures, fittings, etc., which were at the expiration of the term to become the property of the plaintiff. Mr. Brandon took possession of the premises and the fittings, etc. On June 23, 1913, defendants, it was said, wrongfully entered the premises, evicted the plaintiff and seized and carried away the fixtures and fittings which they had detained or converted to their own use. By reason of this plaintiff had suffered loss by being deprived of the premises and from carrying on his business as a cinema exhibitor.

After hearing evidence on both sides, his Lordship held that on the whole the defendants had wrongfully entered, and the only question was one of damages. He did not think the plaintiff's business would have been a valuable one, and he thought the case would be met by entering judgment for the plaintiff and assessing the damages at £100.

Judgment entered accordingly.

IMPORTANT COURT OF APPEAL CASE.

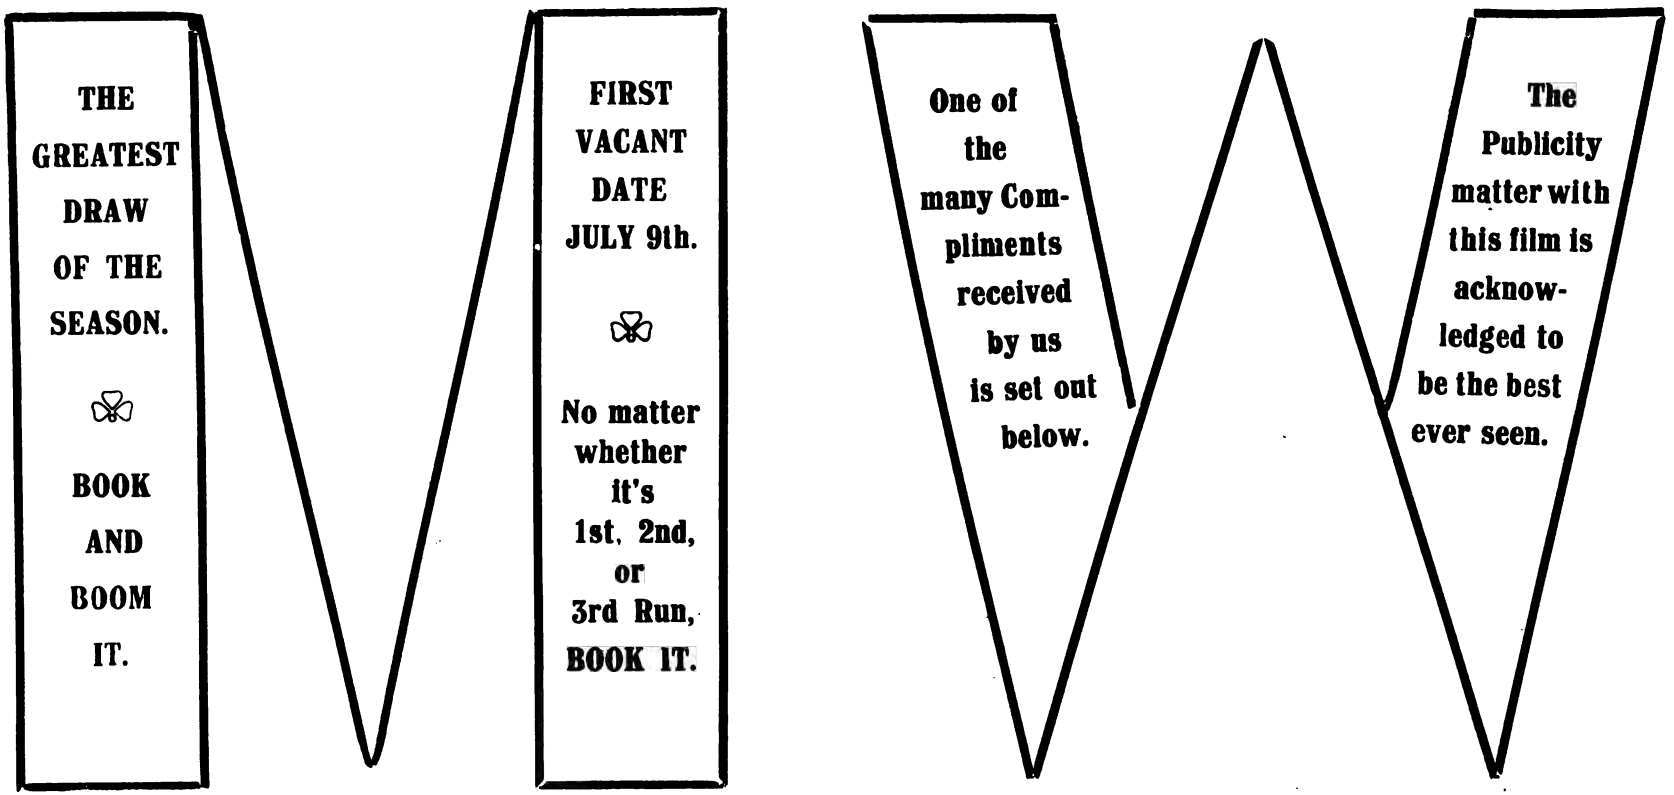
An interlocutory appeal of the defendants in the action of the New York Motion Picture Corporation and the Western Import Company v. the Trans-Atlantic Film Company from an order of Mr. Justice Atkin granting an interim injunction, was heard by Lords Justices Kennedy and Phillimore in the Court of Appeal on Friday.

Mr. H. E. Duke, K.C., for the appellants, said the New York Motion Picture Corporation had been erroneously described at the time the interim injunction was granted as a limited company, whereas they were a corporation. The action was a claim for damages for false and malicious statements and representations alleged to have been made by the defendants in regard to the plaintiffs' business and their artistes, employees and servants, and for falsely representing that they had acquired a portion of the plaintiffs' business, contracts and artistes. Those statements, it was alleged, had been made verbally by the defendants at Glasgow Exhibition, and in writing at various times during February and March of this year in the Trade papers. The plaintiffs asked for an injunction to restrain the defendants from repeating the alleged false statements and from representing that they had entered into contracts with, or engaged the Keystone Company of film producers and had acquired rights in their productions and from attempting to induce the servants of the said company to break their contracts with the plaintiffs or from representing that they had done so.

Continuing, counsel said several of the artistes who had been engaged for the plaintiffs' films seceded from the Keystone Company and produced films for the defendants. A number of these artistes had been engaged by the defendants, but in their advertisements they said, in the usual flamboyant manner of advertising, that they had engaged practically the whole company. What Mr. Justice Atkin had done was to grant an injunction restraining the defendants, until the trial of the action, continuing these advertisements or statements.

Counsel submitted that as the plaintiffs had no title in the word Keystone, there was no ground for such an injunction.

On behalf of the respondents, Mr. R. V. Bankes, K.C., contended that a great wrong had been done his clients.



Lord Justice Phillimore expressed the opinion that at present he failed to see that the plaintiffs had given anything like sufficient proof of title that would entitle them to sue. They were asking the court to say that they were the proprietors of the whole of the films or productions of certain film-producing artistes known as the Keystone Company or the Keystone Film Company. Where was the conveyance by which the right of the one was transferred to the other? Before an injunction could be obtained a title must be shown. The defendants did not say they were selling Keystone films but films produced by a body known as the Keystone actors.

Lord Justice Kennedy said the case bristled with difficulties. What possible interest had the Keystone Company in getting an injunction to prevent someone in England saying they obtained films from them?

The appeal was allowed. Lord Justice Kennedy said the order made by the learned judge in the Court below was limited in form, restraining the de-

June 10, 1914.

GENTLEMEN,

Of the many pleasant reports we have been sending you about "THE MIDNIGHT WEDDING," the climax has arrived to-day, when a manager came in with the greatest praise for the picture, and explaining that he had the unique experience of closing up his opponent's hall last night, while both our customer's houses were jammed. This is perhaps a unique experience in the cinematograph world.

Yours respectfully, fendants or their servants from representing that any of their films were produced by the Keystone Company. Though a limited order, the judge should not have made it where there was a dispute of law and fact. Plaintiff should not go into chambers and obtain an injunction which might seriously affect and, if the defendant was right, seriously wrong him before the trial came on.

Lord Justice Phillimore, in concurring, said that the adding of the Keystone Company as plaintiffs, which was done some time after the action was commenced, was an act of felo de se on the part of plaintiffs.

The appeal was allowed with costs.

Birmingham News and Notes.

From the cinema point of view, the Birmingham amusement caterers have seldom, if ever, presented such an interesting series of programmes as during the past week. The Prince of Wales' has been screening the "Captain Scott" films to packed and appreciative audiences twice daily, and Mr. G. H. Mears has proved himself an admirable lecturer and raconteur. Society has shown great interest in these films, and an array of cars has been in evidence outside the Prince of Wales.'

Mr. Yeulett, of the New Street Picture House, presented his audience last week with a programme of exceptional interest, which included a very instructive film, produced by the London Film Company, on the various phases of golfing. The film was one which found many interested patrons in Mr. Yeulett's hall. Another attractive item on the programme was "Love and Gasoline," which elicited well-merited applause. The special orchestral features of the programme at this house are very popular with patrons, and are invariably greeted with hearty applause.

Congratulations to Mr. Bradbury, of the Masonic Hall, New Street, whose screening during the latter part of last week of "Those Who Dwell in Darkness," in aid of Mr. Arthur Pearson's fund for the blind, was the means of his realising a collection, on Thursday and Friday alone, amounting to £12 10s. to this end.

Whilst in New Street a reference to the Landon Ronald concerts, which have commenced at the Theatre Royal this week, and are playing to such good business, will not be out of place. It is pointed out in an interesting paragraph in a local daily, that such attractive orchestral performances would be enhanced in popularity, if combined with the cinematograph, which suggestion appears worthy of consideration.

A visit to the Grand, Corporation Street, revealed a pleasing state of affairs, and packed houses have been experienced during the last week. Mr. Rembges has taken over the management of this hall, and everything is progressing very favourably under his capable régime. "The Honeymoon Express," the popular revue, which played to phenomenal business last week, used the cinematograph to advantage in two of its best and most effective scenes.

The "Cinema Acting Competition" at the Newtown Palace, is proving very popular, and the various performances of competitors aroused great interest and amusement every day in the hall.

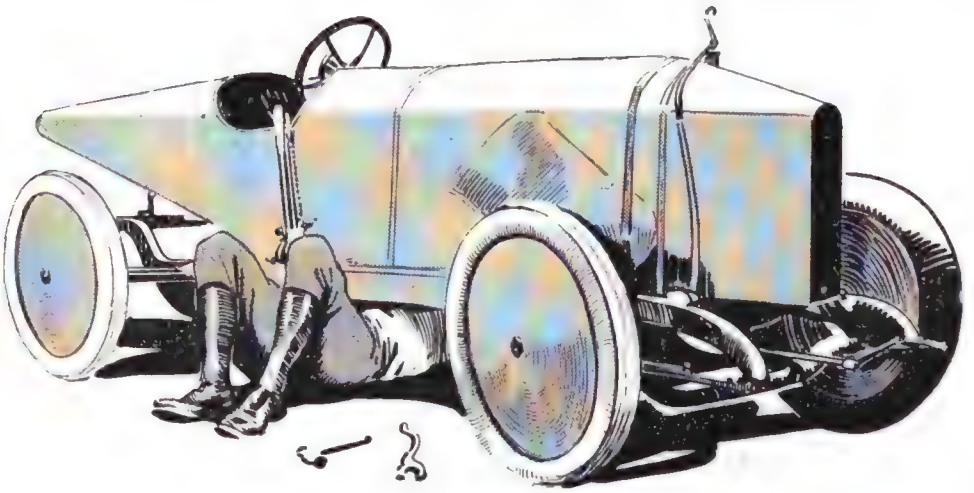
The Balsall Picture House screened "Moths" during the first part of this week to very good business, and during the latter part "The Mystery of the Old Mill" was a very popular star. This week, I understand, "The Road to Ruin" will top the bill the first part.

Mr. Cutts, manager of the Scala Theatre, screened, last week, "The Road to Ruin," to very appreciative audiences.—Mr. Harriss, of the Imperial, Moseley Road, did good business when showing "King Rene's Daughter," during the first part of this week, and "Orders Under Seal" proved an equally good money-getter during the latter part.

Application for a licence to build a picture house at Five Ways, Hagley Road, was refused by the Licensing Justices, on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Mitchell, of the Ideal Film Company, reports excellent business, both with his popular line of exclusives, and open-market features. The Betty Nansen series all show splendid bookings in Birmingham and district, and Mr. Mitchell informs me that some very satisfactory bookings of his films have recently been realised in the Potteries.

A BENEFIT SHOW AT HOLMFIRTH.



At the Holme Valley Theatre, Holmfirth, Yorkshire, on Wednesday, a special benefit performance was given in aid of the funds of the Hinchliff Mill Prize Brass Band. The band concerned rendered musical selections with a degree of musical efficiency which well maintained the reputation which has been gained throughout the country by these Yorkshire and Lancashire mill-workers' bands. Mr. W. A. Blackburn, manager of the hall, put on the screen specially selected pictures, his programme including many films in popular demand at the moment.

NEWS FROM HERTS.

Developments in the picture world in Watford appear to be very much to the public taste, judging from the good audiences I have noticed in the local houses. Mr. Palmer, who resumed control of the Kinetic Company's hall in the Market Place, has fallen into line with many other enterprises by running afternoon exhibitions each day, and the variety interludes prove instrumental in securing fresh custom for the pictures. Last week's films included "The Results of Carelessness" and "Cast of the Die" as the star features, the stage being occupied during the intervals by a clever company known as the Dandies.

Another Watford Hall—the Coliseum—has placed variety upon its list of attractions, Herbert Mundin, a young St. Albans comedian, giving song turns between the pictures with great success. It is at this theatre that the Herkomer productions are having a highly successful run, and "The Old Wood Carver," another film in which Sir Hubert von Herkomer takes a leading part, drew excellent audiences. The old wood carver was one of the late Sir Hubert's uncles, who made so many of the fittings of the beautiful house at Bushey. Another Herkomer given during the week was the comedy, "Love in a Tea Shop," and drama films of note were "A Bird of Prey" and "Whimsical Threads of Destiny."

The Central Hall provides its patrons with something exceptionally good, and I was able to see for myself the intense interest with which the thrilling adventures of the hero of "Orders Under Seal" were followed. Watford people were particularly pleased with the enterprise of the management in giving them a film of their own in the local Horse Show on Whit Monday, and during the whole of its run to June 8 it was seen by big attendances. The Central Hall photographer bids fair to become a very important personage, as some interesting and spectacular events are to be held in the town and neighbourhood during the summer. Other popular films at the Central Hall have been "The Mystery of the Old Mill" and "Branscombe's Pal."—During the week the Empire did good business with "The Tower of Terror" and "Dick Even, Gentleman Cracksman."

Interest in the Cinema Lecture scheme at Letchworth is very general. If Mr. Westell's scheme for educational film lectures is successful—a series of twenty-six lectures proposed for the next winter season—Hertfordshire will become noted for its interest in this phase of film usefulness. Another extremely interesting event took place recently at the Barnet Cinema Palace, when "The White Scourge," was one of the principal films to be screened. The film is the property of the East Sussex Insurance Committee, and was shown by the local Committe. At the first screening of the film Mr. Marchand, Chairman of the Barnet District Insurance Committee, spoke upon the evil results of consumption and commented upon the help the cinematograph could give in their efforts to combat the disease. In the ordinary programme at the Barnet house the principal attractions have been "The Filly," a capital sporting drama, "The Antique Brooch," and "Hook and Hand."

Anticipation as to the measure of enjoyment that is going to be derived from an hour or two at the Playhouse, Hitchin, is never disappointed. During the past two weeks, since Whit Monday, besides film programmes good enough to fill the bill at most houses, Mr. Parry manages to squeeze in variety that would do credit to a big theatre. Among films there have been "The Calling of Jim Barton" "The Gentler Passion," "The Frail Vessel," and "The Expert's Secret."

The screening of "In the Bishop's Carriage," was a great success at the Princess, Hemel Hempstead, and the last feature films have been "The White Vacquero," Reygate Squires," (one of the Sherlock Holmes films which are proving highly attractive in the town,) and "Maria Marten."—On the other side of the county Messrs. W. Skipp and Sons have been showing at Ware many good selections including "The Convict's Story," "A Muddy Romance," the Keystone comedy; "Robespierre," and "Fighters of the Plains."—Mr. Dunkley has been doing good business with films of his choice; "Count Zarka," "The Daredevil Detective," "Targets of Fate," and "Night Shadows of New York" appealing very strongly to the taste of patrons of the St. Albans Cinema.—A big picture attraction in Hertford was "Moths" at the People's Theatre, which film was also one of the principal holiday "draws" at the Hoddesdon Cinema. Mr. Hatrick also screened at the last named house "The Great Leap," and "The Iron Man."—The picture attractions at Harpenden White Palace have included "Curse of Greed," "Escape of Jim Nolan," "Stolen Papers" and David Garrick.

Last week a royal visit was paid to the Hitchin Playhouse, the Grand Duke Michael, brother of the Czar of Russia, motoring from Knebworth House to Hitchin on Saturday, and visiting the Playhouse at the invitation of Mr. Parry. Accompanying the Grand Duke were Madame de Brassow, Mr. and Mrs. Schleifer, Captain Johnson and Captain Laski. In honour of the visit flags were suspended from business establishments in the Market-place and the front of the Playhouse was decorated with Russian flags and other patriotic emblems. The Grand Duke was received by the directors and the audience stood while the Russian "National Anthem" was played, applauding as the party entered one of the boxes. The Russian national colours also figured in the decoration of the box. A souvenir programme printed on yellow satin and inscribed "Presented on the occasion of the visit of the Grand Duke Michael of Russia" was handed to the members of the party, and refreshments were presented by the management during the performance.

The Grand Duke remained until the close of the performance, the audience standing while the orchestra, under Mr. Arthur Briscoe, played the Russian "National Anthem" and "God Save the King."

TRAWLINGS FROM GRIMSBY.

The Coliseum, the new Cleethorpes cinema, has had a very successful send-off, which must have pleased Mr. A. Buckle, the managing director for Coliseum (Cleethorpes), Limited. Situated in the High Street the building has accommodation for 800 and is modelled on the most up-to-date lines. The exterior supports an artistic verandah and the interior is comfortable. The orchestra, which is under the conductorship of Mr. Clexton, who was formerly in the Strand orchestra, consists of eight performers. A café in connection with the cinema, to seat 150 people and which is on the first floor, is in charge of Mrs. Crowther, late of the Electra, Sheffield. During the past fortnight there have been screened at the Coliseum "The Chest of Fortune," "The Bride of Mystery," "The Staircase of Death" and "Jane Eyre."

Bank holiday was a particularly busy time at local picture palaces, and the recent snap of wet weather has put "the pictures" at a premium over out-door pursuits. Mr. T. T. Protheroe continued to suit the taste of his extensive clientèle at the Picture Playhouse, Kent Street. His programme recently has included "The Heart of Kathleen," "In Mid-Atlantic," "Hidden Death" and "The Devil's Eye."

Of peculiar interest in a town which is one of the principal ports of shipment in the traffic was the film depicting the process of the trade in decrepit horses with the Continent, which was on view at the Gaiety Cinema, Wintringham Road, the other week. The picture was shown first at a matinée, which was largely and influentially attended, and Mr. Alfred Blackman, the manager, made splendid arrangements for the successful exhibition of the film in Grimsby. He was cordially thanked for his able and willing services by Mr. Walter Clarke (of the R.S.P.C.A.), who delivered a lecture on the subject of the horse traffic, and by the Rev. W. Briscombe. A number of other attractive pictures was also shown at the matinée, at which afternoon tea was served. "All for Science," "The Devil's Eye" and "The Reformation of Calliope" have been further recent toppliners.

The same programmes are shown at the Strand Cinema, Park Street, and the Lyric, Victoria Street—Messrs. Higgins and Littlewood's two Grimsby houses. Amongst the fare which has been provided at these halls have been "The Money God," "The Light o' London," "The Red Club" and "Hearts Adrift."

Other items in local halls have included "Out of the Depths," "The Fortune Hunters," "Saved from a Living Death" and "The Dungeon of Steel" at the Paragon, Corporation Road; "A Tragedy of the Clouds," "A Winter's Tale," "Traitors to Their King," and "Spartacus" at the Tivoli, Duncombe Street; and "The Children of Captain Grant," "The Hundred Days," "In the Grip of a Villain" and "The Tragedy of the Three M's" at the Empire, Cleethorpes.

EXCLUSIVE RIGHTS.

The Power Feature Film Company, Limited, have disposed of the exclusive rights of the "Dead Secret" as and from August 20th, to the Record Film Service, of 157, Wardour Street, W., to whom all communications should be addressed for bookings to commence September 1st.

SHEFFIELD AND DISTRICT.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

At the Cinema, Mr. J. W. Dickinson is attracting some good business, the award of the week being given to "The Cabaret Dancer," "Monsieur Lecocq" and "The Cry of the Innocent." The basement of the theatre presents a hive of industry, as a grill and billiard-room are to be installed in the near future.

Mr. Leonard Shaw, of the Picture Palace, Union Street, has been busily engaged in his little spare time attaching a motor (accumulator driven) to his camera, and he should now be able to excel his previous efforts in the shape of the taking of topicals. He further intends fitting an auxiliary lens to the camera. The show is doing well, notwithstanding the off-season, and during the current week "Chelsea 7750" and "Protea" are pulling crowds.

"Vengeance of Durand" and "Queen's Love" are heading a strong programme at the New Tivoli, Norfolk Street. Mr. Briggs is chockful of ideas, and places great reliance on advertising devices, which have certainly justified the expense. It is intended to engage the best vaudeville talent available to support the films.

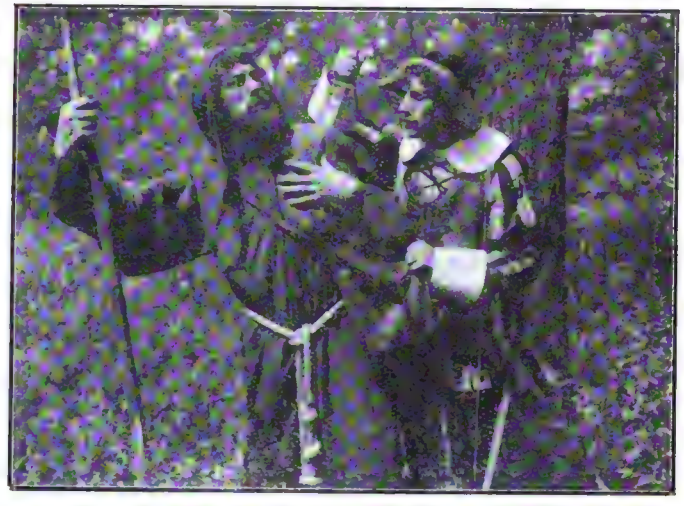
The Grand, West Bar, has suffered a few changes since its original inception as a music-hall some years ago. The show has now been taken over by Mr. S. Walford Grout, who has installed Mr. T. Ryan (late of the High Street Picture Palace, Rotherham) as manager. The proprietor has taken over the bar attached to the building, and has secured a full licence. Redecorations and renovations are in progress, and a new Kalee projector has been substituted for the old machine. The prices of admission are now on a popular basis—viz., 1d. and 2d., and the programme submitted is of a first-class order.

"Protea" and the "Curse of the Scarabee Ruby" are headliners of a good all-round entertainment at the Don. The erection of the balcony, which will seat some 300 persons, is now under way.

"Zigomar" proved a successful feature for Mr. F. S. Whitehead at the Roscoe. "Tragedy of the Clouds" is the second star for the present week.

The Princess Palace, Rawmarsh, has now changed ownership, and the latest proprietors are Messrs. Whitehead and Mitchell, of Leeds and Sheffield. Mr. Fred. L. Arthur has been appointed manager. Good fare is provided, as witness "Black Roderick" and "Nick Winter," and it is hoped that the venture will meet with deserved success.

REOPENING OF THE LONDON OPERA HOUSE.



The London Opera House will be reopened on June 15th, when a special film of East African hunt and travel scenes will be presented under the title of "Cinemazoo." Mr. E. A. V. Stanley states that he is very anxious it should be distinctly understood that the London Opera House has not become a picture palace. He has let the house for a period of one month for this special film. The pictures will be described by Mr. Mervyn McPherson.

Sunderland and Wearside Sidelights.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

An early start is to be made, I hear, by Messrs. Collins and Chater, of Newcastle, with the building of a new hall at Hetton-le-Hole.

The Tivoli, Laygate Circus, South Shields, one of the halls owned by Messrs. Black Brothers, Sunderland, has just been closed down as a picture palace for a while. Mr. John Robertson, its manager, has been transferred by Messrs. Black to their Sunderland hall.

No man is accepting the summer season with more confidence than Mr. Frederic J. Hudspeth, chief of affairs at the de Luxe, Fawcett Street, Sunderland. From the opening of this dainty little hall by Messrs. Hamilton he has been its guiding tar. Around him he had gathered a clientèle, who are remarkably faithful in the regularity of their attendances, so much so that Mrs. Hudspeth can confidently put on expensive programmes with the assurance that the patronage will work things out all right. Then, too, the music is always in accord with the high tone of everything at the de Luxe; indeed, Mr. H. Pullan's little band of instrumentalists are so much appreciated that it is a regular thing to hear their selections applauded. They are a part of the entertainment. Recently, as I have recorded, some exceptional film programmes have been screened here. "The King of the Air" was a masterpiece; last Monday "The Old Curiosity Shop" made even greater appeal than did "David Copperfield" the other week, whilst "Out of the Depths," which superceded it on Thursday afternoon, was a decided success.

"Officer Jim" was the star film at the Avenue Theatre, where Mr. F. Sayer also showed a film specially taken of the recent Barnard Castle Cyclists' Meet. This latter is largely kept up by local cycling clubs, for whom he arranged a special performance on Wednesday, when his enterprise met with the greatest appreciation.

Ever since the Sunderland Picture House opened Mr. J. McColl, its manager, has been endeavouring to create an interest in the best class of film. Realising the immense potentialities of the cinema, too, as an educational force he has regularly introduced Nature-study subjects into the programme until now, should one such be missing, he is quickly asked by his patrons, "Why?" It was not surprising, therefore, to find that when the famous Carnegie Museum Expeditions films were coming to Sunderland that the Picture House should be the first place at which they were shown. The exhibition of the films, as Mr. McColl mentioned in a circular, "may be considered part of the educational policy which the management have always pursued." Very special arrangements had been made by Mr. Heydemann, Ph.D., and Mr. McColl for their publicity—(the Newcastle Illustrated Chronicle gave half-price admission coupons)—and the resuts were, to quote those most affected, "simply splendid." Matinée performances were arranged for school-children, of whom a great number visited the Picture House, their teachers taking them there during school hours and marking off the seeing of the films as the day's "Nature study lesson." Dr. Heydemann himself lectured upon the pictures, another section of which I hope soon to see again.

At the South Shields Picture House "Antony and Cleopatra" and the "Gaumont Graphic" made a fetching programme. "A Sister's Hate" became the chief item from Thursday afternoon.

No better testimony to the business capabilities of Mr. Thos. H. Johnson, managing director of the Villiers Theatre Company, Sunderland, need be afforded than the fact that, directly he suggested the Roker Avenue venture the money to float the new sister company was immediately forthcoming. As readers of this page will be aware, this fine new hall is rapidly nearing completion. The capital of the new company is £10,000, and nearly all that sum is being sunk in the venture, which has undoubtedly excellent prospects. Surrounding the hall is a great working-class population, whilst so far as the summer is concerned every visitor to Rober-by-the-Sea must pass the palace, and that many of these people will spend the evening there whilst waiting for their trains is a foregone conclusion.

One night last week I dropped into the Villiers to have a chat with Mr. Johnson, whose son assists him in the management of that hall. Since the new Roker venture came upon the boards, by the bye, Mr. Johnson has made Sunderland his home. The hall, although so soon after the holidays, was well filled, and everything seemed to be going on roller bearings. "The Expert's Secret" was the premier film, and later it gave place to "Whither Hatred Leads," "Jane Eyre" topping the bill last Thursday. Only the principal film is shown on Thursday evenings, the remainder of the programme being made up of vaudeville, both professional and amateur. Another innovation Mr. Johnson has just instituted is admitting free any man engaged in His Majesty's Army or Navy provided he is in uniform, and I needly hardly say that the men on furlough made it a point of bringing their sweethearts and friends along with them for company's sake. The presence of the uniforms in the audience, too, gives a pleasing touch of colour to the gathering.

No manager was more satisfied with the business he did last week than Mr. H. Hinton, who had "The Antique Brooch" as his main picture. The East End Gaiety has really come into its own.

OLDHAM NEWS & NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

More suitable "picture hall" weather could not have been wished for than that we in Oldham have experienced during the holiday time. Rain has fallen incessantly, and every picture hall manager has told the same story—"House Full." At the King's, Mr. Field has been showing some excellent subjects, "The Battle of Elderbush Gulch" and "Younita," but his biggest success has been "The Lights o' London." "The Fatal Wedding" is the "star" this week.

The Palladium featured "Up to Her Tricks" and "Traitors to Their King" and "Chevalier de Maison Rouge." For this week "Fools of Society" tops the bill.

At the Empire Mr. Gaston had a very entertaining programme, which included "A Cruel Revenge," "Bondage of Fear," "The Girl Who Dared," "Officer Jim" and "Love and Vengeance."

At the Hippodrome things have been going on merilly for a long time, but it was with great regret I heard that Mr. Fred. Dixon has severed his connection with the hall after a stay of over three years. I am not saying too much in describing him as one of the most genial and popular managers in the cinema line. "Through Flaming Paths," "Dad's Girl," "Love's Sunset," "Reinstated" and "Double Crossed" were recent attractions.

The Star and Osborne have screened, among others, "On Secret Service, "Prisoner of War" and "Orphan's Fate," and across at the Popular, "Wilderness Mail," "The Shadow," "Caught With the Goods," "Turning Point," "Baby Spy" and "Out of the Depths" were all excellent subjects.

At the Electraceum, Mr. Woodhead has had a fine time. "In the Power of the Hypnotist," "Mystery of the Copper Beaches," "Beauty and the Barge," "A Terrible Alternative" and "Love's Old Dream" were all excellent pictures, and with the "effects" which are added, they one and all were very acceptable.

The Premier had a fine series of films, including "Whimsical Threads of Destiny," "Toplipsky and Co.," "Blind Fate," "Trapped" and "Heartsease."—The Coliseum presented "The Price of a Necklace," "A Bad Game" and "Polidor and the Lions."

Down at Brown's many excellent subjects were screened, the chief being "The Cage," "Pendulum of Justice," "Chains of Bondage" and "Dr. Gar-el-Hama."—The Imperial did great business. "In the Hands of London Crooks," "Under the Black Flag," "Master of the Mine" and "When the Soul Awakens" were all excellently screened.

Away from all opposition, the Gem draws big crowds. The last fortnight, "As Fate Would Have It." "Musketeers of Pig Alley," "Dick Turpin's Deadly Foe," and "Lifeboat Rescue" were but a few of many excellent pictures.

PLYMOUTH AND DISTRICT NOTES

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The Theatre Royal, which is managed by Mr. "Jimmy Glover," of Drury Lane fame, is this week introducing the cinema entertainment. The Anglo-Colonial Cinema Company have presented their world-travel motion pictures entitled "All the world Over" on the two performances a day principle. The production has been personally conducted by the celebrated guide and lecturer Mr. G. Mayor-Cooke. Added to these interesting and educational motion pictures was a local film which enabled the audience to be taken on the world tour starting from the theatre doors.

"Jane Eyre" made a pleasant and enjoyable "star" film at the Belgrave, Plymouth. "The Message of the Sundial" was enacted in delightful surroundings and was of absorbing interest. "Her Wedding Bell" was another drama which pleased everyone. Comedy subjects were satisfactorily represented in "What Came to Bar Q Ranch," "Bidoni and the Negress" and "When Billy Proposed."

At the Theatre Elite, Plymouth, "On the Minute" was the best thing in the programme for the first prat of the week "Broncho Billy and the Red Man" unfolded a very interesting tale of the Wild West and provided both romance and excitement. For spectacular effect "In Old Brittany" was a delightful film, and "Love and Dynamite" caused a deal of thrills.

One can always depend upon getting value for money at the De Luxe, Plymouth, where Mr. Knowles looks after the comforts of his patrons. "The Tell-tale Star" was a study of particular interest, and of equal merit was "The Girl Who Dared." Persons having a fondness for wrestling got a lot of enjoyment from "Ju-Jitsu to the Rescue" and at the same time gained some knowledge in this art. Pictures of comedy and the "Pathé Gazette" also found a place in the programme.

"CHERI-BIBI."

The Walturdaw Company, Limited, have secured exclusive rights for Great Britain of the Eclair production, "Cheri-Bibi." The colonial rights are still open.

MR. ERIC WILLIAMS.

The Eric Williams "speaking pictures" seem to be gaining in popularity. Mr. Williams has just brought to a close a twelve weeks' engagement with the Central Halls Syndicate at Inverness, and is now fulfilling a two weeks' engagement at the Grand Opera House, Middlesbro'. After paying return visits to the de Luxe, Norwich, and Cinema House, Bristol, he will open at York on June 29th, for a tour of all theatres controlled by National Electric Theatres, Limited. The unique feature of Mr. Eric Williams' series of films is that he not only recites the selection presented with perfect synchronisation but also himself acts the principal character of each story or selection, so that the audience is simultaneously brought face to face with the personality of the reciter on the platform and the actor on the screen. Mr. Williams now has a repertoire of five films, all of which are proved successes, and two more are in course of preparation.

PICTURES IN IRELAND.

By "PADDY."

DUBLIN.

The Sunday opening question is again cropping up here, and last week a strong appeal was made to the Roman Catholic section of the community not to countenance the opening of picture houses—or, indeed, any house of entertainment on the Sabbath.

I attended the opening of the Bohemian Picture House in Phibsboro' last week, and was glad to see that the house was crammed from top to bottom. I may mention that Mr. W. O. Ashton—late Manager for Films, Limited, in D'Olier Street, Dublin—acts as manager for Mr. F. A. Sparling, the proprietor of the theatre. "In the Hands of London Crooks" was the star film for the opening week. I wish Mr. Ashton every success.

At the fine house of entertainment, the Dorset Hall, Mr. Sullivan has been having an exceedingly busy time coping with the crowds which patronise his theatre every evening. The weather in Dublin recently has been changeable, fine and warm during the day, bitterly cold during the evenings, with the result that the theatres, on the whole, did a flourishing trade. The star films at the Dorset for last week were: "Heart of Kathleen," an excellent Irish exclusive controlled by L. and Y. Films, Limited. Other star films were: "The Expert's Secret," "Love's Sunset," and "Anne Boleyn."—At the Cosy Cinema, Parnell Street, the films included "The Doctor's Romance," "Peggy's Burglar" and "The Tango."—At the Grand Cinema the principal films were "The Outlaw's Bride," Max and a Daughter of Albion," "Once Aboard the Lugger," "Her Wedding Bell," and two of the Vivaphone singing films, "P.C. Forty-Nine," and "Ha, ha, ha."

At the de Luxe, Camden Street, Mr. Maurice Elliman, the managing director, always has a good programme on view. Last week "Whimsical Threads of Destiny" and "The Diver" held pride of place. Another excellent drama provided by Mr. Elliman took the name of "Staircase of Death."—Messrs. Jameson, at the Rotunda, screened "The Flight of Death," "Double-Crossed" and "Merry Pimple and the Eggs."—Owing to the election for County Councillors and Poor Law Guardians, the Town Hall, Rathmines, has been closed for some few days, but all its numerous patrons are glad to see that it is once again open. The star film was "Fantomas, or the False Magistrate."

Mr. I. I. Bradlaw has been showing at the Princess Cinema, Rathmines, the powerful Pathé exclusive, "In the Grip of a Villain." This superb film was backed up by the Vivaphone singing pictures, and other good films, specially selected by Mr. Cyril Bradlaw, who acts in the capacity of film manager. I learn on good authority that the theatre to be erected in Grafton Street, by Messrs. Karmel and Mr. I. I. Bradlaw will cost in the neighbourhood of £50,000, and that it is to be something unique in the matter of picture theatres. I also learn that Mr. Bradlaw has secured a site in Kingstown, and that building operations will shortly commence so as to have everything in readiness for the winter season.

PROVINCIAL.

As I mentioned in my last notes, Dundalk is certainly a very thriving town, and when I called at the Park Street Picture House recently, I found it packed. The Town Hall—leased by the Dundealgan Picture Theatre Company—is always well patronised. I was sorry to find that Mr. Gormley, the manager, was absent through illness, but I was most courteously received by Mr. Toner, the secretary of the Company. "Spartacus" was a film recently billed here, and proved a veritable house-filler. —The principal film at the Coliseum, in Cork, recently, was "Copper Beeches."—The Palace Theatre, Cork, has started a picture season, and capital houses prevail nightly.—At the Theatre Royal, Limerick, Mr. P. Fogerty had some excellent films for his numerous patrons, and these included "The Coward Hater," "Silas Marner" and "The Hearts of Women."

BELFAST.

The travelling cinema is the latest instrument to be employed by those who are in active opposition to the Home Rule Bill. The Union Defence League has decided to tour Great Britain with three huge motor vans fully equipped with a cinematograph installation. vans are so constructed that the back opens, and a screen can then be dropped, and upon this the operator can show his picture. The films to be screened will include pictures of the Ulster Volunteers at drill, a review by Sir Edward Carson, and a practice of the ambulance brigade with its attendant nurses. In addition to the operator and the chauffeur, each van will carry one or two lecturers, who will comment on the pictures as they are shown.

PARISIAN NOTES.

By JOHN CHER.

Mr. Felix Weingartner, the famous conductor who has been recently directing the orchestra at the Champs Elysees Opera House, was good enough to grant me an interview and talk about the moving pictures which he posed for some time ago in Berlin. As will be remembered, the films created quite a sensation, detailed reports appearing in the world's Press.

"I am perfectly satisfied with the pictures," said Mr. Weingartner, "and I am confident that there is a great future for such films. I am convinced that any orchestra can follow without any difficulty the bâton of the cinema conductor. By means of these pictures orchestras may be conducted by me simultaneously in Paris, London, New York, Vienna, or, in fact, anywhere where a film can be projected. Was I responsible for the idea? Well, no, not as far as the mechanical side was concerned. Yes; I shall in all probability make further pictures for the Berlin company which holds the rights."

In the "Femme Nue" the Cines Company have found another "Quo Vadis?" at least as far as France is concerned. The fame of "Quo Vadis?" has spread to the law courts. The Cines Company has just won a law court action which it brought against M. Louis Aubert, who as readers will remember, was, until the establishment of the Paris Cines office, sole agent for the Italian firm's productions, including, of course, the phenomenal success, "Quo Vadis?" A short time ago the Cines Company announced their intention of renting the film direct. Mons. Aubert continued to do business with the film, and gave notice that he would have seized any copies of the film which had not been rented from him. Two reels were seized; hence the law suit. The Tribunal of Commerce ruled that the Cines Company had proved themselves to be proprietors of the film. The defendant was ordered to pay the sum of £3,000 damages, return the films, and defray the cost of ten announcements in the Trade Press. Notice of appeal has been lodged.

Monsieur Vandal, the amiable director of the Eclair Company, is at present in Sunny (I hope) Spain. He is accompanied by M. Paul Debat, who will take up the position of manager of the firm's Barcelona branch, now being organised.

Monsieur Mary, of the Société Commerciale du Film, is, I understand, now in London with the Suzanne Grandais film, "The Admiral's Daughter."

The management of the Gaumont Palace Hippodrome has hit upon a novel scheme to successfully terminate the present season. In the course of twenty-seven performances which will be given during the period of twenty days visitors to the Palace will have an opportunity of again seeing the most popular productions which have been screened by Messrs. Gaumont during the past two years. The revival season commenced last Friday. Amongst the extraordinary conglomeration of star pictures which will be shown are "L'Agonie de Byzance," "The Voice of Patriotism," "Calvary," and, be it noted, "Quo Vadis?" "Antony and Cleopatra," and the Vitagraph sensation, "Wild Beasts at Large."

The following is the exciting story recently told by M. Sablon, a screen player, in the Cinema, of Paris: "I was playing in Holland with the famous comedian, Bowmester, in the film, 'Burning Gold.' It will be remembered that in this production a fishing boat with one sailor on board was completely burned at sea. Just as the picture was about to be photographed the artiste in question expressed his disinclination to be boiled and then frozen while setting the ship on fire and subsequently plunging into the icy cold sea, it being the month of December. I offered," said M. Sablon, "to play the perilous part. A hundred litres of petrol and fifty litres of tar were poured into the smack. I donned an oilskin coat weighing 12 kilos. Around my body I had wound bands of canvas. At a given signal I applied the lighted torch. Gigantic flames leaped up from this veritable store of combustibles. Nearly choked by the fire and smoke, I ran up and down the deck, a living torch. Then, unable to stand any more, I dived overboard. The water was below freezing point. Half paralysed, I just managed to fight the elements. The rescue boat, after half an hour's manœuvring, which seemed to me many centuries, at last picked me up. It was just in time, for, encumbered by my heavy clothes, I was on the point of sinking. The next day the boat was repaired, and I recommenced the scene. This time the entire village of Vollendam turned out to watch the spectacle. Extraordinary scenes were witnessed on the shore. The women cried. men shook their heads, fishermen predicted that I would leave my skin behind. But, in spite of it all, I survived the ordeal, and twice 'burned' successfully without mishap. But all the same," the intrepid adventurer concluded laconically, "not for a long time shall I forget 'Burning Gold.'"

HAPPENINGS AT HULL.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

One of the "happenings" of chief interest this week in cinematograph circles has been the visit of the Trans-Atlantic Film Company's motor-car, which is engaged on the "Lucille Love" tour. The car, with its large sign, "I am looking for a husband," and a multiplicity of other notices, attracted a great deal of interest in Hull, and public appetite has already been whetted for the film, the "ingredients" of which will combine to make it very acceptable when it is released. The car was at the City Hotel when I came across it, and visits were paid to the principal cinemas and newspaper offices, which were filmed, I understand, along with plenty of local people, a fact which will give the film a topical and local interest. Amongst the Hull halls included in the film will be the Alexandra Theatre, the Magnet, the Princes Hall, and the de Luxe.

Although the weather has had a turn for the better, and is gloriously fine just now, I have not heard any complaints from the exhibitors amongst whom I have been moving recently. There might have been a few slack days, but on the whole, I am repeatedly told, there is nothing to grumble about. One manager, however, confessed that business was "a bit rotten," but this, I am quite satisfied, is not on account of any waning of public interest in the cinema, for the evidence is all on the other side. It is a mistake to think that wherever a cinema is planted it is sure to be a good thing so long as it is such-and-such a distance from any other place of entertainment. There are many other circumstances to take into consideration, and in the case in point the doubts I entertained were shared by others. I mention this case simply because, with the truth of it in my mind, it is only fair to give a view of the other side in writing of the success of the cinemas as a whole. Let us hope, though, that all will go well, and that good management and careful film selection, which I am sure the cinema in question is receiving, will result in all fears being swept away.

To turn to a more pleasant side of the question—and, I might say, the more general one—I should like to refer to the Magnet, West Dock Avenue. The name of the cinema is very appropriate, for it undoubtedly possesses the drawing power of true steel. Mr. Morfit, the manager, with whom I had a conversation this week, tells me that he is contemplating still another enlargement of the hall. Last summer it was entirely remodelled and seated, and the accommodation is still severely taxed.

"How does the new children regulation affect you?" I asked. Mr. Morfit told me this did not trouble him at all, and that he by far preferred to have all the children out at the end of the first house. The Magnet is now running two distinct "houses" a night, and giving four entire changes of programme a week. These are Monday and Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and Saturday. All new release matter is shown, and recent successful screenings have been "Absolom," "A Cruel Revenge," and "A Journalist's Adventure." By this time "Protea II." will have been shown also, so that it cannot be denied that the Magnet is quite up-to-date.

In all probability the Coliseum, Beverley Road, will be closing for a short time for cleaning purposes during the summer. Mr. G. H. Simmonite, the manager of the "Col.," is still the only exhibitor showing six completely different programmes a week in Hull, though there are one or two running very close to this number now. Last week the chief attractions, one for each day, were "Cleek, Detective," Gaumont's "Fantomas, the False Magistrate," "The Devil's Eye," "Officer Jim," "The Mystery of Mr. Marks," and "Love and Vengeance." During the present week six excellent programmes include as the "star" pictures "The Curse of the Ruby," "For the Family Honour," "From the Jaws of Death," "Protea II.," "The Two Roses," and "Shadows."

The two newly opened cinemas, the Strand and the Tower, are going in for the right kind of programmes. This week the Tower management has introduced quite a novel feature in conjunction with the screening of the pictorial version of the well-known poem, "Lasca," by Frank Desprey. Mr. H. G. Myers, the famous Leeds elocutionist, has been engaged to recite the poem on the three last days of the week. At the Strand the principal feature has been "The Brass Bottle," the new pictorial version of the well-known and evergreen play from Mr. F. Anstey's novel. "The Great Bullion Robbery" is another attraction at the Strand.

HEPWORTH.

— The Girl Who Lived in Straight Street.—The heroine, a chorous girl, proves a true friend and saves her young neighbour from starvation while her husband is in prison, and later, from a worse fate. One of the revellers at a supper is found to be her brother-in-law, and the harsh parents are quickly made to realise their error. A joyful little group awaits the prisoner upon his release. (June 29th. 1,850 ft.)

Over the Garden Wall.—Enraged at a surreptitious meeting, Papa swears vengeance. He is cleverly outwitted by the young man, who leaves him suspended upon his favourite swing while a hasty elopement is in progress. (July 2nd. 1,000 ft.)

A. E. HÜBSCH & CO., LTD.

Mr. Blunderbore.—In love with a dancer, Harry finds himself threatened with disinheritance. He is banished to a sanatorium but sends a substitute and is enabled to discover his uncle engaged in flirtation with the actress. He quickly seizes his advantage and all objections are soon over-ruled. (July 2nd. 2,319 ft.)

SASCHA.

The Shadow of a Crime.—Enraged at the actions of his young employer towards a charming daughter, the engineer lures the man into the boiler house and leaves him securely tied in front of a furnace. The frenzied man's return home causes the girl to effect a brave rescue and the employer is forced to recognise her nobility in a fitting manner. (June 29th. 1,965 ft.)

A Trip on the Albula Railway.—A run along the mountain sides of a picturesque corner of Switzerland. (June 29th. 277 ft.)

LONDON FILM CO., LTD.

Child o' My Heart.—An elopement proves a cruel blow to the old cottager, and the tales of village gossips add fuel to the fire. The old fellow is driven to concocting lies for the sake of the girl, but all comes out happily when the father of her weathy lover intervenes and the cottager's fables are soon invested with the glamour of irresistible facts. (June 29th. 1,920 ft.)

LUBIN.

Lust for Power.—Two-reel political drama with a strong scene where Ryder, a disgraced workman, is found in the house of the Mayor. The latter forgives him his attempted theft and is repaid by the man's intervention during a cowardly attempt upon the successful man's life. Ryder's career is closed by the bullet of the assassin. (June 29th. 2,059 ft.)

Lord Algy.—Many comical scenes are noted in a first-rate two-reel comedy. Algy, through a thoughtless cablegram, goes to work in order to live. He proves himself a true hero in time of danger, even though his method of dealing with a bomb is somewhat unconventional. (June 29th. 2,064 ft.)

The Eyes Have It.—Casey, the "cop," is caught drinking, and blacks the Super's eye. Pat gets one himself, but Mrs. Casey blacks the eyes of many others and saves her hubby from detection. (June 29th. 284 ft.)

A Man's Faith.—Wedded to a deeply religious man, Mary soon finds her nature rebel against his seeming indifference. A friendly minister seeks to reconcile the couple and is horrified when the girl wife essays a flirtation. A tragedy at the hands of a jealous husband nearly ends his career, but tact and wisdom quickly effect a reconciliation. (July 2nd. 1,032 ft.)

The Bully's Doom.—Deadly rivalry exists between Mugsy and Pug, the bully, for the belle of the Alley. Mugsy, by purchasing a quantity of "electric snuff" is enabled to catch Pug napping and gives him a licking while under the influence of the powder. (July 2nd. 353 ft.)

In Fate's Cycle.—Inflamed by hatred, caused through a wrongful conviction, the man seeks the life of the judge. A child prevents the crime and enables the judge to establish the man's innocence. (June 29th. 1,033 ft.)

Almost an Outrage.—The pastor finds it difficult to make both ends meet and is compelled to use donations in order to please his rich aunt, arrived upon a visit. However, despite a little trouble with her darling Fido, all eventually ends right. (June 29th. 629 ft.)

A Victim of Circumstances.—A comedy of complications and furious jealousy, aroused by the surreptitious procuration of a birthday gift. (June 29th. 414 ft.)

The Father's Scapegoat.—Caught, the father blames his son for the crime. The result is that the lad is spurred on to success in life and is rewarded by the return of his good name. (July 2nd. 1,030 ft.)

Maniacs Three.—The amorous fellows find themselves confronted by a madman and promptly go for the police. Their surprise, on returning and being confronted by a hefty husband, is extremely ludicrous. (July 2nd. 444 ft.)

A Message from the Moon.—An old astronomer is neatly fooled by his daughter's lover, who lets off fireworks before his telescope. A lecture upon the "phenomena" is followed by threats of exposure, and a hurried wedding. (July 2nd. 429 ft.)

H. and B.

Famous Cathedrals of England.—Some very famous examples are seen in Canterbury, St. Albans, Winchester, etc., of unfading architectural glories. (June 29th. 369 ft.)

Famous Castles of England.—Glimpses of the noble piles at Carisbrooke, Arundel, Pevensey, Lewes, etc. A worthy successor to the above film. (July 2nd. 454 ft.)

KALEM.

The Nurse and the Counterfeiter.—Betty discovers a noted criminal among the patients in the ward. She aids in tracking down the gang and the nest is finally raided amidst exciting scenes. (June 29th. 1 014 ft.)

A Secret Crime.—Maynard discovers his wife's failing, kleptomania, and takes her into the country. Here temptation is once more put in her way but her child, copying verses from the Bible, helps the woman to overcome her weakness. (July 2nd. 1,071 ft.)

NEW AGENCY FILM CO.

AMBROSIO.

A Railroad Experience.—Unaware that Gigetta is accompanied by a sulking husband, Rodolfi engages the lady in converse and takes her to the luncheon counter. Hubby suddenly asserts himself and the would-be lover escapes to an uncomfortable "third-class," ending a long journey alone. (June 29th. 962 ft.)

Valencia.—A visit to a fascinating and fertile region in Spain. (June 29th. 355 ft.)

Tweedledum, a Short-sighted Chauffeur.—His adventures, with such objects as a steam-roller, a well-stocked café, some steps and a deep pond, are of a somewhat truculent character. (July 2nd. 570 ft.)

CENTAURO.

A Doctor's Romance.—Elaborately staged story of war, with some big battle scenes and heroism on the part of the nurse and her lover, the doctor. (July 2nd. 1,240 ft.)

NEW MAJESTIC FILM CO.

APOLLO.

A Black Hand Conspiracy.—Burlesque detective tale with Fred Mace as the mighty hero. Bombs, spies and picturesque attire aid the comical portrayal of an elaborate plot. (June 29th. 999 ft.)

MAJESTIC.

The Orange Bandit.—Mary aids a motorist to escape the wrath of her father, who highly prizes his fruit. The sequel, an elopement, is cleverly planned and the rancher is very neatly tricked by an exchange of auto numbers. (June 29th. 986 ft.)

Just a Song at Twilight.—Two forlorn little waifs set out to bring luck to their sister from the city, a sorrowing grand-dad being the cause of the resolve. The old melody proves the means of a reunion in the course of a charmingly told romance. (June 29th. 1,000 ft.)

Molly and the Oil King.—In order to save her father from ruin, the girl gets a post in his competitor's office. She is caught stealing papers and dismissed, but Bradford, her employer, relents of his own nefarious plans and ultimately wins the girl and her father's gratitude. (July 2nd. 1,010 ft.)

RELIANCE.

The Hidden Clue. — Thieves being heard at the doors, the diamond cutter hides the stones before he is shot down. A cypher message proves the means of elucidating an apparently insoluble mystery. (June 2nd. 969 ft.)

Too Proud to Beg.—Drama of wrongful arrest, a former employee, now destitute, being the victim. Too proud to confess the reason of his loitering, he is about to suffer punishment when a kindly neighbour testifies. The real thief is caught and the old clerk reinstated. (July 2nd. 975 ft.)

Pat Flannagan's Family.—The delivery man has saved enough to take him back to the Emerald Isle but solicitude for the welfare of a drunkard's children causes him to give the man his boat ticket and once more set to work in order to provide for the little ones. (July 2nd. 993 ft.

NORDISK FILM CO.

My Friend, "Lumpy Levy."—This gentleman is an obese journalist, who proves a friend in need to a colleague in love. Levy's various schemes to harass the obdurate father provide a succession of very farcical events. (June 29th. 2,532 ft.)

Waterfalls in Tisfandel.—Seen from various points of vantage, the finely portrayed pictures combine to make an ceptional scenic. (June 29th. 325 ft.)

PASQUALI FILM CO.

Polidor's Quarrels.—The noise caused by matrimonial differences offends the neighbours and the couple decide to carry on their quarrel by correspondence. A series of unforeseen events takes place and they quickly decide to bury the hatchet. (June 29th. 550 ft.)

The Blue Heart.—Pathetic drama of the struggles of an infant prodigy, the leading part being enacted of Tominio Giolino, the remarkable child-actor. His vicissitudes are only ended after a series of stirring adventures, the kidnapper proving to be his long-forgotten parent. (July 2nd. 3,000 ft.)

PATHÉ FRÈRES.

A.K.

The Hunger of the Heart.—Neglected by her husband, pretty Mrs. Stoddart becomes infatuated by a blackmailer. The wife of the sheriff proves instrumental in exposing the man, but only after a robbery, planned to compromise the woman's good name. (June 21st. 1,000 ft.)

Harnessed Falls of N.W. America.—The various sources of electric power for the towns of Seattle, Everett and Tacoma, are shown in an interesting manner. (June 21st. 225 ft.)

The Second Shot.—Dramatic episodes mark a deadly feud between the estate owner and a Mexican doctor. The wife of the former falls ill, and the doctor bravely attends to her. His action puts an end to all thoughts of enmity. (June 25th. 1,000 ft.)

An Easy Victory.—Forced to prove himself worthy of the girl he loves, George seeks employment. His arrest of two evil-doers adds the seal of valour to his achievements as a cinema actor. (June 25th. 1,025 ft.)

CHICAGO.

Cowboy Clarence.—Arriving out West, Clarence soon falls into the ways of the natives. He "shoots up" the saloon and is tricked into believing that he has killed a man. He seeks refuge in the "victim's" home and turns the tables by capturing the heart of his daughter. (June 21st. 1,025 ft.)

The Verdict of the Jury.—Emotional drama with a fine defence of an accused woman by the lawyer who at first believed the prisoner to have been his son's murderess. Her acquittal ends a strong play. (June 21st. 900 ft.)

COMICA.

The Suitor and the Parachute.—Once more violently in love, Bigorno consents, in order to please the fair one, to test a new parachute. His training with a hefty gamp and subsequent grand glissade will prove very diverting. (June 25th. 675 ft.)

IMPERIUM.

Athletic Exercises in the French Army.—Some splendid gymnastic work is shown and training in feats of strength. (June 21st. 525 ft.)

ECLECTIC.

Wanted, an Ugly Wife.—Acting upon the conditions of his uncle's will, Caza seeks the ugliest girl in the world. He meets a real charmer who is upon a similar errand, and after some comical happenings, a "sorting out" of couples upsets all previous arrangements. (June 25th. 675 ft.)

PATHECOLOR.

A King in Name Alone.—Sumptuously produced feature of revolutionary days in an imaginary kingdom, secret intrigue and counter-plot, woven around a charming love story. A powerful finale is seen where the conspirators wait for a man who has been snared to his doom by a vengeful woman. (June 21st. 3,775 ft.)

PATHE.

Wiffles in Trouble Again.—As the result of his endeavours to propitiate a faithless fair one, Wiffles becomes involved in a curious scene in a café, whither he has taken his wife. His employer's presence in the company of the jade but adds to the complications. (June 21st. 1,025 ft.)

Jim at School.—Adventures of a love-lorn loon who invades the sanctuary of a seminary and sets a veritable hornet's nest about his auriculars. (June 21st. 550 ft.)

S.C.A.G.L.

With the Eyes of Love.—The love of a composer for a fair operatic artiste is unavailing to prevent her marriage to another. Subsequently deserted, she is helped to success by the composer. A brave rescue from a theatre fire ends in her facial disfigurement, and in the after years, when she learns that the composer has lost his eyesight, she comes to his aid, when the title of the play is fully justified. (June 25th. 2,375 ft.)

The Accomplice.—Forced by her lover, a gambler, to gain the secret of the banker's private safe, the dancer gets the combination, but is unable to warn the man of a death-dealing attachment. Her efforts to prevent a tragedy, meanwhile amusing her host with a dance, provide a fine crucial episode. (June 25th. 800 ft.)

SCIENCE AND NATURE.

The Birth of Plants.—The evolution of that lovely flower, the sweet pea, is shown within a brief space of time, and forms a fine object lesson in botany. (June 25th. 425 ft.)

before a charming background, the sister Services also contributing their quota to the narrative. (July 2nd. 955 ft.)

In Amalfi.—One of the most wondrous of fair Italia's beauty spots. (July 2nd. 238 ft.)

G. SERRA.

CELIO.

The Little Match-seller.—Laura, a neglected wife, has two little boys, who make friends with the little gutter merchant. When mother falls ill and is left destitute the youngsters sell in the streets and prove the means of her being rediscovered by anxious parents. Their little friend soon finds a new home. (July 3rd. 1,325 ft.)

CINES.

The Lighthouse Keepers.—The success of his rival in love, the deciding factor being a swimming match, causes the rejected one to attempt murder. The extinguishing of the light ends in a shipwreck, but the villain is finally denounced and casts himself over the cliffs, while the young keeper recovers. (June 28th. 2,100 ft.)

The River Amien and its Falls.—Beautiful scenes on the Tivoli, showing also the source of the power which drives the turbines for the electric lighting of Rome. (June 28th. 260 ft.)

Bloomer, Police Inspector.—With the aid of Stout he sets up a bogus station and reaps a rich harvest in largesse until an over-zealous interest in a real burglar lands them into "other," and not too gentle, hands. (June 28th. 584 ft.)

THANHOUSER.

The Eugenic Boy.—Theorised training proves extremely distasteful to the youngster, and while the nurse is engaged with the policeman he vanishes with other prime youths. His subsequent arrival home, dirty but happy, soon causes father to take a hand in his upbringing. (June 29th. 1,000 ft.)

A Leak in the Foreign Office.—The first of a series of diplomatic adventures, the story being that of the tapping of a wireless station in order to obtain valuable information. The female accomplice and her employer, the spy, soon find others upon their track. The plot is well worked out and exciting. (July 2nd. 1,991 ft.)

PRINCESS.

The Hold-up.—Romantic to a degree, Muriel consents to an elopement with her music-master. A falked hold-up, organised by her friends, soon convinces her of the error of her ways and she plumps for a common-place lover. (June 29th. 1,011 ft.)

TRANS-ATLANTIC FILM CO.

CRYSTAL.

Some Pull.—Ethel's admirers endeavour to aid her gouty father upstairs. They finally have to use a rope, with some unexpected results. (June 29th. 500 ft.)

A Strange Bird.—The victim of mistaken identity is tarred and feathered. His uncouth appearance gives numerous "starts" to unsuspecting pedestrians, while a farmer with a gun adds to the melée. (July 2nd. 507 ft.)

FRONTIER.

Pretzel Captures the Smugglers.—The Customs men prove unavailing against the brandy runners and Pretzel is himself captured. A lucky accident enables him to escape and to secure a punishment for the entire band. (June 29th. 986 ft.)

GOLD SEAL.

By Radium's Rays.—Grief at her husband's sentence drives a young wife insane. His brother loves her and takes the chance afforded by an operation to make a great sacrifice, which restores her reason. (June 29th. 1,959 ft.)

A Film Johnnie.	KEYSTONE. Chas. Chaplin falls in love with a film beauty, creates a commotion, in a cinema, goes to the Keystone studio, and gets a job.	1020 ft.	Mon., July 13th.	Another triumph for the old Karno comedian. Knockabout of an extraordinary character. An extra special comedy. Must have it.
North of 53°.	KAY-BEE. A story of the grim "North West" giving a vivid picture of the life of the trappers and half-breeds of this outpost of the Empire.	2108 ft.	Thurs., July 16th.	Out of the ordinary plot, good acting and very dramatic. Worth a special recommendation.
His Favourite Pastime.	KEYSTONE. His hobby is drinking cocktails, and the results are side-splitting. The business with the hat and the fight with the swing door are delicious pieces of comedy.	1000 ft.	Mon., July 20th.	Another "Chaplin," and as good as all the rest. A "full marks" comedy.

The Play's The Thing.	DOMINO. A story of the world behind the scene, and of a mimic tragedy which becomes a real one.	2068 ft.	Mon., July 20th.	This has a strikingly novel plot, and the staging is wonderful. Worth special featuring and special advertising.
Desert Gold.	KAY-BEE. The search for gold in the desert, privations by heat and thirst, and attractive love episodes.	1998 ft.	Mon., July 27th.	Typical of a highly popular class of "K.B." releases; vivid and convincing.
Wild Man from Borneo.	Komic	438 ft.	Thurs., July 16th.	Short and snappy laughter-makers, ideal for relieving a heavy programme and welcome everywhere.

THE IDEAL

SUMMER . . FILMS

"KEYSTONE NIGHTS"

Are THE Features for the Summer Months.

Read the following from the

"BOLTON EVENING NEWS."

QUEEN'S PICTURE HALL.—Every patron of this popular place of amusement knows what a Keystone comedy is. This Company produce the most laughable films imaginable. The theatre was packed to overflowing on Wednesday, in fact, many were unable to gain admission. The occasion was a Keystone Night—every film was a Keystone. Never has there been such hilarity in the building. All the films were real screamers. The whole night proved very enjoyable and the innovation was, indeed, a successful one.

MANY OTHER THEATRES ARE FEATURING "KEYSTONE NIGHTS."

Why not give one a Trial?

Write us for details.

The Rural Demon

One of Mack Sennett's funniest comedies, in which "Fatty" figures, and in which a bomb explosion and a damp conclusion are important features.

Released Monday, July 27th.
Approx. length, 1,020 ft.

Across the Hall

They lived in the same house and fell in love with each other's wife. A mistaken door leads to complicated and comic results.

Some Press Opinions:

KINE. WEEKLY.

"We have seen seven Chaplin releases, and every one has been a triumph for the one-time hero of 'Mumming Birds,' who has leapt into the front rank of film comedians at a bound."

THE CINEMA.

"KID AUTO RACES" struck us as about the funniest film we have seen. When we subsequently saw Chaplin our opinion that the Keystone Company had made the capture of their career was strengthened. Chaplin is a born screen comedian; he does things we have never seen done on the screen before."

EXHIBITOR'S MAIL.

"The Keystone Company never made a better contract than when they signed on Chas. Chaplin. It is not every variety artiste who possesses the ability to act for the camera. Chaplin not only shows that talent; he shows it in a degree which raises him at once to the status of a star performer."

IMP.

Topical Topics.—Harry Mayer's facile pen again provides exquisite satire upon men and matters. (July 2nd. 465 ft.)

The Flaming Diagram.—Ingenious story of a valuable formula which the inventor left concealed in some papers. Spies fail to extract the secret and only accident reveals it, the inventor's son dropping cigarette ash, which burns the lines of a weird and priceless diagram upon a hitherto blank sheet. (July 2nd. 1,978 ft.)

NESTOR.

What a Baby Did.—Fascinated by a fair damsel, Eddie undertakes to mind the child. Her prolonged absence causes him great anxiety, and he finally places the kiddie in a general store nursery. A wild scramble ends the farce. (June 29th. 992 ft.)

The Mexican's Last Raid.—An objection to the miner as a suitor for his daughter's hand is quickly forgotten when the storekeeper is attacked by bandits. Later, the girl is kidnapped and the miner once more displays his heroism by a brave rescue. (June 29th. 994 ft.)

The Voice of the Viola.—Enraptured by the musician, the girl still loves him when she is stricken by blindness. The man tires of her but his brother impersonates him, and when an operation restores her sight, is rewarded by the love and devotion of the girl. (July 2nd. 1,007 ft.)

POWERS.

The Tale of a Dog.—An original conception in which the canine relates his own adventures, the desertion by his new mistress of a loving master, the death of the baby, and of a reconciliation between two old friends. (June 29th. 685 ft.)

JOKER.

Some Boy.—Bob is a veritable imp of mischief, his talents running in the direction or misdirection of glue, paraffin and other objectionable substances. (July 2nd. 982 ft.)

A Mexico Mix.—Shirta and Tarara, the opposition generals, wage furious battle until one side runs short of missiles. The fair Juanita, with the adventitious aid of the immortal Tango, saves the situation and, incidentally, Shirta, her lover. (July 2nd. 500 ft.)

REX.

An Old Locket.—Emotional romance of the American Civil War. At the end the girl gives her life for the sake of the man she loves. In later years the discovery of the locket revives the memories of a tragic past. (June 29th. 800 ft.)

A Modern Fairy Tale.—A stern parent desires a wealthier suitor for his daughter's hand. A prince arrives on the scene, and after many adventures, proves to be the formerly despised country swain. A happy ending is soon assured. (July 2nd. 930 ft.)

VICTOR.

Hearts and Flowers.—Amusing herself by flirtations with the handsome gardener, the girl suddenly finds herself upbraided in a manly way. Her fiancé overhears the scene and, as a result, she is left to seek consolation alone with the flowers of the garden. (June 29th. 988 ft.)

UNIVERSAL FILM CO., LTD.

MOTOGRAPH.

Four World's Champions at Cricket.—A practical object lesson in the great national sport. Reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of June 4, on p. 1,087. (June 29th. 526 ft.)

Scenes in the Black Forest.—This charming region in South-Western Germany is seen to be one which well repays a visit and furnishes some really picturesque vistas. (July 2nd. 384 ft.)

SCIENTIFIC.

Commercial Uses of Electricity.—Deeply interesting and most entertaining, forming a real pictorial lesson. Reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of June 4, on p. 1,085. (July 2nd. 518 ft.)

URBANORA.

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

The Mystery of Green Park.—Adapted from the famous novel of Arnold Galopin, this story forms another strong instalment of the Barnet-Parker series. The line of deduction followed is exceptionally ingenious and clearly depicted, leading to a brisk finale. (June 29th. 1,770 ft.)

The Volcanoes of Java.—Enthralling views of the craters in actual eruption. Unique effects are seen, especially at the Smeroe, a 12,000 ft. peak. (July 2nd. 410 ft.)

Peter's Evil Spirit.—The second of a new series of trick films. Peter, in consequence of his rough treatment of a tramp, has a terrible time, even the furniture taking a derisive delight in his discomfiture. (July 2nd. 500 ft.)

VITAGRAPH.

The Mischief-Maker.—After his marriage the rejected girl sets to work to poison the husband's mind against her successful rival. A touching emotional drama, with a lesson to husband, who soon begs forgiveness. (June 29th. 1,909 ft.)

Art for a Heart.—For the sake of a charming girl, herself an artist, Cutey hires a studio. He is at a loss until the Futurist craze gives him an idea. His crazy conception gains him an admiringly puzzled following and a bride. (June 29th. 997 ft.)

Ginger's Reign.—Thirsting for revenge, the little dancer sets about the ruin of her one-time lover, but reckons without the softening influence of the baby at his home. With different feelings she organises a benefit at the saloon and raises a goodly sum for the benefit of the child and its suffering father. (June 29th. 990 ft.)

Tainted Money.—After having closed his works rather than accede to the demands of his employees, Bennett is forced by David to witness the sum of destitution resulting from his action. He silently sets to work, using David as a medium, and ultimately restores peace and happiness to the community. (July 2nd. 1,954 ft.)

Mrs. Maloney's Fortune.—The humble washerwoman suddenly becomes possessed of a fortune, leaves her admirer, Mike, and proceeds about entering society. She soon, however, finds "high life" little to her liking and returns to the old home and to Mike. (July 2nd. 1,000 ft.)

The Way to Heaven. Through the unwitting murder of her mother by a drunken husband, little Bessie is thrust among strangers. The leader of a gang of thieves prevents the robbery of a simple gold cross from the child and takes her to a convent, where he collapses before the shrine with a prayer for the child's future. (July 2nd. 1,003 ft.)

WESTERN IMPORT CO.

KEYSTONE.

Fatty Joins the Force.—As a reward for saving the chief's daughter from drowning, Fatty is made a constable. His subsequent adventures while bathing, at the hands of vengeful youths, are of a very lively character. (June 29th. 1,020 ft.)

Robust Romeo.—Secretly loving his neighbour's wife, Fatty concludes that he will disappear to a mountain hotel. Unfortunately, the husband and wife turn up at the same resort, and poor Fatty comes in for a rude reception. (July 2nd. 1,020 ft.)

Kid's Auto Races.—Some sensational happenings are witnessed during contests between the baby cars, while the funny man persistently obstructs the eager camera men in their operations. (July 2nd. 572 ft.)

KOMIC.

Sleepy Head.—George impresses upon his landlady the necessity of his rising at 8.30. After many attempts, he is at last leaving the house via the window, when he lands on top of his employer. Overjoyed at the non-delivery of the package, the boss gives George a week's holiday and full permission to sleep all the time. (June 29th. 378 ft.)

Every film carefully examined and sent in fine running condition. All feature films in above parcels are leading subjects. We only buy the best. No junk. A good supply of posters included. The above prices are NET CASH WITH ORDER, carriage forward. Shipping orders despatched by quickest mail. When goods are urgently required, Foreign and Colonial Buyers can arrange to cable cash direct to us or through their local bankers' London Agents, who will pay us against shipping documents or postal receipts.

VERY IMPORTANT.

There can be no keener disappointment for Colonials and others thousands of miles away to receive films which are absolutely useless to them, owing to their condition.

By placing your orders with unknown and newly-established so-called Exporters you seek trouble, worry and failure.

After many years' experience, we know what you require, hence our phenomenal success.

We give honest value for lowest cash prices, and do not advertise or promise goods we cannot deliver.

Our established reputation speaks for itself. We guarantee satisfaction.

Small or large orders are carried out with a personal conscientious interest in endeavouring to meet your requirements.

THE PICK OF THE PROGRAMMES.

WHAT WE THINK OF THEM.

The Nightriders of Petersham.

A vivid and realistic picture of life in a small Western town, with a story of thrilling adventure and the mystery of a life of double dealing is shown in this fine three-reel drama. Richard Coke arrives at Petersham to take over an inheritance from his uncle, who holds it in trust. He makes the acquaintance of the family of John Burnay, the editor of the local paper, through a slight accident which introduces him to the daughter, Emily. Burnay has incurred the animosity of the nightriders through his outspoken comments on an illicit traffic in spirits in which many of the leading townspeople are thought to be implicated. Richard Coke takes the editor's side, and is somewhat surprised to find that his uncle, one of the most influential citizens, strongly disapproves of the attitude he adopts. After repeated warnings, which the editor sets at defiance, the nightriders make an attack on the newspaper office and attempt to set fire to it, but with the assistance of Coke and the blacksmith, who has brought a party of friends, the attacking party is driven off after a desperate fight in which several of the ringleaders are severely injured. On reaching home Richard hastens to inform his uncle of the result, and is horrified to find him, in the disguise of the nightriders, lying mortally injured from wounds received during the fight He also finds convincing proof that his uncle has endeavoured to cheat him out of his inheritance, a suspicion which is confirmed by a full confession from the dying man.

It is a fine story of wild adventure, magnificently mounted and played by a company which fully appreciates and emphasises its dramatic qualities. An attempt by the elder Coke to rob his nephew which is frustrated by the younger man's alertness is an exciting episode, and the rescue of young Elmer Burnay from the hands of the nightriders provides another scene of tense excitement.

Cinemazoo.

The series of moving pictures which are the result of Mr. Noel Macklin's recent hunting expedition in the Soudan, and which were presented to the public at the London Opera House on Monday evening, are in many respects the most interesting of the many big game pictures yet recorded by the cinematograph. The expedition, which entailed a very great expense, shows the result of some very interesting and novel experiments, for Mr. Macklin took out two packs of English foxhounds, as well as some weird and wonderful decoy animals which were manufactured by a well-known maker of theatrical properties, for the purpose of imposing upon the denizens of an African jungle. Though neither of these experiments met with the success anticipated, some very interesting pictures are the result. The hounds are seen in pursuit of a hyæna, a chase for which they show little enthusiasm, their dignity being outraged by the quarry's unconventional method of turning and biting its pursuers when too closely pressed. The fact that the beast had ultimately to be dispatched with a gun seems to have convinced the hounds that hunting in the Soudan is an undignified and degenerate sport, and they took no further interest in the proceedings.

A property giraffe and a pasteboard ostrich, with heads that would do credit to Drury Lane, failed to deceive their own species, and excited fear rather than curiosity, but they make a brave show on the screen and add greatly to the interest and humour of life in camp.

Some remarkable pictures have been secured of crocodile and hippopotamus shooting, and there are some wonderful views of a herd of elephants. The difficulties of taking effective pictures must be greatly enhanced by the wonderful way in which the animals merge themselves in their surroundings, and the success of Mr. Macklin and his camera-man is a remarkable testimony to their daring and patience.

The vast variety of bird and animal life and the extremely interesting scenes in camp and on the march, which are explained and commented on by a concise and instructive lecture, provide a series of pictures which should give entertainment at the London Opera House for some considerable time.

The Vision in the Window.

Mr. Mark Swan's inventive genius shows no sign of abatement in the latest adventure of Mr. Wood B. Wedd, and "The Vision in the Window," the fourth of this excellent series, is in every respect the best yet. Mr. Wedd has hitherto been the central figure of many amorous adventures, but his susceptible heart has never been so influenced as by the beautiful vision which appears at the upper window of a large department store. Tremendous execution is done by this fair creature, for it is not only Mr. Wedd whose peace of mind is disturbed by her charms, and not only the store proprietors, but a large percentage of the lady customers are set by the ears on her account. It is not till Mr. Wedd and his colleague, Darby Jenks, have gone through a truly strenuous day that they discover the object of their attentions to be a lay figure placed for the display of a hat and costume of more than usual attractions. Mr. Wedd makes passionate appeal to everybody who tries on the costume, and the result is a brilliant farce with many very amusing complications. Mr. Wadsworth in his original part has to share the acting honours on this occasion with Mr. Arthur Housman, whose quaint and peculiar personality has full play as the egregious Darby Jenks, while Miss Alice Washburn contributes a clever piece of character as the last customer to don the mantle of the fair vision and complete the discomfiture of the mercurial lover.

The whole is admirable farce, and, as in the case of other serial plays by the Edison Company, adds considerably to the reputation achieved by its earlier numbers. (Thomas A. Edison, Limited. Released July 30th. Length 1,074 ft.)

Bernardo's Confession.

This is a costume melodrama, luridly tragic and somewhat exaggerated where its characterisation is concerned. Mr. Bransby Williams, who appears in the title rôle, is less successful as a conventional hero of romance than in character parts, and, although he has a brief opportunity at the beginning and end of the film to give a very clever study of an aged man, he plays an ordinary "juvenile lead" throughout the greater part of the action.

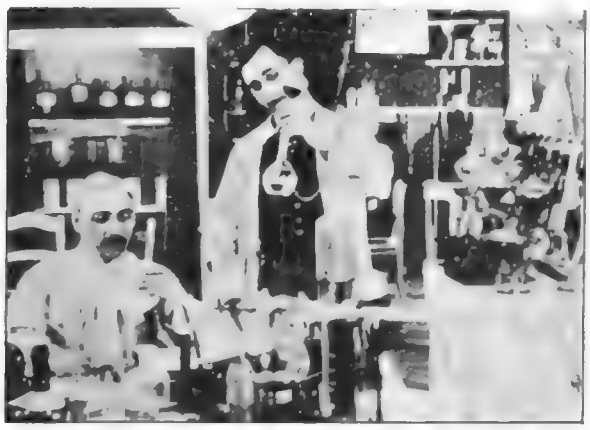
So far as the plot is concerned, the film sets forth a gloomy tale of passion, infidelity and revenge—the visualised "confession" of a dying nobleman, whose tragic history is materialised as he relates it to a priest. Apart from Mr. Williams' work, the acting throughout is capable in a straightforward fashion, perhaps the best individual performance being given by Mr. Sidney Kearns. The staging is a trifle crude at times, but sufficiently good for its purpose. The photography is excellent, the soft brown tint favoured throughout being particularly pleasing to the eye. (Planet film.)

A Fiancée in Marble.

This pleasant and amusing Dutch comedy is well conceived, suitably staged and excellently acted. Its plot tells the rather familiar story of how a pretty girl, in love with a young and impecunious sculptor, takes the place of a bust which he has made for her, but which he has been compelled to pawn, on the occasion of a visit from a wealthy client. The client, who is also a suitor for the hand of the heroine, being favoured by her mother on account of his wealth, greatly admires the supposed work of art and purchases it, thereby replenishing the sculptor's pocket sufficiently to enable him to satisfy his prospective mother-in-law's financial demands. The situation suggested by the counterfeited marble bust is not made quite so much of, nor carried quite so far as would have been possible, but otherwise every ounce of fun is extracted from the story by a company of clever comedians. "A Financée in Marble" is quite an acceptable production. (Hollandia film. R. Prieur and Co., Limited. Released July 23rd. Length 1,110 ft.)

The Unseen Witness.

This novel film certainly justifies to the full its official description as "a drama of science, mystery and passion." It is a scientific problem play with a "strong love interest," the plot of which depends mainly upon the mystery of the death of a woman, who is apparently murdered by the hero, but who is subsequently shown to have been killed accidentally by mechanical means. It is quite an ingenious story, and one of its chief merits lies in the fact that the problem it raises is left unsolved until the end, the curiosity of the audience thus being maintained at a high pitch throughout. At times, perhaps, it imposes rather an undue strain upon one's imagination, but it is all very plausibly presented, and on the whole carries conviction.



The most notable features of the film

are the very great beauty of its photography, and its lighting and photographic effects. The photographic side of the production was evidently in the hands of a talented artiste, who has, with infinite skill, rendered almost every scene striking and delightful, from a pictorial point of view. The staging, also, is distinguished by its lavishness, and the immense care for detail obviously bestowed upon it. One or two of the scenes are mounted with almost an excess of ornamentation, with the result that the background tends at moments to become of more importance than the figures which move against it, but if this is a fault, it is a fault on the right side. There are some very cleverly arranged magnified views, illustrating the manufacture of artificial diamonds, and an equally effective dark-room scene, showing the development of a photographic plate.

The film is acted in a straightforward manner, and, although no individual performance seems to call for special comment, everyone does well The action is inclined to be a trifle slow at times, but the film is never dull, owing largely to the excellence of its setting and photography, upon which we have already remarked. Those who want an interesting drama with an unusual plot will find "The Unseen Witness" an eminently satisfactory production. (Grosvenor Exclusives, Limited. Three reels.)

The Atonement.

This is a magnificently acted "dramatic incident" showing those wonderfully forceful and natural artistes, the Essanay Western players, at their very best. The plot is of the slightest. It deals with a girl's theft from her father, a newly-created sheriff, of some money entrusted to his care by a traveller. No sooner does she realise the consequences of her act than she repents and confesses, and the incident is closed to everybody's satisfaction. It is not so much the story, however, but rather the remarkably vivid acting of Miss Reina Valdez, as the tempted, conscience-stricken girl, and of Mr. Carl Stockdale as the simple, honest sheriff, which makes this quite a notable little production. It is a real "slice of life," true, natural and strong in its presentation, and there are few who will be able to resist its immediate irresistible appeal. It is seldom one can say of a film that it contains not a shade of exaggeration anywhere, but this may honestly be stated of "The Atonement." No better acted film of the kind has been seen than this little drama of human fallibility, set against a familiar, but always charming, prairie village background, and it should certainly be widely booked. (Essanay film. Released July 27th. Length 981 ft.)

French Leave.

That delightful humorist, Bill, was one of the first to popularise the film "comic" in the early days of cinematography, and, now that he has made a welcome return to pictures, his art still retains its ancient irresstible gaiety and charm. He is, indeed, one of the very best comedians who have ever appeared on the screen, and his inexhaustible vitality, his acrobatic vigour and his irrepressible jollity have endeared him to all who have seen him. One is glad to note, moreover, that Messrs. Prieur are reissuing one or two of his earlier comic gems. No better films of the kind have been made, and they are always well worth seeing again. "French Leave" is a thoroughly representative Bill "comic," and the doings therein of this electrically energetic comedian are wonderful to witness. It is a picture which would lend brightness and humour to any programme. (R. Prieur and Co., Limited. Released July 20th. Length 430 ft.)

Grimaldi.

Although disappointing as a life of the famous Grimaldi, who is represented for some reason as a Shakespearian actor, and not at all as a clown, this romantic melodrama has numerous points of interest, and is by no means without originality. Its plot is concerned less with the story of Grimaldi (except for the strange and somewhat irrelevant prologue) than with the love story of a young actress, Violet, whom he is supposed to adopt in his penniless old age. We are shown Violet's first triumph in a curiously modern-looking theatre, and then her escape from the clutches of an aristocratic villain, who attempts to abduct her. Finally, we are given to understand that she becomes bethrothed to a young lord, whose suit, at first regarded with suspicion by her guardian, Grimaldi, is eventually viewed by the latter with favour.

The play is capably acted, particularly by Mr. Bransby Williams, who appears in the title-rôle, and incidentally gives some brief but effective Shakespearian character studies. The staging is marked by one or two anachronisms.

but is otherwise satisfactory. And the photography is good. Although not without its faults, "Grimaldi" makes an interesting and unusual entertainment, and is quite worth seeing. (Planet film. In two parts.)

The Street Watchman.

The chief merit of this amusing picture is the opportunity it affords Mr. Bransby Williams to do some clever comedy character work as a street watchman who dreams that he has entered "Society." His antics at table and in the drawing-room of a fashionable house are productive of much merriment, although their humour is upon somewhat broad lines, and those who enjoy really good low comedy will find much to divert them in this jolly farcical absurdity. The film does not allow Mr. Williams to display the whole of his talent by any means, but it reveals a rather unexpected side thereof and is an excellent example of his versatility. (Planet film.)

The Seven Ages of Man.

This excellent and most effective picture, which is, on the whole, quite the best of the four Bransby Williams films presented to us by the Planet Company, constitutes an ideal vehicle for the introduction to picture theatre audiences of this clever and popular actor's art.

Mr. Williams is well known as a master of theatrical "make-up," and his representations of seven widely different characters in this modernised interpretation of Shakespeare's famous lines provide as striking a proof of his genius in this direction, and his extraordinary versatility as could well be conceived.

As will be understood, the film is simply a series of character studies, and for each one Mr. Williams "makes-up" in the front of the camera. There is rather an excess of bowing to the audience after each very brief study—and with an unresponsive audience these repeated acknowledgments of applause, the duration of which can only be estimated generally, and not gauged in particular cases, risk seeming somewhat absurd—but otherwise the film is entirely admirable. The picture is a complete novelty, and the excellent idea behind it is carried out with the greatest possible success. For a performance of this kind the cinematograph is a far better medium than the ordinary stage, since the loss of speech is not serious, whilst the increased effect of subtle facial expression and gesture, resulting from the magnification of the camera, is a very considerable gain indeed. Apart from the very real appeal which it will make to the public, the film is one which every picture player should see, for one doubts whether any more striking lesson on the complete art of "making-up" for the camera has yet appeared. (Planet film.)

The Treasure Ship.

A South Sea island, a bag of treasure, and a cryptic will written on the flyleaf of the family Bible make good material for a romance, and in this film excellent use has been made of the various ingredients, the result being a work which will meet with universal approbation. Captain Bascom, of the Golden Cloud, wrecked on a deserted island, finds the skeleton of a previous castaway, and in his ruined hut a bag of valuable jewels. The years pass, and he is rescued, returning home to find his wife dying. His son, Tom, has grown up good-for-nothing, and the old man, his mind unhinged by the sufferings he has gone through, hoards up his treasure, jealous lest it should fall into other hands than those of his only daughter, Beth. He builds a model of his wrecked ship, the Golden Cloud, and concealing the jewels in a receptacle in the hold, places it on the mantelpiece of his parlour, describing its exact position on the flyleaf of his Bible. On his death the document is discovered by his son, who is induced by his employer, an unscrupulous moneylender, to undertake an expedition to the South Seas to recover a treasure which seems to be waiting for an owner. While he is away on this wild goose chase the daughter and her lover discover the right solution of the riddle, and in a scene where the suspense is admirably worked up, succeed in securing the inheritance and foiling the designing moneylender.

It is an excellent story, very cleverly constructed, and the character of the old captain, with a little more assistance from the actor, might easily have taken rank with Dan Peggotty or David Dodd. The photography is perfect, and the typical scenery in the deserted island is extremely beautiful. (Kalem film. M.P. Sales Agency, Limited. Released August 6th. Length two reels.)

The "Empress of Ireland" Disaster.

This short topical film must necessarily be of great general interest at the present moment, showing, as it does, the after-effects of a great maritime calamity. Several pictures are given of the Empress of Ireland, her officers and crew, special interest attaching to the telegraphists who sent out the call for help, and the crews of the first vessels to arrive at the scene of disaster. We see the arrival at Quebec of the steamer conveying the bodies recovered from the sea, a pathetic note being struck by the number of small white coffins included. A view of the Storstad with its shattered bows gives some faint idea of the terrific impact of the collision. The tragedy of the subject is relieved to some extent by scenes of the survivors arriving in Glasgow. (Gaumont Company, Limited.)

The Surprise Packet.

The husband who gets a night off and meets with a pretty little actress, forgetting to tell her that he is a married man, has provided the plot of many a farcical comedy, and in this instance the situation is rendered acute by the fact that the husband in question is married to the strong-minded proprietress of a large ladies' emporium. The pretty little actress insists on visiting the emporium, ostensibly to buy frocks, but really to tease the life out of the foolish husband and to provide a slight plot for a highly amusing farcical comedy. The husband and the actress behave in a manner which would be unconventional in real life, but which seems quite plausible and natural in farce, and which is played with a spirit of gaiety quite irresistible.

Some excellent scenes take place at a country mansion, where the wife turns up in a trunk, to the dismay of everyone concerned. It is all very amusing and impossible, played with great animation, and beautifully mounted and photographed. (Nordisk Company, Limited. Released July 20th. Length 1,750 ft.)

Stolen Honours.

We have here a melodrama of the South African War, of British manufacture. It tells a somewhat conventional story of two brothers, lieutenants in the same regiment and rivals for the hand of the same girl, who promises to marry the one winning the most honours in the war. In South Africa one brother rapidly shows himself to be the cowardly villain of the piece, whilst the other as quickly develops into the courageous hero. The villain by a dastardly trick takes to himself the honour really gained by the hero, and the latter, who conveniently loses his memory as the result of a wound about this time, is dismissed from the army. Back in England, the villain claims the love of the heroine, who has meanwhile formed a secret passion for the hero. Then a blackmailer appears on the scene and "bleeds" the villain on the strength of an incriminating piece of paper. Eventually, needless to say, everything is satisfactorily cleared up and the hero's honour vindicated, whilst the unmasked villain, horribly undone, slinks forth from the story for ever.

Of its kind, it is quite a good story. It is full of effective melodramatic situations, and the action is never allowed to flag. In some respects it is rather crudely presented, and the whole thing, of course, is wildly improbable, but audiences who like the colours laid on thickly will find plenty to please them in the film. The war scenes are moderately well executed, and backed up by suitable "effects," will doubtless prove very stirring. (Phœnix Exclusives.)

SWANSEA AND DISTRICT NOTES.

The "latest and best" in pictures is always provided for the patrons of the Carlton, Swansea, and it is only fitting that Edison's "talking pictures" should have made their first appearance locally at this beautiful hall. The reception accorded the innovation has proved conclusively that Mr. Hal Cummings secured a "coup" in obtaining the exclusive rights for this new form of entertainment. So unqualified has been the success of the venture that Mr. Cummings again showed similar films during last week. Amongst the Kinetophone selections were "Her Redemption" and "Nursery Favourites."

The Picturedrome, Morriston, keeps up its reputation for first-rate shows, and under the management of Mr. O. T. Haines, business is always brisk. The principal attractions during the week were "The Grip of Circumstance" and "A Soldier's Honour," whilst there is hardly a programme—which, by the way, is changed five times weekly—that does not include one of the Keystone's mirth providers.

At the Elysium (Swansea) business continues to be quite good. Some very fine pictures are always screened at this popular hall, the feature picture at the beginning of the week being "Elizabeth's Prayer." Educational matinées for children are given on Mondays, Thursdays and Saturdays, and under the patronage of the Mayor, a competition has been inaugurated, prizes being awarded to the children for the best essay-writing.

The Cosy, High Street, Swansea, continues to draw big houses. Last week's programme had "A Prodigal Son," "A Soldier's Honour" and "The Bangville Police."

CINE-EDUCATION.

The possibilities of the cinematograph as an educational medium were again demonstrated by Mr. E. Stokoe, headmaster of the Tolworth Council Schools, at his third lecture on "Animal and Bird Life; Travels and Industries," at the Coronation Hall, Surbiton, on Saturday. There was a capital audience of eager and expectant children and adults. The programme was quite up to the high level of excellence which Mr. Stokoe has set up, and the hearty laughter and applause evidenced the children's appreciation of the different items. The studies from Nature were prime favourites with the youngest children. Presenting a magnified picture, the movements of the animals were seen throughout the lecture with even greater clearness than in a close inspection of the object itself.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS.

Small paragraph advertisements are inserted at the rate of One Penny for each word, with a minimum charge of 2s. All words in name and address are charged for. Groups of initial letters or figures count as one word. Terms: CASH WITH ORDER. No advertisement inserted for less than 2s., except under heading of Engagements Wanted, for which the charge is 1s. for 20 words, three insertions for the price of two.

Advertisers wishing to have replies addressed to a box number may do so without extra charge if they send for the replies. If replies are required to be sent by post, sufficient stamps must be enclosed to cover cost of postage. In counting the words of an advertisement using a box number, ten words must be allowed for the address, thus: Box 000, c/o. THE BIOSCOPE, 85, Shaftesbury Avenue, London, W.

UPWARDS AND ONWARDS.

One of the most fascinating features of this wonderful cinematograph industry is the fact that it is always changing and developing in new directions towards better things. There is never anything conservative about it. It is ever expanding and progressing, and its stages are as many and as rapidly reached as those of a newly-born plant, shooting upwards towards the full blossom of its maturity.

Just at present, perhaps, where the entertainment side of the business is concerned, the prevailing tendency is the exchange of old and inferior things for new and better ones. In the past there have been many unfavourable criticisms of the picture play as a form of dramatic expression. Judging solely by past examples, lay critics have told us that it is an unworthy, imbecile thing, incapable of providing pleasure for any but the most unintelligent. Sometimes, even often, it must be admitted, this accusation has been justified, but those who have levelled it have always quoted chance, temporary instances without troubling to think of the future, when the new art will have had time to attain its full-grown powers.

That this desirable future is close upon us is evidenced by the increased attention paid on every side to the finer developments of the cinematograph drama. The producer nowadays no longer confines himself to catering for the least discriminating section of the community by turning out solely cheap comic and melodramatic clap-trap of the most ephemeral nature. Almost every day films reach us, both from abroad and from our own manufacturers, which are calculated to appeal to and satisfy men and women of the most intelligent classes, who could desire nothing better from the first-rate "legitimate" theatres. Even supposing that it ever has been so, the picture theatre is no longer limited to the banal, the vulgar and the foolish. All the best producers are devoting themselves with ever-increasing success to the creation of entertainments worthy in every way to take their place beside masterpieces evolved in other artistic mediums. And the result is that, while the old public is more faithful than ever to the picture theatre, a new public is responding to the call of the cinema, from which it has hitherto held itself aloof.

ADVERTISING your THEATRE

IN the same manner as a smartly dressed window draws customers to a shop, so will an attractive vestibule fill a Theatre. Use your vestibule in the same way as you would a Shop window, to let the Public know what you have to interest them.

Here are a few suggestions for drawing attention to your Programmes.

EMPIRE PROGRAMME STANDS.

Are well made and very smart. They stand 4 ft. 10 in. high and measure 2 ft. 6 in. wide, making a bold show in the front of your theatre. Special partitions are provided for inserting the titles.

TRADE TOPICS.

With reference to the communique of the Secretary of the Exhibitors' Association, which appeared in last week's issue of the Cinema, in which it was stated that "after very careful deliberations upon the proposals received from the three oldest papers, the Executive Committee agreed unanimously to accept that of the proprietors" of the journal named, we desire to state that as one of the oldest papers in the industry we did very courteously receive from the Secretary of the Association an invitation to state under what conditions this journal could be placed at the disposal of the Association, and we duly replied thereto. The evening before the meeting Mr. King wrote informing us that definite proposals had been received and invited the same from ourselves, an offer which was cordially repeated over the 'phone early the next morning, but the directors of this journal did not see their way clear to take advantage of the proposal thus made to them.

Mr. Horace G. Plimpton, managing director of the Edison Company's film department, has been paying a short visit to England, having arrived by the ss. Olympic on June 5th, returning on June 20th after having spent three or four days in Paris.

Mr. Plimpton, who was born in Brooklyn in

MR. H. G. PLIMPTON.

1865, and graduated at Brooklyn Polytechnic College, intended to become a civil engineer, but receiving an offer from the Bigelow Carpet Company, one of the largest concerns of its kind in the United States, he entered their service, in which he remained for twenty-six years. Five years ago he left them to join the Edison company in his present capacity, and it is under his direction that the Edison films have reached their present commanding position in popular favour.

In a short conversation which we were privileged to have with Mr. Plimpton, the day before he sailed he attributed the success of the Edison films to their determination to maintain the high standard of quality, and in a very great measure to the consideration with which the members of their stock companies are invariably treated. That this is undoubtedly the case is confirmed by the reports of those English actors who were engaged by the Edison company over here, and everyone coming under the influence of Mr. Plimpton's genial manner and sympathetic personality can understand that conditions under his management must be ideal.

Considerable interest has been aroused in Lancastrian Trade circles with regard to an action for damages which has been filed in the Chancery Court of Lancashire by Millar Johnston McVittie, of the Pop-In Picture Hall, Hollinwood, against the Corporation of Oldham, in which plaintiff contends the defendants acted ultra vires in refusing to grant him a cinematograph licence.—In the course of the proceedings on the action, the Council had declined to reply to some of the interrogatories put by plaintiff on the ground that these were a matter of law or that the action taken by them was within their discretion under Statute. At the Chancery Court, Manchester, last week, an application was heard by the Vice-Chancellor, in which plaintiff sought to compel the Corporation to make a further affidavit in reply. A lengthy argument ensued between counsel representing the two parties over the various plans and those amended and approved by the Buildings Committee, subject to the approval of the Watch Committee.

Plaintiff submitted that the building was perfectly safe and complied with the by-laws and the Cinematograph Act. Counsel for plaintiff argued that the Corporation were not entitled to impose certain conditions so long as plaintiff's building complied with the Borough Improvement Act of 1880, and submitted that to pass plans in that way, subject to such conditions, was ultra vires. The plaintiff renewed his application and the committee refused to pass the plans otherwise. On January 15, 1913, plaintiff's application was again adjourned pending alterations. Plaintiff asked for a declaration that defendants were bound to approve such plans, and that the conditions were ultra vires. Counsel desired to know in what respect did the building not come up to requirements and what powers the Corporation were acting under.

The Vice-Chancellor eventually urged that the plaintiff was entitled to know, and counsel for the Corporation, after consultation with the Town Clerk, said that he did not allege that the amended plans were not in accordance with the by-laws. After considerable discussion on other points, the Vice-Chancellor made an order embodying the admissions made by counsel for the Corporation. The costs were ordered to be costs in the action.

The competition for "Would-be Picture Players," which was so popular a feature of last years' exhibition at Olympia, is to be repeated this year. The following is the scenario which has been suggested for the next competition:—

"A man or woman enters a room late at night, tired and dispirited. He or she goes to a rose-bowl and admires the flowers. Whilst doing this a noise is heard in the adjoining room, followed by the crash of a stand being upset. Dreading a burglar, he or she goes to the door in trepidation and throws it open, only to find a friend emerging to whom a cordial welcome is given, ending with a hearty laugh."

The various emotions to which expression would have to be given in acting this little incident, include lassitude, joy, admiration, alarm, trepidation, dread, hesitation, surprise, pleasure, laughter.

The scenario appears to us ingeniously conceived, and it should constitute an excellent test of a player's ability. The only thing, indeed, in which it seems to be lacking is a "love interest!"

An influential project has, we hear, been mooted in America with the object of the advancement of educational pictures in motion, and more particularly with regard to the supply of films for collegiate or religious uses. The Duke of Manchester is the vice-president and secretary, while Mr. McClure, the well-known publisher, is among the directors of the concern. Particular emphasis is laid upon the educational value of the project, and it is stated that a special feature will be made of lessons upon geographical discovery. It is expected that the company will, at no very distant date, increase the range of its operations. The present capital is stated to be £100,000, and a number of very prominent men are interested.

Mr. Charles Vernon, the producer of the Bransby Williams pictures, writes as follows:—Dear Sirs,—"In your report of the Bransby Williams films you mention, regarding Grimaldi, that this is an incident taken out of the life of that celebrated clown. We would point out that this is not so. Grimaldi, the clown, died at the age of forty-five. We show our Grimaldi as a very old man and he was taken from a drama written by the late Dion Boucicault, in which he played Grimaldi."

Our readers in a good many quarters, and paticularly upon Tyneside, will be interested to learn that Mr. Harold Arnold, well-known formerly as manager of the King's Theatre, Gateshead, has just been appointed manager of the County Pavilion, Northampton. His very decisive victory in an election for membership of the Gateshead Council will be remembered. Mr. Arnold's extensive theatrical experience is well-known, and we believe that we are right in saying that he is the only manager running "pictures" in this country who possesses the gold medal of the Royal Humane Society. This was presented to him for an act of gallantry performed in the North Sea, the presentation being made by the Duke of Northumberland before Mr. Arnold's fellow councillors. He is an all-round sportsman, and should speedily make many friends in his new location.

We have received a prospectus of the International Cinematograph Exhibition which is to be held at Budapest in August and September next. On the list of foreign presidents appear, among others, the names of Mr. Thomas A. Edison (President of Honour), Herr H. Ernemann, Count Faccini, general director of the Cines Company; M. Léon Gaumont, Mr. Thos. Graf; Count A. Kolowrat, director of the Sascha Company; Herr Oscar Messter, of Messter's Projektion; Herr Ernst Mülleneisen, of Continental Films; Herr Ole Olsen, General director of the Nordisk Film Company; M. Charles Pathé; M. Marcel Vandal, of the Deutschen Bioscop Company. The exhibition will be held in the Industriehalle, Budapest.

A prominent personality in American Trade circles will shortly arrive upon our shores in Mr. S. S. Hutchinson, the President of the American Film Manufacturing Company, of Chicago and Santa Barbara, Cal. He lands on Saturday next, and will, no doubt, be heartily welcomed by his many friends in London, especially from the fact that it is two years since we had him with us over here. His recent extensive motor tour through the States was commented upon very widely, and he gave it as his opinion that there was quite a healthy increase in business. We think we will also be enabled to show him some changes since he was last in England.

An important piece of news comes to hand from the house of Davison in the fact that they will at no very distant date be showing a great B. & C. exclusive entitled "The Loss of the Birkenhead." The film, which will realistically depict the awe-inspiring nature of this great disaster, is in course of preparation. Meanwhile Messrs. Davison are issuing a neat card folder, which contains the lines of Sir F. H. Doyle's world-famous poem and a brief account of this great and never to be forgotten act of heroism. There is herein a magnificent opportunity, both for the producers and the exhibitor, and we shall await further particulars with a keen interest.

For the production of the Cleek film, "The Mystery of the Laughing Death," to be released by the Edison Company on September 3rd, a live specimen of the deadly tarantula spider was obtained from the Zoo. He was taken to the studio in charge of a keeper who had to give the members of the company a short lecture on the creature's habits and explain exactly how near to approach.

In connection with their remarkable Blaché film, "Fighting Death," which is said to be the finest and most sensational picture ever produced by Mr. Herbert Blaché, Messrs. R. Prieur and Co. are issuing an admirably written and well produced booklet, which does much credit to their publicity manager, Mr. V. F. Taylor.

The first week of the cinematograph season of that famous playhouse, the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpoool, has been such a success that the proprietor, Mr. W. W. Kelly, has decided to extend the idea, and for the future the performance will be a continuous one from 2 p.m. to 10.30. The Hepworth feature, "The Heart of Midlothian," which was selected to open the season, drew such large audiences that Mr. Kelley decided he could not do better than follow it up with another picture by the same firm, with the result that this week's staple attraction will be Hepworth's Dickens production, "The Old Curiosity Shop."

We learn from Mr. F. D. Bowden that the American and Continental Film Company have been appointed agents for the Life Photo Film Corporation, of New York, which is at present producing one important film a month. The company hopes shortly to produce two films a month, but as it is concerned with the manufacture of the very best pictures only, quality is considered as far more important than quantity. M. Roskam, President of the Life Photo Film Corporation, who is at present in this country, hopes to leave for America by the end of the week.

A film adaptation of E. Phillip Oppenheim's novel, "The Master Number," will be produced by the Edison Company, and Miss Mary Fuller will appear in the triple rôle of Princess Isobel, her daughter and cousin. Mr. Oppenheim is a well-known writer of fiction, who possesses a very admirable gift of telling stories of absorbing interest and constructing ingenious plots, in which are woven attractive characters. The production will be given in five reels. The Company is also producing a film of the well-known play, "My Friend from India." This piece had a very successful run in New York City, and Walter E. Perkins, who took the leading rôle in the legitimate production, will also play the same part in the film version, which will be in three parts.

On Tuesday morning last a Trade show was given at the Shaftesbury Pavilion by the Feature Supply Company, Limited, of the powerful and dramatic Hepworth film, "The Great Poison Mystery," for which they have secured the exclusive rights. This fine film was reviewed in our issue of May 7th, under its second title, "The Tragedy of Basil Grieve."

We have invariably taken a stand for the full and proper recognition of good musical compositions in connection with the display of films and being fully cognisant of the work already done by our friends in Italy with regard to the arrangement of fitting accompaniments, it is with pleasure we hear that Signor Renzo Sonzogno, the great Milanese impressario, has formed a company which will be named Musical Films Renzo Sonzogno, the object of which is to popularise good music in connection with special films. This scheme will, in addition to popularising the works of the older composers give a much-needed impetus to compositions by the younger generation. We hear that such eminent men as Leoncavallo, Bossi, Franchetti and Massagni have already signed contracts for the project, and that Signor Sonzogno is of the opinion that there is a great future for composers who can writes operettas for filmic production. We wish him every success in the venture which was, we believe, inspired by the success of Professor Humperdinck's music in "The Miracle."

Miss Viola Dane, well-known on the legitimate stage through her appearance in "The Poor Little Rich Girl," which was produced in London a few seasons ago, has signed a contract to appear in pictures produced by the Edison Company. Her dêbut on the screen will be made in "Molly, the Drummer Boy," an American Civil War story, shortly to be released.

As we go to press, a message comes from Mr. G. Serra, of the Cines Company, that his firm has decided to postpone the issue of the dramatic subject, "Rip, the Dog Detective," in order that it may come as a business puller for the period following the Bank Holiday rush. Will exhibitors kindly note that the correct date will be Thursday, August 6th, and not upon the Monday, as advertised. The film is recommended as a particularly potent and interesting attraction.

It is by no means an unusual thing for a scene to be spoilt during production in a studio, but we doubt whether any company has received such a cause for risibility as was recently vouchsafed to members of the Majestic concern. A most critical scene had been rehearsed over and over again, and at last the camera was set a-going. At that moment a healthy goat rushed into the studio and making for the centre of the stage, mounted a table and plaintively "addressed" George Seigmann. Drama instantly became burlesque, and even the air changed colour under the roars and exclamations. "Billy" was, needless to remark, quickly removed, but that scene was not through for a considerable period after his departure.

One of the happiest of several suggestions put forward by members of the drapery trade with regard to the evils of late hours is a plan whereby a film dealing with the question of "late shopping" would be shown at cinema theatres throughout the country. As a writer in The Draper points out, a film dealing with this and the early closing movement and illustrating the undoubted hardships of "shop life," would prove vastly more effective in calling public attention to various evils than any amount of printed matter. We feel sure that there are many firms who would be willing to help forward such a worthy object and thus lighten the lot of the hard worked ones who would often visit the pictures, but alas! can but seldom spare the time.

A real Scot's welcome, and incidentally an excellent opportunity for the display of naturally ebullient good nature, seems to have been the general rule during the tour organised by the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Limited, insofar as the leading Scottish centres are concerned. At Edinburgh, Glasgow, and on through Paisley, so our Scottish representative informs us, the fair "Lucille" has been the recipient of shoals of well-meant proposals. Her reception in Trade circles in Glasgow, and at various theatres visited en route must have been extremely gratifying. Mr. Levine and his fair charge left for Carlisle and thence on to Blackpool after some very enthusiastic scenes.

As the decorated car containing Miss Love and party was proceeding along Argyle Street, Glasgow, the chauffeur failed to notice a burly policeman signalling for them to stop. On the car being eventually drawn up the officer surveyed the wording on it with a twinkle in his eye. He then turned to Miss Love and said, "Ye may be lukin' for a 'man,' but yer driver's no' luking for the polis!"

In the Companies' Winding-up Court on Tuesday, Mr. Justice Astbury heard the petition of Mr. Cohn for the compulsory winding-up of the Motograph Film Company, Limited. There was no opposition and his Lordship made the usual order.

We are pleased to note that our Japanese contemporary, The Kinema Record, is now very firmly established, and judging by the latest number received, quite an artistic and substantial little publication. The films enumerated are a remarkably good and up-to-date selecton, many features being described in the text, and it would seem that our Japanese allies are quite as critical over "features" as they are over their commercial and scientific pursuits. The enumeration of the first Kinemacolor play taken in Japan forms a fine tribute to European enterprise, and is fully described and illustrated in the volume.

TED ESSANAY RELEASES.

A magnificently acted "dramatic incident" showing those wonderfully forceful and natural artistes, the Essanay Western Players, at their best. It is not so much the story but rather the remarkably vivid acting of Miss Riena Valdez, which makes this quite a notable little production. "It is a real slice of life," true, natural and strong in its presentation, and there are few who will be able to resist its immediate irresistible appeal. It should certainly be booked widely.

This excellent industrial offering is a very fine picture illustrating the ways in which peas and asparagus are handled in California from the time they are planted until the time they are tinned.

A screaming Western farce, by Essanay, that will find favour with all who require such stimulant to excite hilarity. Few who view the mirthful incidents, which mark the experiences of two German musicians, will be able to resist the guffaws that demand an outlet from compressed lungs. "Sophie Clutts" (Margaret Joslin) is present with both feet in the fun-making, and Victor Potel and Harry Todd are exceedingly amusing in their neck-breaking escapades. The incidents are laid in Essanay's mythical town of Snakeville, and the atmosphere is reminiscent of the old West of many years ago.

An interesting story of considerable originality that is clean and enjoyable. A strong cast is supplied for this feature which includes Francis X Bushman, Irene Warfield, Ruth Stonehouse and Bryant Washburn. From the standpoint of staging and direction this attraction ranks as high as anything Essanay has produced. The settings are wonderfully deep, massive and elaborate. The furnishings are lavish and in several of the big scenes odd and novel effects are obtained by means of mirrors.

A NAPOLEONIC DEAL.

Mr. J. D. Walker to Market all Famous Players and Jessy L. Lasky Films.

In the course of an interesting interview with Mr. Samuel Goldfish, of the Jesse L. Lasky Company, which we published in our issue of June 11th, this gentleman stated that special arrangements were to be made for the issue to exhibitors of the combined Famous Players and Jesse L. Lasky output.

These arrangements were completed on Saturday last, and as a result the whole of this great amalgamated programme will be handled exclusively by Mr. J. D. Walker, who has secured the entire series on a lease.

We need make no comment upon this immense deal, which is probably the most important transaction ever entered into by any individual renter in this country, but the following interviews with Mr. Goldfish, who has now left for the Continent, and Mr. Walker, will explain themselves.

MR. SAMUEL GOLDFISH.

"When I first came over," said Mr. Goldfish, "I gave you some idea of the scope and variety of the pictures making up our combined programme. I have not shown these pictures in England to anybody except Mr. J. D. Walker, because I decided, immediately upon meeting and talking to him, that he was the one man for us. What especially impressed me about him was the reputation he has for being progressive. And from chats I have had with numerous exhibitors I gather that they all seem to have a great deal of faith in his ability as a film man. As you know, he has already handled a great many Famous Players films, and the success that he has made with these convinces me that he is the ideal man to undertake what is, I fancy, the very biggest thing ever attempted by any individual film man in England.

"I feel that my trip here has been invaluable to me. I am convinced that the English market is on the upward path, and there is no doubt in my mind that this country is ripe for a regular first-class programme such as that which we shall release through Mr. Walker from September next onwards.

"Among some of the first films Mr. Walker will handle under this new arrangement will be 'The Silver King,' 'The Darling of the Gods,' 'The Eternal City,' Gaby Deslys in a special play, 'Brewster's Millions,' all the Mary Pickford pictures, 'The White Man,' and David Belasco's famous piece, 'The Girl of the Golden West,' in Puccini's operatic version of which Caruso has sung all over the world. We shall send Mr. Walker subjects produced in Egypt, Japan, Honolulu, Italy, in fact, in every portion of the globe, so that he in turn may be able to supply exhibitors, and through them the public, with a regular programme of international interest containing pictures of every possible variety. One thing I am convinced of, after spending two weeks in London, is that the public do not care for long, purely spectacular pictures. There is no real prejudice against the long film, nor against the film which incidentally offers magnificent spectacles; but the primary consideration in every case is the story. Audiences cannot live on spectacles alone, nor is a long film of any value unless the interest of the story justifies its length. It is the story which counts first and foremost.

"I need not say that I am exceedingly gratified by the results of my trip, the most important of which is the fact that Mr. Walker will be sole English representative of these two companies. Mr. Sydney Baber, who is at present managing director of the Famous Players Film Company, will henceforward be managing director of the Jesse L. Lasky Company as well, a matter about which I am extremely happy, for he is not only a very delightful comrade, but also an exceedingly clever man of business, than whom there is none more capable of guarding our interests."

Having bidden farewell to Mr. Goldfish, we had the pleasure of a brief chat with Mr. J. D. Walker concerning the Napoleonic enterprise he has taken over. Mr. Walker needs no introduction to the film trade. He has always been a pioneer and a leader, and he has countless friends in the industry who are attached to him for his personal qualities as deeply as they respect him for his great business abilities. Success has never spoiled him, and he remains to-day as kindly and unassuming as he ever was.

"I am naturally more than delighted at having been able to secure these wonderful pictures," said Mr. Walker, "because I firmly believe that they will prove the greatest and most popular series of films ever issued. I shall start with them about the first week in September next, and thenceforward shall release them regularly at the rate of six a month. They will be issued strictly as 'exclusives,' and in view of this fact I would urge exhibitors who wish to secure any of them to get into touch with me as quickly as possible. I am particularly gratified at being in a position to issue these films to exhibitors whom I have had the privilege of serving for many years, and I need not say that I shall study their interests in every way. The prices will not be outrageous, because, as a film renter, I believe in considering the exhibitor all the time.

MR. SYDNEY BABER.

"It would be impossible to cope with the work of handling these productions in my present premises, and I have in consequence already arranged to move into very much larger offices, the address of which will shortly be announced. Yes, it is quite possible that I may open numerous provincial branches, but I have come to no decision on the point for the moment. There is nothing else, I think, that I can tell you for the time being, but I should like to say that the whole business will have my personal attention, and that I shall always be very pleased to see exhibitors by appointment. No, I shall handle no other productions whatsoever, besides those of the Famous Players Film Company and the Jesse L. Lasky Company. And I fancy, when you have seen some of the films, you will agree with me that I can be quite fully contented with what I have got."

MR. J. D. WALKER.

TEES-SIDE TOPICS.

"Protea II." attracted large crowds to the Hippodrome, Stockton, last week. Another prominent attraction was "The Creatures of Play."—Not the least pleasing feature of the evening's entertainment at the Empire is the choice programme of music submitted by Mr. G. B. Robinson's orchestra. The chief pictures shown last week were "The Devil's Eve," "The Car of Doom" and "A Film Johnny."—The latest novelty in cinema production is the "speaking picture," and that which was presented at the Royal Cinema last week by the Clarendon Company was much enjoyed. The picture was "Coming Home," a celebrated poem by Alfred Berlyn, and the elocutionary work was very fine indeed. During the latter half of the week a second film of this new type, "Phil's Blood Leap," was screened. The Essanay Company have gained considerable popularity through the medium of Broncho Billy, and last week "His First Arrest" at the Globe created an appreciable impression. "The Dead Secret" and "The War Makers" were also interesting topics.

Many fine programmes of pictures have been shown at the Opera House, Middlesbrough, but none finer than that of last week. The feature film was "The Cage," but "Guilty or Not Guilty" and the adventures of "Lieut. Rose and the Sealed Orders" were followed with breathless interest.—Remarkable popular has been accorded the children's beauty competition promoted by Mr. W. Thompson at the Hippodrome, and the presentation of the prizes to the winning competitors was made on Saturday in the presence of a crowded gathering by the Mayor of Middlesbrough.—Visitors to the cosy Electric Theatre were treated to a splendid programme of pictures which was headed by "Shadows." Sketches by Mayer were full of interest, and "The Fatal Card" was also shown. The orchestra at the Electric is now led by Mr. Leggatt, a violinist of repute from Birmingham.

"Robin Hood and Maid Marian" was an excellent feature at the Court and Arcade Cinemas, Darlington. This was ably supplemented by "The Range War" and "Roland, the Trapper." –At the Empire "In the Power of a Hypnotist" was a huge attraction, and "Mystery of Three Faces" was a film which was intently followed.

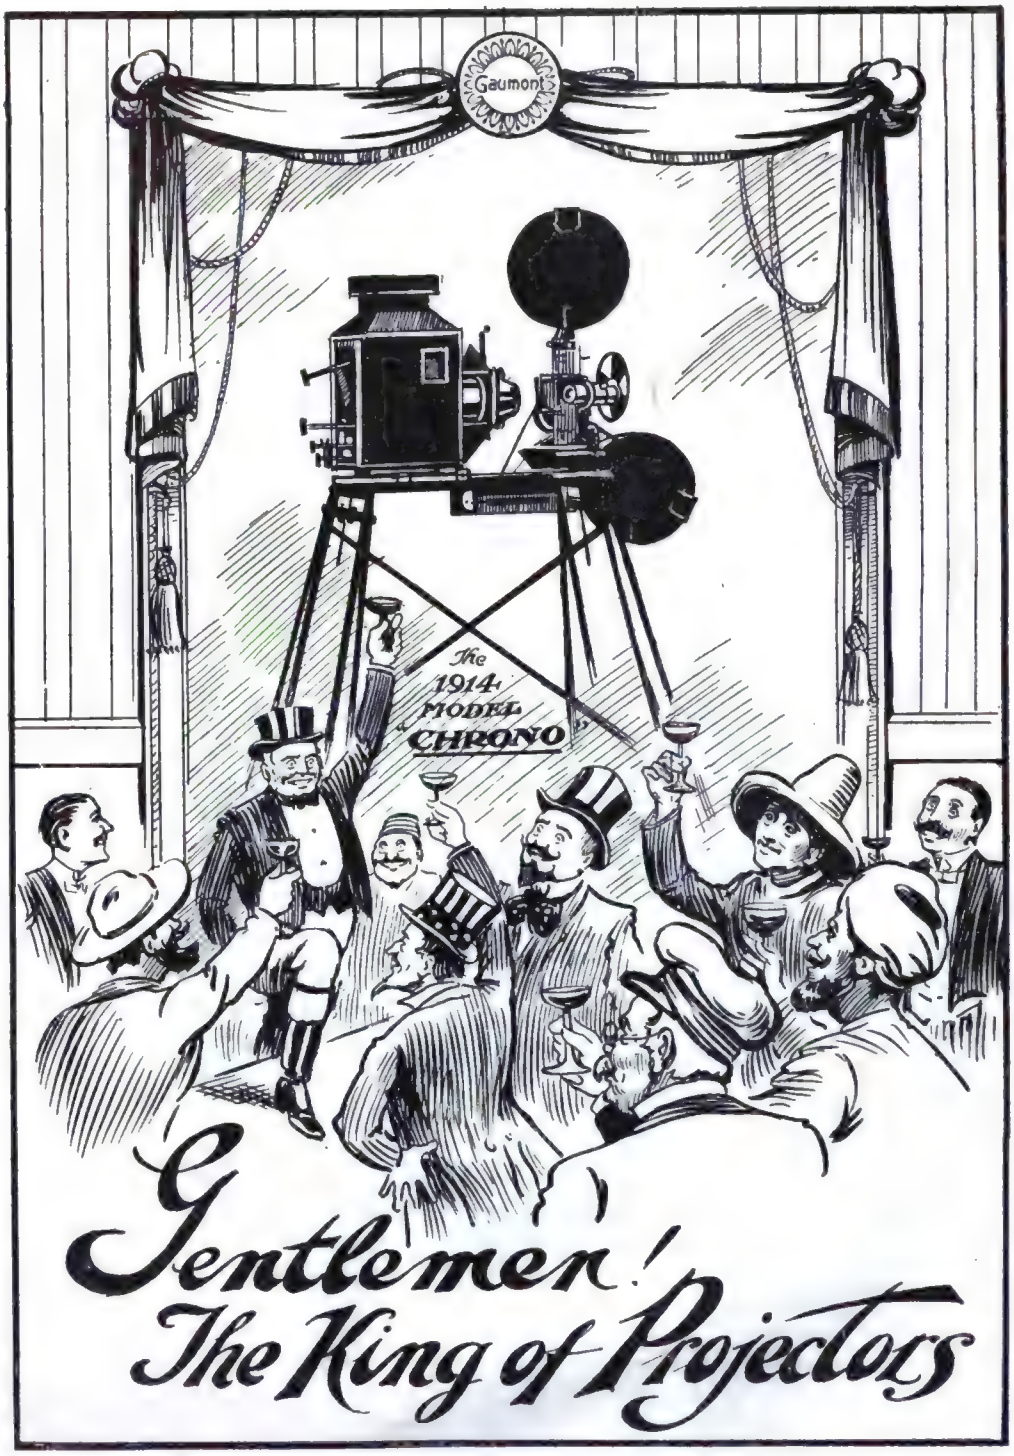
Two Interesting Films.

"Our Mutual Girl" and "The Battle of the Sexes" from the Dominion Company.

On Friday last a very interesting Trade show was given at the Shaftesbury Pavilion by the Dominion Exclusives Company for the purpose of introducing their two important pictures, "Our Mutual Girl" and "The Battle of the Sexes." We will deal first with the former, which is, as our readers are aware, the latest serial film to be placed on the market.

"Our Mutual Girl" differs considerably in form from other pictures of the kind that one has seen and if one makes a comparison, it must be confessed that it seems on the whole much better designed than usual to meet the demands of this particular sort of entertainment. It is less a serial story (so far as we can judge from the few early instalments we have seen) than "a pictorial review," which is, by the way, its very apt official description. Although, however, the film's most notable and interesting feature is the animated record it presents of numerous celebrated persons, places and things, it also contains a continuous story, the gradual development of which throughout the various parts lends the latter connected interest. A story must be very, very good indeed if it is capable of holding the attention of an audience through fifty-two reels of film, exhibited with twenty-six intervals of a fortnight each, and in view of this fact we consider that the producers of "Our Mutual Girl" have been very wise to rely mainly upon a wealth of varied and unusual incidents, complete in themselves, rather than upon the thread of a strongly marked, unbroken romance. As it is, one would be quite content to follow the doings of the "Mutual Girl" indefinitely. She stands, as it were, in the place of all her audiences, visiting on their behalf all the scenes that they would best love to visit, and meeting all the people whom they would most desire to meet. The possibilities of the cinematograph as a sort of vicarious sightseer have never been better demonstrated than by this film. The "Mutual Girl" acts as a kind of Cook's guide and personally conducts an immense tour by film throughout modern American life. The fact that her duties as cicerone do not prevent her from indulging in a romance of her own in her spare time only adds to her charm as a travelling companion, increasing, as it does, the interest of her personality. And who is so sluggish of soul that he would not like to journey through the high places of dollar-brilliant American society with a pretty young woman — full of country girl's lively, ingenuous interest in town things, merry, warm-hearted, and eager for novel experiences — as his partner?



SCENE FROM "THE BATTLE OF THE SEXES."

According to the admirably written descriptive booklet issued with the film, the latter is regarded as being particularly suitable for, and attractive to, women, but for ourselves we should say that most men will find it equally interesting. Some of the dress parade scenes may seem a trifle unduly prolonged to the masculine mind, it is true, but then, even if the costumes do not fascinate, there are always the exceedingly beautiful girls inside them to fall back upon.

In reviewing such a picture as "Our Mutual Girl," it is unnecessary to say much about the acting or the story, especially in view of the fact that at present we have only seen a small portion of the latter. Miss Norma Phillips, the heroine of the production, possesses an agreeable personality and is pleasant to look upon, albeit she is of a pronouncedly American type. Everybody else is similarly well chosen.

Amongst the celebrities who, we understand, are introduced during the course of the picture are such people as Madame Tetrazzini, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, Miss Billie Burke, and Commander Evans, of the Scott Antarctic Expedition.

One or two of the "lions" of the film may not be so interesting to British as to American audiences, but on the other hand, the characteristic glimpses of American cities will probably prove much more attractive in this country than they would in the United States.

On the whole, we consider "Our Mutual Girl" to be a thoroughly excellent idea, which is carried out—so far as we have had opportunity of judging—in a thoroughly capable manner. It constitutes a very enjoyable, interesting, and, in some respects, educational entertainment.

"The Battle of the Sexes," the Dominion Company's other "exclusive," is, as its title suggests, of a wholly different nature. It is a modern domestic drama which is intended, we gather, to raise the problem whether "a man has the right to demand in his daughter a moral standard to which he himself does not conform." The force and interest of the picture as a "problem play" would have been considerably enhanced if the daughter, instead of merely simulating a lapse into immoral ways, had actually committed a sin against morality. The problem is still suggested, however, even as things are, and, if it were not, the film is so very excellent simply as a drama that one would have no hesitation in according it whole-hearted praise.

Primarily, perhaps, the film illustrates the enormously increased importance of treatment over subject-matter. Here is a story, old enough in outline and even in many details, which is made to impress one as a striking and novel conception, solely by the great skill with which it has been presented. The story of a man's fall and his subsequent repentance, has figured as the theme of many melodramas, but has seldom, if ever, seemed convincing because it has seldom, if ever, been treated in a sober, natural manner without absurd exaggerations and sentimentalities. Mr. D. W. Griffiths, the producer of "The Battle of the Sexes," however, has endeavoured to create a perfectly natural and absolutely realistic version of a story which is, after all, enacted far more frequently in actual life than on the stage or inside the covers of novels. He has succeeded in this endeavour in almost every particular, and as a result he has given us a drama which is enthralling and sometimes positively painful in the force of its direct appeal.

In the space at our disposal it is, unfortunately, impossible for us fully to appreciate all the many small touches which, even more than the handling of the bigger situations, help so greatly to render the story convincing and powerful. Such scenes as that wherein an ordinary middle-class family is seen seated contentedly around the fire whilst the father reads aloud to them, are quite masterly in their sense of intimacy and natural realism. Of course, Mr. Griffiths could have effected nothing without players capable of interpreting and enlarging upon his ideas, and in this connection one must record the very warmest admiration for the acting of the Misses Lilian Gish, Fay Tincher, Mary Alden, and Messrs. Donald Crisp, Robert Harron, Owen Moore and an unnamed gentleman playing the daughter's lover, to whom, collectively and individually, the success of the drama is so largely due. Of the art of Miss Lilian Gish, who is, by the way, only seventeen years of age, we have written with enthusiasm many times in the past, even before her name was "starred" or even known outside the studio, and it is with much pleasure that we see her fulfilling our expectations so splendidly in the present film.

Naturally, there are one or two small flaws in the picture in places, but they are so small in proportion to the film's many great merits that it is scarcely fair to refer to them when our space prevents us from half exhausting the latter.

As a whole, we consider "The Battle of the Sexes" to be a most admirable and successful production in almost every respect. It is good enough to present to the most critical audiences, and sufficiently "popular" and powerful to offer to the least exacting. Undoubtedly the Dominion Exclusives Company have secured in this drama a film which is destined to enjoy a long and prosperous career.

EAST ANGLIAN EVENTS

Mr. Eric Williams paid his return visit to the Norwich Theatre de Luxe last week and received a vociferous reception. Mr. T. Hallisey found success also in "Sawdust and Salome," "Three Friends" and "A Flash in the Dark" as a result of collections on two days last week. Mr. Hallisey has had the pleasure of forwarding £7 10s. 3d. to Mr. C. Arthur Pearson's fund for the blind.—Mr. J. McCormic is keeping the Picture Playhouse up to "high-water" mark." This week saw good houses, the features being "Back to Broadway," "The Mystery of the Dover Express."—The Gaumont Fantomas pictures are looked for in Norwich, and this week the Electric Theatre has been crowded to see "The False Magistrate."—One can always expect "something good" at the Cinema, Magdalen Street. This week an exceptionally fine programme is presented by Mr. J. W. Bruce, including "Germinal" and the Gaumont pictures of the Empress of Ireland disaster.—The Empire is noted for its excellent management, and this week the specials are "A Ride for a Bride" and "The Leading Lady."—At the Prince of Wales Palace, winners are "Flames of Shame" and "A Bargain with Satan."—"The Gambler" is the present feature at the Ipswich Picture House.—Mr. E. V. Barr, at the Gem, Great Yarmouth, has this week received good patronage. A strong attraction was the "nameless film" competition."—The Yarmouth Empire screened "'Neath the Lion's Paw" and "A Daughter of the Hills."—"The Fire-Fly" and "A Daughter of the Hills" also proved great attractions this week at the Coliseum.—An excellent entertainment is being given this week at the Palace, Lowestoft, included in Mr. A. Dagnall's programme being "Maria Marten."

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

PROGRESS AT WINCHESTER.

The progress which has been made with the New Theatre Royal has been so considerable that the interior is now being pushed on in preparation for opening in the autumn.—At Messrs. Simpkin's other house, the Palace, good business was done last week with "Traitors to their King" and "Secret of the Black Mask."—Several new features have been introduced by Lieut. Fletcher, R.N., at the New Picture House. In order to warn visitors who desire to catch trains, a clock giving the time at the moment is projected on the screen at intervals. In the tea lounge, strawberry teas and ices are much appreciated features. Collecting boxes for the local hospital and the Lifeboat Institution have been installed in the vestibule. This week "Gamble for Life" and "The Home of Terror" are the star films.

CHANNEL ISLANDS CINEMAS.

The celebration of King George's birthday always gives Guernsey people a general holiday. This being so, Mr. Nisbet, on Wednesday (the day set apart for this year's celebration in Guernsey), opened the Rectory Hall for three shows during the afternoon and evening. The principal dramatic films recently shown have been "The Bugle Call," "True Western Hearts" and "The Power of Love."—At the Opera House, Jersey, "Satan" has proved a big draw, in addition to "Quantrell's Son" and "Andy Plays Hero." "The Black Spot" and "Italian Beauty Spots," as well as the usual "Bi-weekly Gazette," were noted at the Alhambra, Jersey, and were well received.—West's Picture Playhouse, Jersey, has shown a strong historical subject in "King Charles." Other features have been "An Hour of Terror" and "Romance of the North-West."

THANET TOPLINES.

One of the most popular pictures shown at Ramsgate was undoubtedly "Protea II.," secured by Mr. Bert Parker for the Queen's.—"The Adventure of the Copper Beeches" and "Back to Broadway" were accorded a good reception at the King's.—The pictures shown at the Star Cinema are particularly fresh and entertaining, and "Tragedy of Black Rock" was a good exclusive. "Bunny's Mistake" and "The Champion" caused much amusement.—At the Marina, the star pictures were "Amid Raging Beasts" and "The Speckled Band."—At the Royal Victoria Pavilion, varieties at present occupy the bill. —"The Curse of War" was productive of good business at the Cinema, Broadstairs.—At Margate, good houses are the rule, the Parade Cinema are screening some very good subjects. "Mystery of the Old Mill," "House of Fear" and "An Hour of Terror" being among the dramatic subjects.—The Clifton Cinema showed some high-class releases to appreciative audiences. "Susanne Comes to Stay," "The Air Torpedo" and "For Her Brother's Sake" were most popular.—At the Lounge, Cliftonville, seats were at a premium. "The Black Spot" was much appreciated, also "The Rosary" and "Annie Laurie," both of which were considerably enhanced by the singing of Miss Osache Leigh. Much interest was shown in "Protea II.," which was also productive of good houses.—"A Soldier's Duty," "Expert's Secret" and "Romance of Old Brittany" were headlines at the Town Hall, Westgate.

FOR THE MAILING LIST.

Mr. Fred Dixon, manager of the Osborne Picture Hall, Clegg Street, Oldham, Lancs., would esteem being placed upon the lists of firms in the Trade with whom he is not already in touch.

A PETERBOROUGH PAR.

Crowded houses are the order at the Broadway Kinema, where Mr. J. E. Draper, the resident manager, is screening with great success "The Curse of War." He announces that he has secured "Sixty Years a Queen" for a later date.

LEICESTER'S ATTRACTIONS.

A very fine exclusive making its appearance this week at the Silver Street Electric is "The Children of Captain Grant," of Jules Verne fame. Yet another for the latter end will be "The Range War."—At High Street, a programme of unusual merit looks like reaping its due reward, among the chief items being "The Port of Doom" and "Vengeance is Mine."—"The Other Girl" at the Boulevard, West End, also has her attractions, as the enthusiastic appreciation of the public abundantly testifies. "On Secret Service" is another excellent item.—For the week just concluded, "Royal Ascot" and "Storm Scenes in Paris" among topicals at the Floral Hall, and "Outwitted" at the Granby Street Picture House, have been outstanding features.—Foundations for the latest picture house (one nearly completed, will shortly be opened) are being laid in the Uppingham Road district.

NEW CLARENDON COMICS.

The popular music-hall artiste, Mr. Jack Spratt, is, we hear, to be featured in a new series of comic films, entitled "The Jack Spratt" series, and which will be published shortly by the Clarendon Film Company.

NEWS FROM NEWPORT.

Olympia, Newport (Mon.), maintains its reputation for crowded houses by screening only the best pictures. This week patrons have been regaled with "Tannhauser," "The Red Club," "How Pimple Won the Derby," "Oh! You Puppy" and "Bunny's Birthday."

ALICE JOYCE IN "SERIAL."

We hear that Miss Alice Joyce, the Kalem star, will shortly be featured in a series of two-reel features, which will be released on this side at the rate of one every fortnight. Each film in the series will be quite complete in itself, and the films will be written up in story form, and published in one of the popular London weekly papers simultaneously with their release. The first production, "Nina of the Theatre," will be released about the beginning of September.

HAPPENINGS AT HENDON.

On Saturday last a most interesting programme was witnessed at the London Aerodrome, the time between the commencement and finish of the great London to Manchester and back event being filled in most admirably. In addition to flights by a military biplane before Mr. Winston Churchill, there were other excellent displays, and a magnificent speed contest for the Oddenim trophy was witnessed. The victory in the big event of the American aviator, Mr. Brock, was somewhat unexpected, but was, nevertheless, heartily acclaimed. We would remind our London readers that the Midsummer Meeting takes place on Saturday next, also that special displays are given on Sundays. There is not the slightest doubt that the London Aerodrome is becoming quite the popular rendezvous for all interested in aviation.

ROUND THE CAMBRIDGE CINEMAS.

Great things are being done at the Electric, crowded houses being the rule. The special feature last week was the exhibition of the University May Races" and "Cambridge Military Tournament." These two films were shown as extras and proved a great attraction. An exceptionally fine programme is again secured. Mr. J. Mortimer is to be congratulated on his excellent choice. For Monday, the following films occupied the bill:—"A Riverside Crane," "The Losing Card" and "Wiffles Tricks the Detectives." To-day (Thursday) and rest of the week, "Under the Red Lights," "The Gamekeeper's Children" and "Rich and Poor" top the bill. It is interesting to note that all attendants at this hall have a fire drill twice a week.—The boards at the Palace Rink are still being occupied by "The Flashlights," and during the intervals feature films are screened.—Another good programme is presented at the Empire, the two special attractions for Monday being "Sale of a Heart" and "The Portrait," and for the latter part of the week, "False Rubies" and "A Muddy Romance" will be the features.—At the Playhouse, a fine programme is presented, the hall being crowded every night. "Let No Man Escape" heads the bill, and is supported by "Scotland for Ever," "The Hour of Terror" and "A Fair Game." The programme for the latter half includes "Shadows," "A Kentucky Romance" and "The Eternal Duel." A fine selection of music is rendered by the Playhouse orchestra.

DUNDEE CHANGE.

The Palace Theatre, Dundee, has been acquired by a well-known Glasgow syndicate, and will in future be run on similar lines to the Empress, Glasgow.

BOGNOR BREEZES.

The Pier Theatre, Bognor, is still getting the latest films and consequently "full" houses. The latest features are "The Woman in White," "The Mystery of Boscombe Vale," "Nick Winter and the Masked Thieves," "The Woman in Black" and "The Cup Final Mystery."

TEMPERANCE AND THE CINEMA.

At a conference of the British Temperance League, at Huddersfield, last week, Mr. George Shires, (of Derby) in an address on "Temperance Work and Organisation in Town Areas," said that in some towns the use of the cinematograph for temperance purposes had been attended with great success, both financially and otherwise.

CHANGES AT INVERNESS.

Mr. K. L. A. Arnott has relinquished the management of the Picture Hall, and is at present engaged in forming a company for a new venture. All communications should meantime be addressed to 3t Giles, Inverness. Mr. S. Caperoe Thurston is the new manager of the Central Picture Palace. The programme at the Central has been extended to four hours, and contains many exclusive and up-to-date items.

CINEMA AS EDUCATOR.

The cinematograph was brought into use at the Leeds Central Technical Schools last week in connection with two lectures which were given by Mr. James Neill to the students of the building trade and architecture. By the pictures were shown, synchronising with the explanations of the lecturer, the methods of quarrying, dressing and placing stone in position and the methods of handling reinforced concrete, The lectures were a conspicuous success.

REFUSED SANS REASON.

At the meeting of the Hornsey Town Council on Monday night it was agreed, on the recommendation of the Plans Committee, to disapprove and refuse permission for a building of (or for) an open-air cinema in Tottenham Lane, Hornsey, submitted by Mr. Charles Thomas Jones, trading as G. A. Clark and Co. No reason was assigned for the refusal.—A resolution from the Tottenham Council that the Hornsey authority should petition the Middlesex County Council on the subject of Sunday Cinemas was deferred for consideration.

NORTH DEVON NEWS.

Picture-goers at Barnstaple have been provided with a treat this week, the management of the Picturedrome having screened the famous "Antony and Cleopatra" to crowded houses.—At the Electric Palace, Bideford, last week the management put on "Golf," as played by J. H. Taylor, ex-champion, and the local man. The same week the "Who Will Marry Mary" series proved very popular. The management are devoting the whole of the takings on Friday evening to the relief fund for the Empress of Ireland Disaster. A new Pathé projector has been installed at this popular house.—At the Bijou Palace last week a strong programme was submitted by Mr. Blake, the proprietor-manager, the star picture being "In the Grip of a Villain." At this cosy little house a violin now accompanies the piano and is much enjoyed by the audience.

HUNTINGDON HALLS.

At the Central Cinema, St. Ives, "No Place for Father" was the chief film for Monday of last week, whilst "Lieutenant Daring, the Aerial Scout" headed the bill for Thursday.—At the Gem, an exceptionally attractive programme has been issued for this week. The usual variety turn will be provided, and the pictures include "Lieut. Daring, the Aerial Scout."

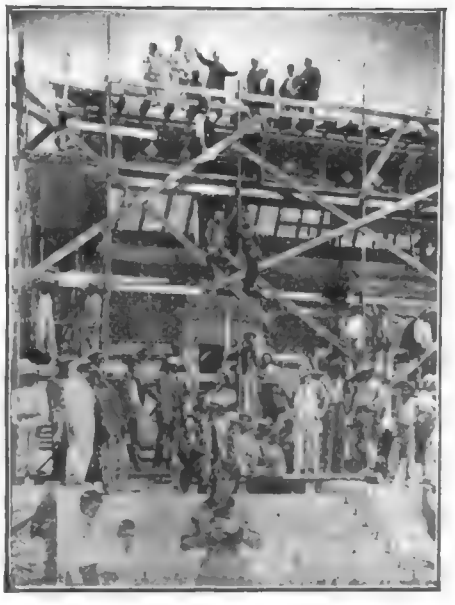
TRIALS AT TOTTENHAM.

Mr. Harry J. Benjamin, of the People's Palace, Tottenham, is holding a variety competition during the week, commencing July 6th. Substantial money prizes and offers of engagements by well-known agents are the "plums" offered for budding aspirants. All classes can enter, no one being barred, and Mr. Benjamin will be pleased to receive the names of intending competitors.

NUMBER, PLEASE?

Mr. K. W. Linn, of 29A, Charing Cross Road, W.C., the European representative of Messrs. Pathé Frères New York establishment, informs us that after great tribulations, he has at last got his 'phone, the number being "Regent 5829." Now that telephonic communication is established, Mr. Linn hopes that the Trade will make ample use of same in inviting him to see any new films ready for the market.

FOLKESTONE FAVOURITES.



The sudden change to brilliant sunshine has not in any way lessened business. Mr. G. Thompson, managing director of the Central, George Lane, must be very proud of the handsome building he controls. Ventilated in a most up-to-date manner the hall is always cool and everything is done for the comfort of patrons. It is being redecorated in lavish style and fresh flowers tastefully arranged about the spacious vestibule will add considerably to the already artistic appearance. Mr. C. Adams, after a few months change in London, has returned to his former position as business manager. "Old St. Paul's" and "Sawdust and Salome" were chief items in an excellent programme. Mr. George Cooper's orchestra plays many excellent selections.—Mr. B. R. Strother, after four years with Pyke's Circuit, has only recently taken charge of the Playhouse, and is experiencing flourishing business. Many improvements have been effected and high-class variety has been included. The special features were "From the Jaws of Death" and "A Sublime Deception," whilst hearty laughter greeted "Making a Living." A full orchestra under the direction of Mr. F. Chopin plays admirably to the pictures, and is in itself an attraction.—Good dramas and comedies have done much for the reputation of the Electric, Grace Hill, where Mr. A. J. Andrews pays close attention to the requirements of his patrons. "Orders Under Seal" met with a big reception, whilst "Making a Living" and "The Sultan on Roller Skates" were chief laughter makers. This week the hall is closed for redecoration.—"Fortune Hunters" and "Wall of Money" were the stars at the Victoria Pier Pavilion. "Protea II." was responsible for big business last Sunday.—At the Cheriton Electric, the top-liners were "Fantomas, No. 5," and "Bloomsbury Burglars."—Mr. Norman Matthews, proprietor and manager of the Alhambra, Sandgate, has been running variety as chief attractions. On Sundays pictures are being shown.—At Hythe, Mr. A. Haag has a comfortable house in the Picture Palace, and reports satisfactory business. "The Golden Beetle" and "The Fatal Three" were much appreciated by good audiences, while Pimple in "The House of Distemperly" was conducive to much amusement.

EXTENSIVE STUDIO ON THAMES-SIDE.

We are told that the supremacy of America in rapid film manufacture is to be challenged by the Samuelson Film Company, an extensive organisation which has acquired the large estate of Worton Hall, at Isleworth, for elaborate film productions. Miss Vesta Tilley will open the studio in the presence of the Press, and a representative gathering of the cinema world, on Wednesday, July 1st, at 12 noon.

EALING AND HANWELL.

So excellent are the programmes submitted at the various local theatres that there has been no great "slackening off" during the warm weather. At the Walpole last week, "The Heart of Midlothian" and "Iron and Steel" were featured by Mr. Percy. Professor Sugarman now conducts the Walpole orchestra, which numbers about eighteen musicians.—The programmes at the Broadway Cinema were also as usual of a high-class nature. "A Good Little Devil" and "Vengeance of the Air" were the two features.—Nothing was wanting in the films shown at the Kinema last week. "Kronstradt," "Love the Victor" and "Life being the pick of the programmes. "The Shadows of a Great City" and "Port of Doom" are now being screened.—The system of ventilation makes the atmosphere in the de Luxe delightfully cool and sweet. Good business was done here last week with "The Secret of the Moulin Rouge" and "Raised from the Ranks." Over £5 was collected in aid of Mr. A. Pearson's appeal for the blind when "Those that Dwell in Darkness" was shown the latter part of the week. "A Legacy of Vengeance" and "Life's Bitter Dregs" are being starred this week.—Great enterprise was shown at the Hanwell Grand last week, when Mr. Hughes booked Edison's kinetophone. The theatre was packed out each evening, the construction of the building enabling it to be heard to great advantage. The programmes are of a first-class character here, and the pictures are excellently projected by an Ernemann machine.

"NATIONAL" RELEASES.

Two excellent throwaways are to hand from the Albion Exclusives, Limited, of Greek Street, W., who have issued two well got up booklets for their features, "Rob Roy" and "For the Wearing of the Green." The former is stated to follow the lines of Sir Walter Scott's famous novel very faithfully, while the latter, a 2,000 ft. subject, is an excellent Domino production. The greatest of care has, in each case, been exercised by the producers to obtain the correct atmosphere and dress of the period, and the releases should each prove an excellent attraction.

SOLD FROM CARDIFF.

The success of the "Silent Empire" and "Empress" projectors is well exemplified by recent orders secured by the Cardiff branch of W. Butcher and Sons, Limited. The machines have been, or are about to be, installed at the following new theatres:—Cecil Theatre, Treforest (two); Cinema, Tonyrefail (two); Cinema, Blaengarw (two); and similar numbers at the Palace, Gorseinon; Picturedrome, Aberavon; and People's Palace, Penydarreum. Other orders include one each for the Workmen's Hall, Cwmaman, Aberdare, and Pavilion at Pontnewydd. Mr. Wilkinson, who is in charge of the firm's Cardiff branch, is usually in attendance and ready to give advice on machines or film hire.

SCARBOROUGH SHOWS.

The question of the Grand Picture House licence previously mentioned in THE BIOSCOPE, is still occupying the attention of the justices, and a further temporary licence has been granted. The further application was made before the Mayor and other magistrates, by Mr. Tasker Hart, on behalf of Mr. H. A. Whitaker. Mr. Hart explained that the previous temporary licence expired on Saturday, and as a special meeting of the magistrates would be held on July 3rd, he asked for the convenience of the bench that a temporary licence should be granted until that date, when he would apply for a permanent licence. He believed the structure of the cinema would now entirely satisfy the Bench.—The Mayor, in granting the temporary licence, said the Bench wished to impress strongly on the applicant the absolute necessity that all outstanding requirements should be completed to the full satisfaction of the authorities before a full licence was applied for.—Mr. Hart said that practically the whole of the work had been completed to the satisfaction of the Borough Engineer and the Town Clerk, with the exception of a canopy, which did not concern a court, but was a matter between his client and the Corporation.—For this week Mr. Parnell (Mr. Whitaker's manager), had "By the Cross" under "exclusive" rights at the Grand. This was for the first three days, and for the second three the features were "Protea II" and "The Shattered Crown," and all three proved strong attractions.—At the Palladium, Mr. Catley's screening of "She Stoops to Conquer" in the early part of the week, and "Beauty and the Barge" in the latter part turned to good advantage.—The Olympia found a great attraction in Messrs. Gaumont's film of "The Wreck of the Empress of Ireland," which was retained for the whole of the week. "The Black Gang," "The Great Python Robbery" and "From Dancer to Duchess" were amongst the week's specials.—Included in two excellent programmes at the Picturedrome were "The White Feather," "In Convict Garb," "His Last Fight" and "Price of Thoughtlessness." In addition, Mr. Quinton Gibson had a pleasing array of comedies and travel films.—At the Theatre Royal Cinema, Messrs. Quinton Gibson and E. L. Gasside had "The Penitents" and "The Pearl Necklace" as "star" pictures.

CAPITOL DRAWS CROWD.

A gratifying success has attended the efforts of the Capitol Film Company since their advent to the Trade and we are pleased to hear that their latest exclusives, "Shadows of the Moulin Rouge," "Which is the Lady?" and "The House of Desolation" are keeping up the name of the house as attractions for the exhibitor.

ATTRACTIONS AT WORCESTER.

"The Lady of Monsoreau" was the means of filling the exchequer of the Arcade Cinema during the early part of last week, and for the latter part the exclusive was "The Doctor's Honour." It is interesting to note the determined bid for popularity made by the manager, Mr. Milton, who spares no effort to put really fine films before his patrons. He has also had the spacious building redecorated throughout. The musical part of the programme is up to a high level, under the able directorship of Mr. Price. Mr. Milton is providing patrons with a programme, on which may be found a synopsis of the films, and this he contends will greatly enhance the interest. For this week's programme the features will be "Robin Hood and Maid Marian," and for the latter part of the week "The Port of Doom."—The Empire Picture Palace does not mean to be left behind, and is now in course of rebuilding. A large stage will be used for variety turns, which are contemplated in the near future. Competition will no doubt be keen in this town shortly, for there is soon to be opened a new palace.

THE WELLS-BELL CONTEST.

FORTHCOMING OLYMPIA EVENT.

It is now fairly common knowledge that the contest between Bombardier Wells and Colin Bell, the Australian, which takes place on June 30th at Olympia, London, is fraught with the utmost importance to both men.

BOMBARDIER WELLS.

Special cinematograph pictures are to be taken of this great sporting event, and the rights for these will, it is stated, be controlled by the Gerrard Film Company, Limited. These will be ready for exhibition on July 2nd, according to latest advice.

SCOTTISH NEWS AND NOTES.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mid-June, although seeing a diminution in the number of picture-goers, has not proved the bogey several of the exhibitors expected. So far as the city is concerned, 1914 is panning out better than was anticipated.

An agreeable innovation was made this week at La Scala, when the La Scala Vocal Quartette contributed several items to the already excellent programme. On Friday I looked in, and at 4 o'clock in the afternoon found the large hall well filled, while in the evening seats were at a premium. The Quartette's numbers were excellently rendered, and the effect was very pleasing. Mr. Kelly, the general manager, is enjoying a well-earned holiday, and Mr. Stewart, the second in command, makes an excellent substitute.

At the Picture House, where the programme is distinguished for its superior attractions, the chief items of the week were "Outwitted," "The Cry of Innocence," "Honour Redeemed," and "At the Bottom of the Sea."

"The Top of the World in Motion" was the exclusive item in the programme at the Salon during the first part of the week, and proved an attraction. The remainder of the items were evenly balanced, and included a fine show of topicals, the Golf Championship and the great Glasgow fire claiming the honours. The projection of the pictures continues to be very good, and the music is a special feature of the entertainment.—Mr. Harry Burdette, at the Cinema House, still features Kinoplasticon, but the remainder of the programme is not allowed to be eclipsed.

The City Picture Palace, though with a smaller capacity than many of its competitors, keeps up its attendances every day, and it is Mr. Waddell's selection of varied and interesting programmes which accomplishes this much-desired end. Mr. Waddell has acquired the knack of gauging just what his patrons like best, and gives it to them "every time."

The success of the Empress is undoubted, as, with a holding capacity of over 2,000, this hall is nightly well packed.—The business done at the St. George's Cross Picture House makes a visit always a pleasure. To see well-filled benches gives a good impression, and proves the capability of the management. In all my visits to St. George's I have never yet found Mr. Twaddle with a poor house.

"Germinal" justified its selection at the De Luxe, where Mr. Butt had the Zola masterpiece screened for the first three days of the week. The other items were well chosen, and, with the topicals of the week, a most interesting programme was presented and highly appreciated.

One of the most popular houses in Glasgow is the Argyle Electric, and the reasons for its popularity are threefold—good pictures, good projection, and good music. Mr. M'Gaw sees to it that all three are up to a high level, and good business is the result.

"Jim, the Penman" was a great attraction at the St. Enoch Picture House at the beginning of this week, and "The Price of a Ruby" will ensure a good week-end attendance.—The picture season at the Royal Princess, where Mr. Cumming is the moving spirit, is proving a splendid success. "The Jew," "The Road to Ruin," and other big attractions have already been shown, and last week the "star" was "Antony and Cleopatra." The lengthy Cines production did not belie its reputation, and was a magnet which drew well-filled houses.

At Glasgow's "original"—the Charing Cross—Mrs. Stewart entertains her patrons in a lavish manner, the bill of fare always containing many tempting items. Fine dramas, such as this week's stars, "The Clerk," "Tricked by a Photo," and laughable comedies by Lubin and Keystone, are always appreciated, and crowds are still the rule.

"The Curse of War" is this week being shown at the Cathcart Picture House as the star attraction, and is well backed up by a good selection of comedies. "On Secret Service" is also included. Mr. Cuthbertson secured a very successful topical of a local bowling green garden party the other day, and the screening of the picture was quite an event out Cathcart way.

SCOTTISH TRADE NOTES.

Although the holiday and summer season is now with us, the Trade in Scotland is as busy as it was in the middle of winter, especially the houses undertaking topical work. At Messrs. Gaumont's all departments are going exceptionally well. General programmes are keeping up well, and several well-known houses are showing complete Gaumont programmes with much success. The exclusive department is extremely busy, and earning a fine reputation. In the topical line, the great fire at the Kingston Docks, Glasgow, on Wednesday was filmed by Mr. Harries and Mr. Carrington, of London, who "happened" on the spot at the opportune moment, and under the direction of Mr. Booth 300 ft. of fine "firework" was secured. The camera men did not return till well in the afternoon, but by 5 o'clock copies were on show in thirteen halls in Glasgow, and a copy was dispatched and shown in Newcastle the same evening. Copies were also shown in Edinburgh, Inverness and Aberdeen. On Friday the great disaster on the Highland Railway was also filmed.

Messrs. Pathé Frères are experiencing a good time with their coloured and other exclusives. "The King of the Air," "The Curse of War," "Germinal," and the newer "Rocambole" and "Sleuth Hound" series are proving winners, and are in great demand. The accessories department is doing good business, and last week two outfits were supplied, one going to Mr. Ayres, the new proprietor of the Electric, Springburn, and the other to the Royal Theatre, Dundee. Mr. Jowett has made many friends since coming to Scotland, and is pulling in the business.

The Bendon Trading Company, always up-to-date, have several special exclusives on the list at present, and bookings for these and ordinary programmes are in a healthy state. Topicals are a speciality with the Bendon Company, and the great fire in Glasgow was successfully filmed and shown in many halls in Glasgow and district.

The B.B. Pictures, Limited, have a fine series of exclusives at present on their offer lists, and the buyings at this popular house include many of the finest releases on the market. The demand for programmes and "specials" continues good, and the firm's camera man is kept busy.

A visit to the Ideal Film Renting Company, Limited, elicited the information that as far as business went, the good report still continues. Mrs. Jack has an excellent list of "specials," and the feature list contains most of the best. Bookings for exclusives keep up well, "The Jew," "The Neglected Wife" and "The Money God" doing especially well.

The many friends of Mr. John Green, of Messrs. Green's Film Service, will be sorry to hear that he is at present suffering from a severe attack of pneumonia, and will, I am sure, wish him a speedy recovery. Mr. Fred Green is at present deputising in the film department, and reports excellent business. Topicals of the great fire on Thursday, the High Street disaster on Friday, and the school children's day on Friday were all successfully filmed. Messrs. Green have secured copies of the famous "Kathlyn" and "Lucille Love" serials, and are now booking orders in rotation. The bookings for the Bannockburn Sexcentenary are rapidly filling up.

Messrs. Hibberts, of Glasgow and Edinburgh, are enhancing their reputation every day, and the energies of Mr. Page at the Glasgow office are having their effect. The firm's exclusives are being extensively shown.

The "houses" in the allied trades—electricians, etc.—are holding their own with competing firms, and Messrs. Chalmers, Limited, and Fairlie and Sons, are both busy on large contracts, while Messrs. Paterson, furnishers, have also several additional contracts in hand.

On Sunday last a special Trade show of several parts of the new Selig "Kathlyn" serial was shown in Messrs. Gaumont's projecting theatre. There was a crowded attendance.

Mr. Alex. Stewart, the Glasgow representative of the Trans-Atlantic and Victus Film Companies, reports good business for both houses. The latter's "Woe to the Conquered" is a fine film, and is booking well.

HAPPENINGS AT HULL.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

With summer now in, and the hot weather upon us, the various exhibitors in Hull are placing before the public the advantages of their particular hall during the blazing hot weather. "Cooler inside than out," and such notices as this, continually meet my eye as I move about amongst the cinemas. The halls doing the best business at this time of the year, I notice, are those making the most of their special cooling arrangements.

By the way, it is said that ingenuity and enterprise know no bounds, and there is a good deal of truth in this, especially amongst cinema managers. One gentleman (I hear from his own lips) has hit upon a novel idea for inducing his patrons to visit him during the hot weather, and for "cooling" them when they are inside. The manager in question purposes giving away ices to all visiting the cinema during the next month or two. This is quite an original idea, and perhaps one better than the system of free afternoon tea, which is in vogue at several of the Hull picture palaces.

Whilst on this subject I might mention the enterprise of Messrs. Field, the well-known cafe proprietors of Hull, in connection with their Bridlington branch. The café on the Esplanade has been reconstructed as a lounge cinema. You go to the café in the ordinary way, occupy your lounge and order your coffee and biscuits, and at the same time are entertained to a delightful cinematograph exhibition, free of extra charge. As an instance of the class of picture shown, I might mention "Amid Raging Beasts," "The Chevalier de Maison Rouge," and "Beauty and the Barge."

Messrs. Gaumont's feature film of the Empress of Ireland disaster has been shown at many of the Hull cinemas this week. I have heard much comment on the enterprise of the well-known producers in securing the remarkable picture, so full of interesting incidents connected with the terrible affair, which has moved the world. There was a big rush to see it, and we have seen great evidence of the value of topicals. The Palace Theatre of Varieties (Moss Empires, Limited) had a copy of the film, and advertised it extensively with special bills. At all the cinemas where it was shown it was made a feature of the week. A little enterprise of this sort speaks volumes for the value of the cinema.

There is an interesting event at the Theatre de Luxe, Anlaby Road, this week, Mr. R. S. Comber having quite a novel attraction for the full six days. A very fine picture of Red Indian life is being screened, and Red Beaver, a Sioux Indian, is describing the incidents depicted. Red Beaver is in full costume and "war paint," and is one of the genuine sort, coming from South Dakota, U.S.A. In addition, Mr. Comber is screening a couple of excellent two-part dramas, "The Secret of the Mill" and "For Another's Crime."

The East Hull Picturedrome had two good attractions in "The Hidden Death" and "Officer Jim." Mr. Charles MacKay is keeping up the good reputation of the Picturedrome by arranging for the newest and most attractive fare. Last week, for example, he showed "Iron and Steel" and "All For His Sake."

The usual order of things might be reversed, and there is some reason in saying that the more you know Mr. W. R. Nicholson, of the Hessle Road Picture Palace the less do you understand him. You just begin to get used to one kind of noevlty when he suddenly changes to another. Indeed, it is quite interesting to keep an eye on this popular West Hull cinema. Recently Con O'Kelly, the Hull boxing champion, attended the performance by special invitation, and as there was a heated newspaper controversy at the time as to whether or not O'Kelly should box Gunner Moir in the beautiful City Hall, there was more than usual interest in the visit. Mr. Nicholson also secured a special boxing picture for three days while the topic was warm. The announcement issued later that "Con O'Kelly says our pictures are the best in Hull" attracted attention in the way of Hessle Road.

One day—or rather night—recently I wandered into the isolated Wincolmlee district, where, calling in at the Oxford in Oxford Street, I was pleased to see Mr. J. Young Brown still doing satisfactory business. Mr. Brown has just taken over the Coliseum at Beverley, and is shortly opening out at Hedon, it being his intention to organise a circuit at these three halls, each of which will be run on popular lines and with three changes a week. Recent successes at the Oxford have been achieved with "Caste," "Zuma, the Gipsy," "A Wild Ride," "Secret Service Sam," "Into the North," and "The Forbidden Way."

Wedding Gift from the Trade.

A convincing testimony to the camaraderie obtaining throughout the Trade was furnished by the very interesting presentation which was made to Mr. H. Cluett Lock, by the film renters and publishers, on the occasion of his marriage to Miss Queenis Ward. The combined gift made to the popular secretary of the Film Renters' Association took the form of an oak dining-room suite, comprising sideboard, dining table and chairs, mirror, clock, hearth suite and carpet, these being supplied by Messrs. Waring and Gillow, Limited.

The following is a list of subscribers:—

The almost unanimous response on the part of the members of the Manufacturers' Association, as well as the Renters' Association, may be regarded by the recipient as a high testimonial to the satisfaction he has given in the office which he has held for the past three years. The subscription was limited to half a guinea, and a sum of £46 was collected.

We extend our congratulations and hearty good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Lock, and have much pleasure in publishing the accompanying letter of thanks and appreciation:—

To the Editor of THE BIOSCOPE.

SIR,—I should like, if you will allow me through the columns of your esteemed journal, to express the very keen appreciation I feel at the handsome presentation made to me by the film renters and publishers on the occasion of my marriage. The gift is one that will always remind me of the kindly and hearty co-operation and assistance I have received at all times from every member of the Trade.

Thanking you in anticipation for your kindness.—Yours faithfully,

H. CLUETT LOCK.

RECORD RUN RESULTING.

Messrs. Moss Empires (bioscope department) have evidently got a good thing in the film of Walter Howard's play, "The Midnight Wedding." Their astute manager, Mr. A. J. Tetlow, informs us that the film has already been booked for over 400 theatres and is, in a number of cases, being rebooked on account of its initial success. Exhibitors would do well to look in at the Charing Cross Road establishment in order to obtain particulars of other "notables" which are promised by this enterprising syndicate.

"ENGLAND'S MENACE."

The successes of the London Film Company, which it has been our pleasant task to record on many occasions, have led us to expect a very high standard of production from its studios. Nothing has been left undone to establish this company's claim to a pre-eminent position in the front rank of the world's producers. Writers of distinction, actors of ability and repute have been pressed into its service, and their work directed and reproduced with every advantage of artistic feeling and technical skill. Such adaptations as "The House of Temperley," "She Stoops to Conquer," and the series of comedies from Mr. W. W. Jacobs' stories have led the public to expect much from the London Film Company's studios, and every production is looked forward to with eager anticipation.

In many respects "England's Menace" may be regarded as the most successful of the company's productions. The writer of film dramas starts with an advantage over the adaptor, who works under restrictions which are imposed by translation from one medium to another, and it is gratifying to note the unqualified success of an original work by a writer of well-known ability and sound experience who has made a special study of drama for the film. Mr. Bannister Merwin, who is well known as a writer of short stories and as the editor of a popular magazine, has greatly added to his reputation since the fascination of the screen led him to devote his talents to the cinematograph, and has done much to raise the standard of its literature.

In "England's Menace" Mr. Merwin has given us a story sounding a clear patriotic note, unfolded with admirable directness and simplicity, masterly in its construction, and containing elements of drama which are essential to the vitality of work either for the stage or the screen. The main idea of utilising the scientific toy of two intelligent children to foil the plans of a foreign enemy is delightfully ingenious, and worked out with a skill which renders it as plausible as it is original, while the spontaneous burst of applause with which the audience on Friday morning greeted the discovery of the burnt code was a remarkable testimony to the author's inventive skill.

As director of this fine work, Mr. Harold Shaw has greatly added to the reputation he gained by his masterly production of "The House of Temperley," and the London Film Company and the actors engaged may be congratulated on having the services of so sympathetic a producer, the groupings and stage-management in every instance—the Council of the foreign King, the scene in the Admiral's cabin, and the final dismissal of the Ambassador, to quote a few instances typical of the general result—enabling the actors engaged to display their talents to the best possible advantage. The arranging of dramatic tableaux is, however, only an item in the work of a cinematograph producer, and it is the more expansive scenes, the fleet of battleships, the glimpses of England by night, and the exciting ride through the heart of London, which testify most obviously to Mr. Shaw's artistic skill. Could an actor less indispensable than Mr. Vincent Clive have been substituted at the moment of impact, a more convincing motor smash might have been effected, but the London Film Company can hardly be expected to take any risk which might deprive it of any member of the very talented company which contributes so much to the success of this film.

The English actor has adapted himself to this new medium with remarkable facility, and this particular stock company, composed of many favourite players who have already by their work on the screen added to reputations gained on the stage, give a touch of distinction to their work which is a feature of these productions. They look like the princes and statesmen they are cast to play—in some cases almost startlingly so—carrying conviction into their work, and only proving themselves better actors than many statesmen by the greater effect of their policy. With a long and admirably balanced cast, most of them well-known figures on the London stage, though many are content to appear modestly anonymous, it is difficult to give precedence to anyone, each is so excellent in his particular degree. Mr. Lewis Gilbert as the foreign King, with his counsellors of State, gives a fine picture of courtly ceremonial; Mr. Charles Rock, who achieves a brilliant make-up with the aid of facial expression and an eye-glass, plays the Prime Minister with a fine sense of dramatic power; Mr. Gerald Ames and Mr. Vincent Clive give clever touches of individual character to two parts which might easily have been rendered conventional if played with less restraint; Mr. Arthur Holmes-Gore infuses a pleasant personality into the Secretary, who is the father of Lady Betty Talbot, the heroine of the play. This delightful child is beautifully played by Miss Edna Flugrath. Her performance is one of great personal charm. She never steps out of the character of the child. The part is one that makes many demands on the experience of the actress, but even when threading the London traffic on a motor-cycle or solving a cryptic dispatch with a celerity creditable even to the intelligence of a daughter of a Prime Minister's secretary, she is always the spontaneous and fascinating child. Her work is greatly assisted by a clever young gentleman who plays her brother.

We must not omit a tribute to the work of Mr. Ernest Palmer, who is responsible for the photography. In a production on this scale much depends on the technical quality. It was an exceedingly happy inspiration to contrast the imposing grandeur of the oncoming battleship with the views of London slumbering at night under the shadow of the dome which is her crowning glory, the peaceful country villages, and the old relic of our former naval triumphs—and these pictures are photographic studies which could not be excelled, and possess a picturesque interest which could not be equalled by any country in the world.

The author, the producer, the actors, and the photographer have worked together with perfect accord, the result being a picture which is not only high in its tone and purpose, but contains all those elements which will render it vastly popular with the public.

Birmingham News and Notes.

Despite the wave of heat which has been experienced in Birmingham during the past week, exhibitors seem to be holding their own remarkably well. Strong programmes are being billed up all the way round.

I paid a call at the Balsall Heath Road Picture House during last week, and found business exceedingly good. Nothing has been spared by the management to make the hall thoroughly cool and suitable for the hot weather. The extraordinary coolness of this theatre is secured by means of a special ventilation system, whereby cool, fresh air is drawn from beneath a bridge adjoining the theatre above the River Rea. "His Guiding Star" proved a very popular picture last week, and "The Fire Bugs" is booked exclusively for the first part of this week.

The management of the Scala Theatre, Smallbrook Street, still continues to place appetising dishes, in the shape of the most attractive releases, before its high-class audiences. Business here is, as ever, very satisfactory, and the popularity of this hall is going up by leaps and bounds. Mr. Graham Cutts, the manager here, informs me that Miss Ivy Close in "The Lure of London" attracted great business during last week. A film depicting the Empress of Ireland disaster was also a very popular item on a well-selected programme.

The management of the Elite Theatre, Bordesley Green, showed great wisdom in booking "Was She Justified?" for last week, and extraordinarily good business resulted from this selection. Excellent variety turns are included with the pictures, and there are two houses nightly—at 6.50 and 8.50 p.m. Prices are 3d. and 4d., and a very cosy lounge and a good view of the screen 6d. An attractive item on the programme consists of special orchestral displays every Wednesday evening.

Looking in to see Mr. Harris, of the Imperial, Moseley Road, I found things progressing very satisfactorily, and an appreciative audience in a delightfully cool hall. During last week "All in Vain" proved a most popular star. Mr. Harris runs matinées on Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays, with a continuous evening performance from 6.30.

Mr. A. O. Purnell, who is managing the Grand, Soho Road, Handsworth, continues to screen selected programmes to good business nightly.—The Rookery Picture House, Handsworth, which is under the management of Mr. McDonald, has established for itself a popularity that is built upon several excellent features of the hall. The interior is very spacious, cool and well ventilated, and the seating accommodation is of the very best. A most attractive feature of the programme is a solo rendered each evening by Miss R. Savage.—The Bristol Street Picture House did good business last week when screening "The Actress."

Mr. Williams, who is well known as the manager of Messrs. Gaumont's local branch, informs me that he is shortly leaving us, and his place will be taken by Mr. Stevens. The Birmingham Trade, of which Mr. Williams is a highly respected member, will join with me in regretting his departure and wishing him every success in the new position he will be taking up. Business at this branch is in a particularly flourishing state, and a long line of successful exclusives shows heavy bookings. "She Stoops to Conquer," which was so well received at the New Street Picture House a few weeks ago, is having a most successful tour round the Birmingham picture houses. "A Fight for Millions," "Life," and "The White Lie," are all going strong. "Fantomas, the False Magistrate," has created great business wherever it has been shown, and several Birmingham renters have purchased copies of this successful feature.

Mr. Draper, who has managed the Saltley Picture Palace so successfully, has now entered into the renting business with the Midland Exclusive Film Company, of West Bromwich. On the occasion of this gentleman's leaving he was presented by his directors with a gold watch as a mark of their appreciation of his services. The Midland Exclusive Company is handling "The Sign of the Cross," "The Bride of Jerico" and "At the Mercy of Niagara."

Mr. Bradbury, Masonic Hall, screened "Those Who Dwell in Darkness" and collected in aid of the Blind Institution the sum of £12 10s. on the Thursday and Friday. The film produced a great effect upon the audiences — judging by the way in which they gave an excellent response.

"A MILLION BID."

A BROADWAY STAR FEATURE FILM.

The eager interest with which this fine film has been anticipated since the first reports of its great success in America has been accentuated by the story of how it came to be adapted for the screen. We understand that it is from a play by Mrs. Sydney Drew, entitled "Agnes," which had no more than a moderate success on the stage. Mrs. Drew's health rendered a rest in a more congenial climate imperative, and to occupy the time she was persuaded to adapt her play for the film. Its success was instantaneous and unqualified, but Mrs. Drew, unhappily, did not live to witness its triumph.

It does not invariably happen that the most successful play is the most suitable to adaptation to the film, and in the case of "A Million Bid" it is not easy to imagine a more perfect medium for its representation than is provided by the screen. It is a strongly dramatic story, containing incidents which are original and effective, and constructed with such skill and apparent ease that one cannot but deplore the fact that Mrs. Drew had not earlier turned her attention to a medium over which she shows such mastery. The story gives scope for the full resources of the producer, and presents a succession of dramatic scenes infinite in their variety, and each leading inevitably to a finely effective climax. Though full of action, it still provides unique opportunities to the actors, and the Vitagraph Company has left nothing undone to establish it as one of the important productions of the year.

MISS ANITA STEWART.

The main theme of the story is intensely dramatic. Agnes Belgradin is separated from her lover, Dr. Loring Brent, by her mother's schemes to secure for her a wealthy husband, and Agnes is induced to marry Geoffrey Marshe, a Canadian millionaire, in the belief that Brent has wilfully forsaken her. She and her husband spend their honeymoon on his yacht, attended by a party of friends, for Agnes only consents to the marriage on the condition that she become his wife only in name. Though Marshe has accepted her conditions, he is not inclined to abide by them after marriage. The strained conditions between husband and wife come to a dramatic termination by a collision which occurs at night. Marshe is seriously injured, and Agnes does what she can to save his life. Her efforts are unavailing, and she is forcibly carried to a boat, her husband being left on the sinking vessel. Returning to America, Agnes again meets Loring Brent, and while arranging the affairs of Mrs. Belgradin, who perished in the disaster, her interception of their letters is discovered. The reunited lovers are married, and a life of perfect happiness in the love of her husband and little child atones for the sufferings of the past.

Brent becomes eminent as a brain specialist, and one day is consulted by a patient who, through an accident, has forgotten every detail of his past life previous to the time, five years ago, when he was picked up by fishermen on the coast of France. Dr. Brent agrees to operate, seeing every prospect of restoring his patient's lost memory. Before the operation can take place Agnes recognises in the patient her husband, Marshe, who she thought had perished in the wreck of his yacht. Her situation is desperate. Dr. Brent is the only man who can perform this particular operation. If he knows the truth he will not dare to take such a delicate risk; if the operation succeeds it will mean the wreck of Agnes's home and happiness and a stigma cast on the name of her child. In her agony of doubt she loses all control, and attempts to reach her husband before he commences the operation. She is forcibly restrained, and the operation is carried through successfully, but the tragic flood of recollection which rushes on Marshe is too much for his strength, and he dies before he has a chance of recognising his wife.

This fine drama is produced in a manner which is worthy of the dramatic importance of the subject and the best traditions of the Vitagraph Company. It affords ample opportunities for spectacular effect, which have been treated with a fine realism. A notable feature is the wreck of a steam yacht and its loss at sea. We have had many of these episodes recently, and they have not in every case been absolutely essential to the plot, but in this film the incident is inevitable and the logical explanation of events which follow. It is treated with great restraint; the horrors of the situation are not unduly accentuated, but the whole incident is profoundly impressive, and gives occasion to some of the finest scenes in the play. One of these shows the tragic end of the scheming Mrs. Belgradin, whose ruling passion of greed which has brought about the tragedy of her daughter's life impels her to an attempt to save her jewels, in which act she is trapped in her cabin and goes down with the sinking vessel. Other remarkably fine scenes are those with which Marshe's story of his life after his rescue are illustrated, including a finely arranged gambling scene at Monte Carlo and some pictures of life in a French fishing village, in which the local atmosphere is admirably suggested. Some critics may take slight exception to the dramatic licence which allows Agnes to be present when Marshe is relating his story to the Doctor, but there is nothing to suggest that the scene takes place in Dr. Brent's consulting room, and the Doctor merely shows a sympathetic interest in a romantic story previous to a thorough medical examination. The surgical operation is represented with great discretion and an entire absence of those gruesome details which some producers make use of in their desire for sensational realism. Much depends on the acting, and such judgment has been shown in casting the piece that the members of this talented company have never been seen to greater advantage, and it would be difficult to imagine any alteration in the parts which would not materially weaken the general result. Miss Anita Stewart has proved on many occasions the charm of her personality and the wide range of her capabilities both in comedy and in serious drama. Her performance of the leading rôle sets the seal on her reputation as an emotional actress and places her in the front rank of film favourites. With a wonderful variety in her facial expression, she never loses her charm of manner and appearance, and retains the full sympathy of the spectator throughout. A fine performance is given by Miss Julia Swayne as her fortune-hunting mother, and the last scene is played with tragic power. Mr. E. K. Lincoln as Loring Brent gives distinction to the part by his handsome appearance and sincerity of manner, and is particularly effective in many difficult scenes which require great tact in the handling. He gives individuality to a part which is not so theatrically effective as that of Geoffrey Marshe, admirably played by Mr. Harry Morey. His strong face and intense manner make a commanding figure of the masterful millionaire, and he shows a fine sense of character in the later scenes, during his residence in France, and on the occasion of his breaking the bank at a gambling saloon.

Some perfect character studies are supplied by Mr. Charles Kent and Mr. Gladden James, and a large company, including many well-known players, gives life and vigour to some of the finest crowds we have seen on the screen.

The entire production is a triumph for all concerned, for the quality of the photography, though not shown to the best advantage on our first view of the film, is on the same level of excellence as the rest of the production, and we have no hesitation in prophesying that its reception by a British public will rival the enthusiasm by which it has been received in America.

SWANSEA AND DISTRICT NOTES.

The Carlton Cinema, Swansea, under the management of Mr. Hal Cummings, had a very attractive programme during the week, when the principal attractions were, "A Terrible Night at Sea," "The Leopard Detective" and "The Jew." As usual, the musical programme, arranged by Mr. Fred Adlington, was all that could be desired.

The Picture House has always held a reputation for the excellence of its pictures, its music and the courtesy of its staff, and Mr. N. J. Dix is experiencing good business. "Darkness and Dawn," "Love and Vengeance," "A Son of the Night" and "The House of Distemperley" were the cream of some good pictures shown during the week.

Excellent business continues at the Elysium, where patrons are assured of a good all-round programme. Performances are given twice nightly, with matinées on Mondays, Thursdays and Saturdays, whilst the programmes are changed twice weekly. Included in last week's programmes were "A Fatal Likeness" and "The Bond That Binds Not" as top-liners. An excellent variety turn is provided.

Owing to the unprecedented success which attended the screening of "Orders Under Seal," some time ago, the management of Castle Cinema, Swansea, in response to the numerous requests of its patrons, rebooked the film for last week, with the result that excellent business was again experienced. For the latter half of the week, "Lieut. Daring and the Stolen Invention" and "The Soul of the Desert" were the chief items.

The Uplands Cinema, Swansea, featured "The Iron Man" and "United in Danger." The performance is continuous from 6.30 to 10.30, and not the least attractive feature is the "Cinfonium" orchestral grand organ.

THE BRIGHTON HALLS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The Sunday opening question is never allowed to rest for long in this district. There was a long debate on the subject at the meeting of the Hove Town Council the other day when a proposal to renew the existing licences of the local cinemas for the ensuing twelve months was brought forward. It seems that last year a condition was inserted in the licences to the effect that there should be no Sunday opening, but in spite of this one of the theatres gave Sunday shows with non-flam films. Various methods of dealing with the situation were suggested—among others the refusal of the licence of the offending theatre and the taking of legal proceedings. Counsels of caution, however, eventually prevailed, and the Council decided to grant the licences on the same terms as last year. One of the legal members said there would certainly be a test case or some legislation before the year is out, and advised that some other corporation should be allowed to fight the matter out.

Last week Mr. A. C. Tulk, who runs the Bijou Palace at Shoreham, further along the coast, applied for the renewal of his licence and asked that the present hours of Sunday opening—8 to 10 p.m.—should be extended to 6 to 10 p.m. He mentioned that he had spent some £1,200 on the theatre, and wished to have two shows on Sunday nights. The magistrates refused to grant the request, which was opposed by the local clergy.

The Palladium, King's Road, which through the enterprise of Mr. J. L. Crown has become so popular, is just about to enter on a new phase of its existence. It has been renamed the Palladium Opera House, and while still retaining pictures as an important element in its attraction, Mr. Crown also intends to provide the best and latest theatrical productions for its patrons. A start will be made on July 27th, when Mr. Seymour Hicks and Miss Ellaline Terriss will enter upon a week's engagment in "Broadway Jones." The idea is to run pictures from 2.30 to 8 p.m., and dramatic productions afterwards.

Mr. Ben Court, who has just retired from the position of manager of the Grand Theatre, was presented with a diamond pin and stud by his brother managers in Brighton last week. Among cinema proprietors associated with the testimonial being Mr. W. J. Grimes of the Court Theatre, and Mr. J. L. Crown of the Palladium. Mr. Court was responsible for the introduction of pictures on Sundays at the Grand Theatre, which proved a very big success.

The Academy Theatre, West Street, which is flourishing under Mr. H. B. Parkinson's able management has had some first-rate films lately, among them being "The Lights o' London" and "Jim, the Fireman." Last Friday a matinée of the last-named production was given in aid of the volunteer section of the Brighton Fire Brigade, under distinguished patronage, and proved very successful.

Mr. Coverdale has arranged another of those competitions, which have proved so successful in the past, at the Court Theatre this week, the idea being to give aspiring cinema actors a chance to show what they can do. Present feature films have included "The Tragedy of the Three M's," "The Fighters of the Plains" and "Vengeance is Mine." The same pictures have been showing to good houses at the Grand Concert Hall, where Mr. Cecil Frere now holds the reins.

Always renowned for its first-rate shows, the Duke of York's has been doing good business with "A Romance of Old Brittany," "By Unseen Hands," "Jane Eyre," and other popular films. Mr. G. Yate Ashwell discharging his managerial duties with his accustomed tact and success.

PLYMOUTH AND DISTRICT NOTES

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

Last week was a particularly noteworthy one in the cinema life of Plymouth, for not only had one the customary picture theatres to make a selection from but the borough of Plymouth's principal theatre, the Royal, gave itself over to pictures. I was privileged to get a view of the first performance at this delightful theatre of a series of travel pictures entitled "All the World Over," and it was about as pleasant a two hours' recreation as I have spent in my life. In the space of a couple of hours the audience was taken practically round the world, even starting from the building where it was being presented. The lecturer, Mr. G. Mayor-Cooke, explained the tour in a most interesting fashion, and his anecdotes of personal experiences were most enjoyable.

The weather no doubt affected the "treasury" of most theatres last week, the heat in this district, if nowhere else, being of a tropical character. Profiting by keen competition, the programmes generally were of a most attractive kind.

At the Belgrave, Plymouth, the management made a feature of "Michael Arnold and Dr. Lynn," and it was deservedly highly appreciated. Two other good dramas were shown, entitled "In the Dredger's Claw" and "The Banker's Son." Comedies of a very amusing type were "Diana's Dress Reform" and "A Bottled Romance." A fine travel film showing picturesque spots of Switzerland aroused much interest. As a change of programme in mid-week "The Rajah's Diamond Rose" was the outstanding picture.

At the Cinedrome patrons were enabled to see a second edition of the fine "Protea" story, and it attracted good business. There were several other good films presented.

At the popular Andrew's Palace the tit-bit for the first there days of the week was "The Curse of War," a subject that left behind a good impression.

Mr. Knowles, at the de Luxe, was well supported considering the climatic conditions. A dramatised adaptation of Charles Reade's story "Hard Cash" was the principal film. "Sawdust and Salome" provided many exciting moments, and in another light "Bloomer's Yawn" proved as infectious as it was amusing. A film depicting military life could hardly fail to give enjoyment to persons so familiar with soldiers as Plymouth folks are, and "The First Endorsement" met with popular approval.

"Lady of the Camellias" was enjoyed by patrons of the Theatre Elite, Plymouth, so admirably conducted by Mr. Charles Halderson Rundle. Two most humorous films were also exhibited in "Scotland for Ever" and "Through the Ages." In mid-week a thrilling story of the North-West Mounted Police, with the title "Romance of the North-West," was introduced with good results, and among the other films were "Fall of '64" and "The Under Sheriff."

NOTTINGHAM & DISTRICT NOTES.

In making a call at the handsome Picture House, Long Row, last week, I was pleased to see Mr. T. P. Henness back once again at the head of affairs. Much sympathy has been expressed by the inhabitants of Nottingham at the very trying time the popular manager and his wife have recently gone through. While spending the first few days of his honeymoon, Mr. Henness was taken very seriously ill, and an operation had to be performed for appendicitis. After a critical period the patient made steady progress, but other complications eventually arose, and thus he was kept an invalid for about seventeen weeks. Mr. Henness expressed to me his great appreciation of the kindness shown to him in many ways, and especially the gratitude he felt for the more than generous consideration shown him by the Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Limited. I wish him and his wife every future happiness.

The Picture House has done much to popularise classical fiction amongst people who have little taste for reading, and the latest success in this direction is "She Stoops to Conquer." Golfers turned up in strong force for demonstrations last week by J. H. Taylor; and "Peeps into Pussyland" was a delightful item for children, and "America to Europe by Airship" proved another unqualified success.

Patrons of the Goldsmith Street Picture House will be sorry to hear that Mr. Vernon Hague, who has been the manager of the Palace since its opening, has resigned in order to take up a similar position at Boston. Mr. V. Hamilton, who is well-known for his connection with Hamilton's Diorama, fills the vacancy. Good houses greatly appreciate the strong programmes and first-class music provided at this house. "His Guiding Star," "Decree of Justice" and "Macbeth," featuring Mr. Arthur Bourchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh, together with some splendid marine views in "A Storm on the Welsh Coast" have been very popular screenings.

A new order has recently been sent out by the Nottingham Town Clerk to exhibitors in the city with regard to an addition by the Watch Committee to Regulation No. 23. This reads as follows:—"It appears that certain films, although certified by the British Board of Film Censors to be satisfactory, are yet subject to a condition that such films should not be exhibited at performances when children are present. No such films shall be exhibited or displayed when children are present at the performances if the certificate of the said Board of Censors states that the films are unsuitable for exhibition before children."

I called in at the Scala on one of the warm evenings we experienced last week, and found a well-filled house enjoying the excellent fare provided by Mr. Frederic Smith. Kinoplastikon is proving a decided attraction, and will have at least a three months' run. "The Devil's Eye" and the exploits of that remarkable heroine, "Protea," are the latest "thrillers," while the comedies and travel subjects are always well chosen.

"In Satan's Toils," "The Devil's Eye" and "The Children of Captain Grant" have accounted for big business at the Victoria, where Mr. Green controls affairs in a very able manner. Afternoon teas are served to patrons in the higher-priced seats, and the assistants are kept busy from 4 to 5 o'clock.

Mr. Gunn has the happy knack of hitting the popular taste in his selection of programmes at the Globe, and this comfortable cinema was again packed with a delighted audience when I called on Saturday. "The Master of the Mine" and "The Opium Smokers" were the stars.

ITALIAN NOTES.

By Gentile Miotti.

Santori Films.—This is a new Italian firm which has just been founded at Rome by M. Alberini, Italy's first cinematographer, in chronological order. It was he who founded many years ago the first Italian cinematograph company, which eventually became the Cines Company of to-day.

Morgana Films.—The foundation of this important company has been one of the most notable recent events in the Italian film world. Among its directors are Comm. Levi and On. di Bugnano, two well-known personalities in Italian financial circles, whilst its artistic director is M. Nino Martoglio, one of the most popular Italian writers of the day. The first film of the Giovanni Grasso series, "Canitan Blanco," with the great Sicilian actor in the title rôle is eagerly awaited.

Vidali Films.—This is the name of a new producing company founded at Genoa by M. Giovanni Vidali, lately director-general of the Pasquali Company of Turin. This new firm will devote itself chiefly to historical productions, in which class of work M. Vidali is a specialist, having been responsible for "Spartacus," "The Last Days of Pompeii," and other masterpieces.

The well-known actor, Albert Capozzi has left the Pasquali Company to commence producing on his own account a brand of films which will be issued under his name. The celebrated comedian, Polidor, has also left the Pasquali Company to produce a special series of films which will be issued for the whole world by the Ambrosio Company.

Corona Films.—This is a new producing company which is being founded at Turin with a capital of 200,000 frs.

Savoia Films.—The Savoia Company, which has been a private property hitherto, has been turned into a "Société Anonyme," with a capital of 3,000,000 frs. The director-general is Dr. Gariazzo.

Cenisio Films.—This new company has just been founded at Turin. Its studios are now in course of construction.

Fotodramma Films.—This new firm, whose studios are at Grugliasco, near Turin, has been founded with American capital. Its first film, which should be seen shortly, will be a version of Boito's well-known opera, "Mefistofele" ("Mephistopheles.")

The first Italian cinematograph congress, organised by the well-known journal, La Vita Cinematografica, will be held next month in Rome. Among the important subjects to be discussed is the projected new tax of 36 per cent. on the receipts of cinematograph theatres. Every effort is to be made to combat this proposed tax, which would constitute a serious menace to the development of the industry in Italy.

HALIFAX HINTS.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Many in Halifax were surprised to hear that Mr. Whitworth, manager of the Picture House, Ward's End, was leaving the town. Mingled with the regret, pleasure must, however, be felt in the knowledge that Mr. Whitworth has received a well-earned promotion, in that he left to take up the chief managership of the Picture House, Briggate, Leeds, owned by Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Limited. Mr. Firth, relieving manager for the Company, has taken hold here for one month. Good business has been the rule at the Picture House, the attraction being a special film illustrative of the Empress of Ireland disaster. Another film worthy of mention was "America to Europe by Airship." For the current week two exclusive dramas in "Outwitted" and "Strong Heart" have been secured.

Another change in management which has been received with general regret by the regular patrons of the Electric Theatre, Wards End, is the transferring of the manager, Mr. Leslie Stansfield, who has taken up the duties at the National Electric Theatre, Chatham. During the time Mr. Stansfield had been stationed in Halifax he became very popular, and leaves many friends behind. He is succeeded by Mr. Dean, who hails from Burton, and under his direction the high standard to which we have been accustomed at this house will be assured. A splendid programme was submitted last week, the top-liner being "Paul Sleuth and the Mystic." For this week the fare includes "Locked in Death" and "Max and the Lady Doctor."

Calling in at the de Luxe, Mr. Harmsworth, the manager, informed me that he has been experiencing some very good attendances. He has booked for a future date, "The World, the Flesh and the Devil" exclusive, and has hopes of doing great business with it. "The King Detective" and "Doctor Satan" are chief attractions for the current week.

Under the management of Mr. Thos. Job, the Palladium, King Cross, is able to retain the general standard of excellence with which this popular house started, and continues to draw splendid audiences. For last week "The Watch-Dog of the Deep" proved a capable top-liner. The first three days of this week, Mr. Job has secured as his principal attraction, "The Price of a Necklace," and for the latter part "The House of Fear" is to hold premier position.

Mr. Reg. Watson, manager of the Ideal, Raglan Street, reports good business, splendid programmes always being in evidence. Mr. Watson, until recently, was also the manager of the Picture Theatre, Luddenden Foot, but relinquished his duties when the premises were bought over by a private company a short time ago.

Messrs. Greene's popular theatre, the Gem, Crossley Street, the Picturedrome, King Cross, and the Cosy, Sowerby Bridge, still continue to do remarkably good business. By way of proving their excellence in projecting their films, Messrs. Greene have issued an open challenge to any firm in England to screen a picture with less flicker than theirs, the loser to forfeit £100 to some charitable institution. The "bill-of-fare" at the Gem for the current week includes "Tragedy of Ambition" and "The Pendulum of Justice."

PORTSMOUTH PARS.

There have been one or two changes in management of late. Mr. Hugh W. Lodger, who has been appointed manager of the Shaftesbury Hall (Andrews'), has come from Lower Edmonton, where he had a hall under the same proprietorship. Mr. Lodger has been with Andrews' now four years—first at Inverness, next at Northampton, then at Edmonton—Mr. Arthur Andrews, whom he has now succeeded, having gone to a Bournemouth Hall. Collections for the Mansion House Fund, Empress of Ireland disaster, following appeals by Salvationists last week-end, amounted to about £8.

Mr. S. Treviss, in addition to carrying on the Copnor Theatre, has taken over the Fratton Electric, and the new management has been attended with considerable support. Mr. Treviss believes in putting good class material before his patrons, and this has been one of the principal causes that has made his house at Copnor so successful. A fine presentation, "King of the Air," was a great attraction last week-end, and "By the Cross" was the top-liner in the fore part of this week.

Mr. Harry Tindell, manager of the People's Palace and St. James' Hall, was recently given a benefit performance to mark his four years' connection with the two houses, and I understand it was of a gratifying nature. "The Silent Death" and "A Tudor Princess," have been the star pictures this week, and "'Neath the Lion's Paw" and "Out of the Depths" are the pick of the bunch this week.

Mr. E. Hatfield, sen., one of the directors of the Southsea Theatre, has just returned from a six weeks' visit to America where he visited the works of the Vitagraph Company, the Universal Film Company, the American Biograph Company, etc. He saw the preparation of some first-class productions, one of which "Fox's Millions" will be displayed at this theatre shortly. The principal attractions for crowded audiences last week-end were "The Love Story of Her Youth" and "The Lace-maker's Romance." This week they are "The Mystery of Three Faces" and "'Neath the Lion's Paw."

At the Picture House, Commercial Road, good business was done last week with "She Stoops to Conquer" and "Outwitted," whilst this week "Strong Heart" and pictures of the disaster to the Empress of Ireland were the chief of many excellent lines.

Mr. E. Martin, of the Strand Cinema, Lake Road, tells me that from Monday next he is taking over the Criterion Theatre at Gosport. "The Oath of Stephen Muller" was a big attraction last week. This week's principal picture is entitled "The Heroine of Moulin Rouge."

I have received satisfactory reports as to the patronage which the new Queen Street Cinema is receiving. Mr. Martyne is putting some splendid lines on at this very fine house. The theatre is magnificently equipped—there is no better in the town. Children's matinées are a feature here.

The Victoria Hall, Portsmouth's oldest picture house, in Commercial Road, continues to do well. "His Guiding Star" and "The Finger of Destiny" gave much pleasure last week. The main attractions this week are Asta Nielsen in "Up to Her Tricks" and "Love and Vengeance."

WORLD OF FINANCE.

The following information has been specially compiled for THE BIOSCOPE, and includes a Register of New Companies, Mortgages and Charges, Winding-up Petitions and Orders, County Court Judgments, Reports of Financial Cases, etc., etc.

All inquiries respecting financial matters must be addressed to the Editor, and the envelope marked "Financial."

ACTION DISMISSED.

On June 16th, in the Chancery Division, Mr. Justice Eve gave judgment in an action against the Red Hall Picture Palace Company, Limited, brought by the owners of High House, Farm Lane, Walham Green, W., the plaintiffs claiming an injunction to restrain the continuance of an alleged trespass or encroachment upon their property by the defendants in the building of a picture theatre on adjoining land. The plaintiffs also alleged that the defendants, by their acts, had infringed the plaintiffs' rights of light and had deprived their buildings of their rights of support. This the defendants denied.

After hearing a considerable amount of evidence, his Lordship held that if there had been any further trespass by the defendants in putting up their building the work they had done had improved the plaintiffs' property, and the latter had suffered no damage. The action would be dismissed with costs, except that the defendants must carry out certain work to the plaintiffs' wall.

ADVERTISING SLIDES.

In the Shoreditch County Court, before Mr. Registrar Wickham, Joseph Mordecai, of 195, Lower Clapton Road, N.E., advertisement contractor, sued Joseph Harris, of 34, Watney Street, Stepney, a stock buyer, for £1 10s. re advertisements on a picture palace screen.

The defendant protested that whenever he had been there the advertisement was not shown, whereas the plaintiff stated that the picture palace was opened from 1 o'clock to 11.30, during which time the advertisements were shown a number of times. It was difficult, said witness, to guarantee any particular time for the display, as, for instance, they might have a feature film on that would last two hours, which they could not disturb, whereas another would come on lasting only twenty minutes, and they could show a round of the advertisements. He was quite positive they were shown at regular intervals every night.

Defendant: It ought to be stated clearly on the contract when the advertisement will be shown, otherwise you are entirely at the mercy of the cinema proprietor.

Mr. Whitton (for the plaintiff): We could not do that, as we cannot say when they will be shown.

Defendant: There is a guarantee that they will be shown, so why should not there be a guarantee as to the time. Why should I as an advertiser be entirely at the mercy of the cinema proprietor who has simply to say he has shown them for it to be believed. I say you are no worse off at all if you clearly and honestly state in your contract what time the advertiser can go and see what he is paying for; it is only fair.

Mr. Whitton: You will see, sir, that we could not do that, as for many reasons the show might be delayed, or advanced as the case might be. The proprietor of the hall says he will show them, now says he has shown them, and I say we have acted up to our contract.

The Registrar: I can quite well see that you could never put it in the contract as to the time: that would never do. The defendant was entitled to call evidence as to his allegation that his advertisement was never shown, and adjourned the hearing for that purpose.

BANKRUPTCY.

Gordon Fletcher Hewitt (trading as The Hewitt Film Producing Company, cinematograph film producer, 38, Great Windmill Street, Shaftesbury Avenue, London, late 36, Spring Gardens, Manchester, and formerly 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, Charing Cross, London, having applied to the Manchester County Court for leave to transfer the matter to London, the application duly came before the judge last week. Debtor stated at the first meeting of creditors that he wished to place a proposal before his creditors with a view to carrying on the business, stating that certain moneys were due to him, and arrangements pending, which, if consummated, would be of benefit to the bulk of the creditors. He had also several important advertising schemes on hand which might be brought to fruition. His failure was due to lack of capital, interest on loans expended in the production of films, and the failure to exploit same; and losses by underestimating the cost of films. His Honour directed the matter to be transferred to the Brentford County Court, and cancelled the examination fixed to take place at Manchester.

In Liverpool and District.

At the present time the life of a picture theatre manager in Liverpool, owing to the severe and harassing censorship exercised by the police and justices, is not a particularly happy one. The "City Fathers" are taking more than a parental interest in the subjects chosen for cinematograph entertainments, and frequently exercise their authority, either by decreeing that a picture shall not be shown at children's matinées, or else banning it altogether. Judging by the rapidly increasing list of films which have recently met this fate, the susceptibilities of those responsible grow more delicate every week, with the result that many managers are in despair trying to decide the merits of films submitted. This is more noticeable in some districts than others, and whilst a film has been passed and shown in some localities, it has been forbidden elsewhere. Quite a large number of ordinary dramas that have received popular approval in other cities and towns cannot be shown in Liverpool for this reason. Nobody with the interest of the Trade at heart can object to supervision so long as it is intelligently performed, but the censorship of pictures in this city has lately become so drastic that some different system will have to be adopted to protect the interests of exhibitors. It is always advisable when one is pointing out a fault to, if possible, suggest a remedy. A partial one would be for an inspection of all pictures exhibited at Trade shows, when any objection could be taken before the films reached the exhibitor.

The Queen's, Walton Road, is a popular house, holding nearly 1,000 people. It is being thoroughly redecorated, and the interior when finished will have a handsome appearance. Mr. J. A. Lobb, who is in charge, is keen to obtain the right programme to suit his audience, and in this he is generally successful. He finds two-reel comedies, if they are good, especially popular, and like the majority of Liverpool managers has a good orchestra. On Tuesday a performance was given in aid of the Lord Mayor's fund for those destitute through the Empress of Ireland disaster, the "star piece" for the evening being "Curse of War." Last week, among others, "Lincoln, the Lover," "Turning Point," "Chains of Bondage," "'Neath the Lion's Paw," "Kissing Cup," and "Tale of a Cat" were shown. This week the principal items, in addition to "Curse of War," are "Tested by Fire," "Father's Judgment," and "When the Soul Awakens."

Rice Lane Picture House, Walton, has only been open a few weeks, and is a particularly fine building in point of size, possessing a capacity of about 1,000. The exterior is not very ornamental, but the fittings and appointments inside are all that can be desired. Mr. Eric Thornber, from a similar appointment in Ireland, is the manager, and has reason to be proud of the premises under his control. The balcony is one of the largest in Liverpool, and a first-class lounge has also been provided. The fittings throughout, which are generally admired, are by Beck and Windibank, of Birmingham, and the machine is a Pathé. Prices of admission range from 3d. to 9d., and business so far has been very satisfactory. "Joan of Arc," which was shown recently, scored a success, and last week "In the Sultan's Power," "Waifs," "The Relentlessness of Life," and "Lincoln, the Lover," helped to make an excellent programme. Next week the principal items are "Protea II." and "Lieut. Rose and Sealed Orders."

The Bedford Hall, Walton, lays claim to the distinction of being the first hall in Liverpool built specially for the purpose of a cinematograph entertainment. It certainly has earned a good reputation, as many patrons come a considerable distance. Mr. T. E. Nixon, the manager, late of the Royal Theatre, Darlington, remembered best as Tom Nixon, is well known in the theatrical world, and still has a lingering affection for the old life. With a seating capacity of 1,000, the Bedford seldom has much room to spare, and apart from careful and intelligent selection so far as the pictures are concerned, a special feature is made of the musical programme. With an orchestra of five, some capital music is provided. One of the most successful pictures shown recently was "Orders Under Seal," although there were items in last week's programme, such as "The House of Fear," "Hearts of Women," and "Werner's Love Song," which proved of more than ordinary interest.

The Palais de Luxe had as a special attraction last week "The Curse of the Scarabee Ruby," in addition to pictures of scenes following the Empress of Ireland disaster. Other pictures were "The Terrible Twins" and "Little Billy's Strategy," the latter being a Keystone comedy.

The Lime Street Picture House was also showing "The Terrible Twins," in addition to "The Touch of a Child," "Guilty or Not Guilty," and "A Tangled Cat."

THE EMPIRE CINEMA, RUGBY.

The accompanying illustration is that of the Empire Cinema, Rugby,—a theatre which, in regard to size and cost of erection, is probably typical of a vast number of halls in London and in the provinces. The B.T.H. "Eye-rest" system of indirect lighting which is installed here, is claimed to be the most efficient method of producing the ideal form of artificial illumination. Mazda drawn-wire lamps and X-Ray silvered glass reflectors are contained in an opaque bowl made either of metal or composition, which is suspended by chains or cords from the ceiling. The X-Ray reflectors direct the light on to the ceiling whence it is reflected downwards in a soft and perfectly diffused illumination, which by reason of its beauty, attractiveness and hygienic qualities, is admirably adapted to cinemas and similar interiors.

The main portion of the auditorium at the Empire Cinema, Rugby, measures 34 ft. by 40 ft., and the ceiling is 28 ft. high. It is lighted by a single 24 "Eye-Rest" brass bowl fitting containing ten 80 watt Mazda lamps in X-ray reflectors. Over the balcony, which is 34 ft. by 24 ft., there are two 18 "Eye-Rest" fittings, each containing three 60 watt Mazda lamps. The space underneath the balcony is lighted by two similarly equipped fittings.

The total wattage in the auditorium is thus 1,520 watts, which is certainly not excessive when the area of the hall and the quality and intensity of the resultant illumination are both taken into considerations. In fact, the hall is lighted a good deal more economically than many other similar theatres employing ordinary direct lighting.

All the auditorium lights at the Empire Cinema are controlled by a simple plate metallic dimmer installed in the operator's box. By this means the lamps are gradually dimmed down to a low intensity just before the films and are as gradually raised after the picture has been shown.

The British Thomson-Houston Company, who are of course power engineers and manufacturers as well as illuminating engineers, also supplied the motor generator set for this theatre.

SNIPPETS FROM SOUTHPORT.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Southport is frequently referred to in all parts of the country as "Sunny Southport." During the last few weeks its title has been fully justified, and while in some places managers of picture theatres may have had to be content with smaller houses it is pleasing to state than in Southport, although I have made a tour of all the cinemas here, I have not observed any appreciable reduction in the vast number of supporters which these popular places of amusement attract. This I attribute to the fact that those in charge have never shown any indication of departing from the high standard established when first they made their appeal to the public.

Mr. Geoffrey Hill, who controls the destinies of the house which was the first in the field—the Picturedrome—talking with me the other afternoon, informed me that he has some good things in store, but after all, this is only what we anticipate, as it is an undoubted fact that this popular rendezvous has been the place in the past where hundreds of people have been afforded the opportunity of seeing screened the really big films of the moment. Dealing with the immediate past, Mr. Hill has offered his patrons such splendid pictures as "A Winter's Tale," "A Footballer's Honour," "Children of Captain Grant," "Robin Hood" and "Maid Marian" as the "stars."

It is no exaggeration to state that the Empire Theatre has been before the public eye during the past fortnight more than ever before; in fact, Mr. Fredk. M. Jones has been booming it, and he has had the satisfaction of gazing upon particularly well-filled rows of seats. Personally, I have spent many pleasant hours at the Empire, and fully agree with the remark made by Mr. Jones to me last week, when he contended that in the past he has always aimed at quality and variety. These, indeed, are characteristics of the Empire programmes, and all will be pleased that Mr. Jones intends to keep his eyes upon these two points. Pride of place has been taken by the following recently: "The House of Fear," "The Wilderness Mail," "The Pride of the Circus," and "The Better Way."

"KEYSTONE" NIGHT AT BOLTON.

A RECORD HOUSE.

"All-Keystone Nights" as an attraction for the summer months are catching on all over the country, and Mr. A. E. Mainwaring, of the Western Import Company, is almost daily receiving congratulatory letters from exhibitors who have adopted the plan and applications from others, who, incited by the success of neighbouring halls, are anxious to give a "Keystone Night" a trial.

Possibly the greatest compliment "Keystones" have received is contained in a letter from Mr. W. E. Wright, of the Queen's Picture Hall, Bolton. Mr. Wright was one of the first to feature a "Keystone Night," and in sending the illustration reproduced herewith of his audience on that occasion says: "To say it was a success would not convey an impression of the night—it was a record. We had 1,500 people in, who stayed till the close."

THE KEYSTONE NIGHT AUDIENCES AT THE QUEEN'S HALL.

An audience of 1,500 on a summer evening is a phenomenon sufficiently unusual to indicate merit of a very special kind in the programme, and those connected with Keystones are not unnaturally proud of this letter and of the others in similar terms which exploiters of Keystone Nights have sent them.

Sunderland and Wearside Sidelights.

(BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Allow me to congratulate Mr. F. Sayer upon his elevation to the position of manager of the Empire Cinema, Newcastle. Since this keenest of managers took the old Avenue in hand he has shown his worth so strikingly that an early advancement to a bigger sphere became inevitable. He is to be succeeded by Mr. Mitchell.

Facing the Green at Southwick-on-Wear is the Savoy, one of the few specially built halls in Sunderland's suburbs. It has an effective frontage, and the interior is on up-to-date lines. Mr. F. W. de Lenteman is in control of the Savoy, and most satisfactory reports have been presented. An excellent working arrangement was effected with the Villiers Theatre on the other side of the water, with the result that the films keep at a good standard, "The Bride of Mystery" and "Daybreak" being two of last week's best things at both halls.

It was a fine summery evening when I called at the de Luxe, and I half expected to see a somewhat depleted house. Instead, nearly every seat was filled, particularly the higher-priced ones, whilst the hall was beautifully cool and the air quite fresh, thanks to the up-to-dateness of the ventilating apparatus. Another long drama dealing with the old French aristocracy was being screened—viz., "The Heir of the Lagarderes." Mr. Hudspeth has been specialising with this class of film and the Dickens' stories during the last few weeks, with results that have pleasantly endorsed his excellent judgment.

From what Mr. Warren tells me there are much worse things than running a hall in Easington Lane. Mr. Snowden and he can now so well gauge the tastes of the pitmen that it is very seldom anything goes amiss. "The Prince of Evil," "The Octoroon," "From Out the Flood" and "The Thumb Print"—all good things—have just been shown there, and with such success that the experiment of dropping out the vaudeville "turns" during the summer nights has been found to work out all right.

The Invicta, at Seaham Harbour, is being reopened. Mr. George Downing, of the Cambridge, at South Hetton, is making the experiment.

Most local cinema conversations swerve round to the Havelock House. "How will this great venture go?" is the question that always crops up. Something over £70,000 is really well worth talking about, and I questioned Mr. James Noble, an authority in the local cinematograph world, upon it. The present halls are providing the best stuff in splendid time, he said, and even the Havelock House could not beat them in this. What the Havelock House might do, would be to bring more classic masterpieces of fiction put into film form. First-class plays would be more acceptable. Probably the Havelock House will gather to itself, he also thought, a large number of people who have not been much in the habit of visiting the local cinema halls.

Mr. James Bainton is extending his energies in the cinema line at South Shields. He has reopened the Paragon in Denmark Street. The hall has been greatly improved, and I hope and think will do well.

Amongst the halls I visited last week was "Black's on the Bridge," quite a historic place. Indeed, it is one of the pioneer halls of the country, being not only the first permanent picture show in the North but also the first to start the two-houses-a-night system. Originally a Presbyterian church, which had fallen into disuse, the late Mr. George Black took it over and opened it as a cinematograph exhibition. Little attempt was made at first to alter or adapt the pews, for at the time Mr. Black, like the other pioneers in the business, had many difficulties to contend against. One of the main was that he had to depend largely upon the Continent for films, the titles of which on the screen had not been translated, whilst the subjects themselves were often most bewilderingly foreign. Finding that most of the audience could not, as is not to be surprised at, grasp the "situations," Mr. Black introduced a "lecturer," an example which was soon copied. Realising, too, the danger of the films firing, Mr. Black erected a special operating chamber outside the main walls of the building, so that the only communication the operator had with the interior of the hall was through a small hole. This idea met with the heartiest approval of the local authorities, and was, like other of Mr. Black's ideas, frequently copied. Some short time ago the hall, which is situated on the north-east abutment of Wearmouth Bridge, was most effectively transformed in accordance with more modern ideas by the Brothers Black, sons of the pioneer, and Mr. G. F. Hill, his executor, and now secretary and general manager of the firm's many concerns, represented by other picture halls at West Hartlepool, North Shields, Gateshead, Byker, South Shields, etc., as well as the North-Eastern Film Service at Monkwearmouth. The transformation alluded to was a really wonderful performance, and a most striking revelation of what the modern plasterer and decorator can accomplish. The hall has just come under the capable management of Mr. Robertson, late of the Tivoli, South Shields, the operator being Mr. Jitterman, a well-known Northern "strong man" and wrestling champion.

Mr. J. G. Padden, the late manager of Block's, has gone upon a lecturing tour. He went straight to the West Hartlepool Empire, and from there to the Middlesbrough Opera House as special lecturer.

DEVONPORT DOINGS.

No one could find fault with the programmes arranged at the Electric and Tivoli Theatres last week. Both managers are very "good judges" and keen competitors. Mr. Boultwood at the Electric secured "The Golden Beetle" as the main attraction in a show altogether of unbroken pleasure. "A Tudor Princess" also enthralled its spectators. Comedy subjects included the irresistible Bunny in "Love's Old Dream." The celebrated entertainer, Mr. U. R. Owen, added a good turn. Mr. Cecil Frost, at the Tivoli, featured "The Veteran." "Hearts of Women" was also highly spoken of.

By JOHN CHER.

Even a more difficult task than beset "the man who made the Shah laugh" has been accomplished by Ford Sterling, who has made the Paris Trade laugh as it has never laughed before. Messrs. Ziegler and Downie were instrumental in bringing about the miracle, and at the time of writing they are probably the two happiest men in the French capital. "Love and Revenge" is the biggest packet of delight that has so far crossed the Atlantic. It contains the most contagious laughter germ yet discovered. It is what is known here as a fourire. The film was presented last week to as staid and hardened a company of reviewers as ever gathered together at the Tivoli Cinema. The weather was depressing, complaints concerning poor business were to be heard on all sides, and to add to this films of minor importance had been projected in monotonous succession. Then came "Love and Revenge." As the title was flashed on the screen the film-men shifted in their chairs and prepared themselves for another wearisome comic. Messrs. Ziegler and Downie smiled mysteriously. As the first couple of hundred feet were screened faces began to broaden; then a little titter went round the auditorium. This continued, and minute by minute increased in volume, eventually developing into one great roar of laughter. For the moment the Tivoli became a place of amusement. Peals of laughter rang out, and at the conclusion the spectators let themselves go and applauded as in a theatre. In thirty minutes Ford Sterling had conquered Paris filmdom. On July 3rd he will set the whole of Paris laughing; by the end of that month all the entire cinema-going public of France will have seen his funniest picture. The laughter wave that commenced last week at the Tivoli will break over all France, flooding her with genuine and unprecedented laughter.

As a friend of mine so aptly termed it, "'Love and Revenge' is a button-breaker."

Dr. George Cunningham is indefatigable in pursuing his "Good Teeth for All" crusade, aided by a wonderful collection of moving pictures. His most recent lecture in Paris was given at the Raspail Palace Cinema. The Doctor exhibited his latest film, a splendid production which in a most interesting fashion depicts the folly of neglecting the care of the teeth and the excellent results which accrue from a course of the new dentistry.

To a Paris showman must be given the credit of using a talking machine for publicity purposes. The astute man had a gramophone fixed inside a small travelling case. He then had manufactured a record which, when the needle was applied, emitted a most eulogistic oration on the merits of a certain picture palace. A fashionably dressed individual, wearing a sleek top hat and an immaculately cut morning coat, was put in charge of the "handy booster," his business being to travel on the tubes of Paris and set the apparatus in motion at frequent intervals. Naturally, the scheme met with an unprecedented success, for even interest in the traditional talking dog pales in comparison to the effect produced by the speaking bag.

It is said that the originator is enlarging his cinema and has patented his invention.

Situated in the heart of the capital, Number 6, rue de Hanovre, has become the meeting-place of British and American film-men visiting Paris. It is from that address that Messrs. Downie and Ziegler direct the fortunes of the French branch of the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Limited. Their latest guest was Mr. S. Bruce Briggs, secretary of the company. In the course of a short interview which I had with Mr. Briggs the other day, he expressed himself as being quite satisfied with the improving condition of the French market, which is rapidly becoming partial to the productions of the great American sales organisation.

The slack season has set in, and there will be little doing in the world of films during the next couple of months. Many exhibitors rather than running their theatres either at a small profit or complete loss, have decided to close down during the summer and follow in the footsteps of millions of other Parisians, who yearly spend six or eight weeks in the country or at the seaside. Renters and agents are already complaining bitterly of the paucity of business.

At the Lyons Exhibition, Messrs. Pathé Frères are once more to the fore. The progressive firm have three important exhibits. No. 1 is an imposing show of Pathé moving picture apparatus, No. 2 a special hall where is exhibited a wonderful collection of films illustrating the marvels of the silk industry, and No. 3 a magnificent picture theatre with a continually changing programme featuring Pathé's greatest film masterpieces.

(BY OUR OWN REPRESENTATIVE.)

A number of Leeds managers have expressed opinions to an interviewer on the probabilities or otherwise of the Yorkshire city following the recent example of Manchester in cutting down programmes to within an hour and a half, and the general view is that such reduction in fare provided will not occur here. Indeed, it is practically certain that no such policy could possibly be successful in any Yorkshire city or town. Yorkshire folk are liberal spenders, but they demand, and generally manage to get, full value for money, and where the cutting-down process has been tried in the county of broad acres it has not been successful.

Messrs. Pathé Frères' Leeds office are just now booming "The Wages of Crime," a Trade show of which was arranged for Friday, June 26th. "The Dungeon of Despair," in colour, has found favour readily.—The Wray Film Agency are making a speciality of cheap hire for the summer shows. The firm have some tempting lines at 10s. per 1,000 ft., which should serve to attract people into the halls during the warm weather.—Mr. H. Whitaker, late of the Albany Ward circuit and the Award Film Service, London, has joined forces with Mr. H. A. Whincup, of the Yorkshire Film Exchange. Mr. Whincup is busy with preparations for the coming winter trade, and promises some startling developments. The Corporation Watch Committee has accepted the plans of the New Century Film Service for the new premises in York Place, and of a projection theatre, subject, of course, to the firm making application for a licence, and proper passage-way being provided.—Mr. John Lambert, of the Wellington Film Service, Limited, is, as usual, "making things hum" throughout the county, and is doing big business in his specialities.

The Atlas Advertising Association, of King Street, are greatly extending their activities in the use of the cinema for trade advertising purposes. A number of big local industries have been filmed, and have appeared on local screens as well as elsewhere. The system is found far more effective than the old style lantern slide advertisements.

Mr. Norman Robertson featured "The Fatal Wedding" very heavily last week, and this was followed up by "At the Bottom of the Sea," a picture of great interest.—At the Theatre de Luxe, Mr. E. B. Davies screened the long Gaumont series of Empress of Ireland disaster pictures.—Mr. H. Broughton showed "On the Minute" and "His Best Friend," to big houses at the Coliseum.—At the Assembly Rooms, the "World's Fashion Review," in natural colour, featured Mdme. Yavorska, whilst in the colour series, also, Mr. Harry Hogton screened beautiful pictures of the Norwegian fjords, and of natural history subjects. "The Old Curiosity Shop" was a big success.—At the Savoy, Mr. Rogerson had an excellent all-round programme, including "When the Hurricanes Bought the Line," and some Keystone comedies.

"Duty" and "The First Law of Nature" were dramas of the first water on the screen of the Headingley Picture House. Messrs. Owen Brooks and G. R. Smith have also featured "Beauty and the Barge."—Two good subjects were chosen by Mr. H. J. Dacre, at the Harehills Picture House, in "The Black Spot" and "The Soul of the Sea."

In the Burley district, Miss Henny Porten appeared in "Facing the Footlights," at the Haddon Hall, and Mr. Groocock made a hit with "The Cage."—At the Palace, Westfield Road, under new management since the transfer of the licence to Mr. J. W. Taylor, "The Fortune Hunters" and "The Wreck" were among the choicest of the fare provided.—Good all-round programmes continue to appear at the Lyceum, in Cardigan Road.—At the Picture House, Burley Road, Mr. A. Sutcliffe featured "The Great Ocean Catastrophe" and "Give Us This Day ——."

Good business continues at the Kirkstall houses. At the Atlas, Mr. G. E. Firmage specialised "Rocambole" and "Her Supreme Sacrifice." Mr. J. Greenwood ran "The Midnight Wedding" and "Life" to bumper houses at the Imperial.—At the Abbey there is no diminution in either quantity or quality of pictures submitted by Mr. Briggs.

At the Bramley Palace, Mr. J. A. Hobson runs one show a night, and gets the big subjects. "The Cage" was a success, and "The Village Blacksmith" was accompanied by a recitation by Mr. Leonard Moore, a local favourite. "Sixty Years a Queen" is coming shortly.—At the Royal Pictures, Stanningley, Mr. H. Linfoot showed "The Red Duke" and "A Question of Right" at Messrs. Barnes and Taylor's theatre.

"The Woman Pays" and "A Journalist's Adventure'" were the leading lines of Mr. James Furmage at the Lighthouse Hall, North Hall Street.—At the Alexandra, in Camp Road, Mr A. E. Roberts showed "A Tragedy of the Clouds," and also "In the Hands of London Crooks."—At the King's, Holbeck, Mr. George Stephenson featured "The Devil's Eye," followed by "Her Great Sin."—Mr. George Spencer ran the American-Mexican war story, "On Secret Service," at the Golden Cross Picturedrome. At the Newtown Palace, Mr. Chas. A. Higgins had at the top of the bill, "Justice" and "Vampires of the Night." Mr. Higgins is bringing "Spartacus."—Mr. Cliff Marston thrilled his patrons at the Grosvenor Palace with "The Great Ocean Catastrophe" and "Greed of Gold."

At the Armley Hall, Mr. Metcalf top-lined the Keystone "Love and Vengeance," and one of his leading dramas was "Protea II."—"Life" was the principal subject at the Pictodrome, Wortley Road, where Mr. G. Mann also screened "Protea II."—At the Palace Hall, "Beauty Unadorned" and "Sixty Years a Queen" were appreciated by big audiences.

At Wortley, Mr. W. A. Musgrave made a leading line of "In the Midst of the Jungle," and showed, also, "Captain Kidd."—At the Crown, "Carrier Pigeon" was a detective drama with a novel theme, and "The Inspector's Story," and "The Devil's Eye" also appeared with advantage.

By "PADDY."

PROVINCIAL.

At the Dundalk Town Hall last week there was an excellent programme containing two superb films in the shape of "The Burning Path" and "The Bird of Prey." Mr. J. Gormley had a very busy week of it in spite of the weather conditions, which all over Ireland inclined to be sultry, and he continues to manage this house in first-class style.—Mr. Louis Forster, manager of the Park Street house, had also a fine programme for his patrons, which included such films as "Some Runner," "Christoph r Columbus," "A Woman's Wit," and "Little Ned."—Mr. Alf. Thomas has been treating his patrons in Navan to some more of his tip-top programmes—programmes which always bristle with good things—and last week he featured, amongst other films, "The Iron Trail," "When the Earth Trembled," "The Burning Train," and "The Great Ocean Catastrophe."

CORK.

The picture season at the Opera House, Cork, has now commenced, and large houses are the rule.—At the Palace, capably managed by Mr. R. M. Magrath, the principal film was "The Cage," and this film drew much applause from the audience.—At the Coliseum Mr. Tighe continues to draw the crowds in splendid fashion. Last week he featured "The Battle of Manilla," and the business done certainly justified the expense.

DUBLIN.

At the Rathmines Town Hall, Messrs. Jameson have been featuring the Eclair film, "Protea II.," and in spite of the tropical conditions prevailing in Dublin at present quite a large house attended to see this film. "A Hot Time in Snakeville" was a very amusing comedy.—At the Rotunda, managed by Mr. Ernest Jameson, we had lately some fine films, including "The Story of the Willow Pattern," "Fantomas" ("The False Magistrate"), and "The Flight of Death." The Irish Ladies' Orchestra, under the charge of Miss May Murphy, continues to delight patrons with its beautifully chosen selections of music.—At the Bohemian, in Phibsboro', the star attraction was "The Drudge." This film was shown there for the first time in Dublin, and Mr. Sparling must have felt pleased with the business done.—At the Grand Cinema, Mr. W. Kay had another fine programme for his numerous patrons, and business was quite brisk. Mr. Bryne, who acts as foreman, becomes more popular with the patrons as each week goes by—if, indeed, he could be any more popular than he is.

At the Dame Street Picture House—where the prices are now reduced to 3d., 6d., and 1s., having been 6d. and 1s. only before—Captain Ahearne provided two good films in the shape of "Out of the Depths" and "The Black Spot."—At the Dorset, Mr. Sullivan showed, amongst others, "Her Father's Silent Partner" and "Detective Finn." This theatre has even added to its numerous patrons since it was entirely redecorated, and Mr. Sullivan has a busy time.

One of the finest films ever shown in Dublin in the detective line was on view at the Grafton last week, entitled "Outwitted." While writing of the Grafton, it is worth while mentioning that the Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Limited, have booked for this fine hall the Klaw and Erlanger series of films. The Grafton always has first-run stuff. Mr. Bell, assisted by Mr. Richardson, continues to guide the destinies of this company's three Dublin theatres in first-rate style.

At the de Luxe, in Camden Street, Mr. Maurice Elliman has been featuring "The Great Audacity."

I am glad to be able to say that business is thriving with Mr. Norman Whitten, of the General Film Supply, 17, Great Brunswick Street, Dublin. Calling round there rather late the other evening, I found Mr. Whitten and his assistants in the throes of developing a "topical." Mr. Whitten specialises in this branch of the industry, and also handles exclusives.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

We are informed that excellent houses have been the rule at the performances of "Cinemazoo," at the London Opera House, and that large parties of scholars are being booked on account of the educational value of the entertainment. With regard to recent publicity, Mr. Noel Macklin desires it to be understood that he has never claimed to have taken the whole of the pictures, and states that about 450 out of the whole run of 6,000 ft. have been interpolated in place of certain films spoilt in development, the fact being specially identified in the programmes.

"GRUMBLES."

III.

"——but it takes me from the business of the shop."

"Then why not take your shop to the Exhibition, have the 'phone fitted, send word to all your customers where you are to be found, see that they have tickets, tell your clerk to bring all callers to the Exhibition, and do all your business in comfort at OLYMPIA for the eleven days."

"But is it worth the trouble?"

"Well, I know many firms who go into their particular Trade Exhibition year after year, and they tell me it would never do for them to miss, as it gives such excellent opportunities for getting on friendly terms with people."

"Yes, there is that about an Exhibition. It has a 'free and easy' atmosphere, where you can 'get next' to a man. I think I will reconsider my decision not to go in."

Do You want to "Get Next" to that Man?

Romeo and Juliet.—A vastly modernised and hugely humorous version of the great feudist drama, wherein Mike and Pete, the quarry busters, find themselves fooled. (July 6th. 528 ft.)

Priscilla's Capture.—This comedy of misunderstandings forms a fine "pastoral" reissue. Miss Verdant Green has an axious time. (July 6th. 596 ft.)

Her Mother's Weakness.—Kleptomania threatens to ruin the woman, despite her daughter's noble efforts. Away from her friends she struggles alone and effects her own salvation. (July 9th. 1,038 ft.)

Through the Breakers.—Strongly depicted Society drama of a drifting apart and reconciliation over the grave of a lost child. (July 9th. 1,000 ft.)

The Price of Drinks.—Schmidt, the short-sighted salooner, is duped with a dummy by thirsty tramps. When the Deutscher comes for the money, the unoffending one comes to an untimely end. (July 9th. 524 ft.)

CARTOONLETS.

Anima Drawings.—Comic figures, cleverly drawn, come to life on the screen and perform ludicrous antics. (July 9th. 581 ft.)

H. & B.

Famous Houses of England.—Visits to the homes of Tennyson and Dickens are included in a very interesting British release. (July 9th. 489 ft.)

KALEM.

The Salt Mackerel Mine.—The dire doings of the desperate are foiled by the funny fellow. The handsome hero hands out hefty hooks to the thugs and more melodrama in the approved style follows. (July 6th. 1,028 ft.)

Dippy's Dream.—An escaped lunatic leads the police a merry dance by securing a cycle. Sticks of dynamite as missiles add to the uproar, but Bert secures the man, and the daughter of the chief as a reward. (July 6th. 575 ft.)

The New Medicine Man.—Returned to the tribe the young Indian collegiate is asked to revert to their ways. He incurs the enmity of his people and is branded as a coward, but soon proves his worth when a deadly fever attacks the camp. (July 9th. 1,040 ft.)

WELT.

Copenhagen.—The beautiful capital of Denmark and scenes in its vicinity form a good subject for the camera. (July 6th. 402 ft.)

AMBROSIO.

An Ancestor's Legacy.—Gruesome details, attendant upon Rodolph's acquisition of the old castle, cause a weird dream in which the various horrors attack their victim with ultra-modern accessories. (July 6th. 994 ft.)

The Park of Gourzouf.—Uncommon scenes and a new atmosphere revealed by a visit to a famous Russian pleasure ground. (July 6th. 380 ft.)

Life at the Bottom of the Sea: Sea Snails.—Some of the more humble denizens of the deep. An excellent addition to this scientific series. (July 9th. 395 ft.)

Merrypimple and the Drum.—The result of taking refuge in the instrument from an irate father is seen when pa commences his evening practice. (July 9th. 430 ft.)

Salambo.—The famous tragedy of the days of Carthage, with its sombre finale, is elaborately produced and forms an interesting drama. (July 9th. 1,235 ft.)

NEW MAJESTIC FILM CO.

APOLLO.

"It's a Bear."—Business being slow at the circus the boss plans a faked escape. That evening Fred prepares to attend a fancy ball as Bruin. His subsequent adventures at the hands of the crowd, and through the arrival of bear No. 2, are extremely boisterous. (July 9th. 768 ft.)

MAJESTIC.

Educating His Daughters.—Reared in seclusion, three charming girls are suddenly launched into the company of three equally nice young men. The arrant effrontery of one secures him a post as "governess" and some delightfully ludicrous scenes follow, until Dad accepts the inevitable. (July 6th. 1,008 ft.)

The Lackey.—Caste places an impenetrable barrier between the butler and the daughter of his employer. The latter discovers an attachment and dismisses the man, but a thrilling fight with a burglar proves true worth. The butler goes forth into the world with a woman's smile "for remembrance." (July 6th. 990 ft.)

The Ring.—Petty jealousy on the part of a rival impels her to inform the owner that Dan has stolen an engagement ring to give to his work-girl sweetheart. Remorse comes and Nora explains to Mrs. Gerard, who soon secures Dan's release. Dan once more finds the ring and finds a friend, who helps the young couple on. (July 6th. 990 ft.)

What the Crystal Told.—Stirring drama during which a fortune teller, who is being consulted by a corrupt ward boss, gets enough information out of him to secure his arrest, then reveals herself as his victim of former days. (July 9th. 990 ft.)

RELIANCE.

For His Master.—Muscular Christianity is splendidly exemplified in the new priest, and Crawley, the rustler, becomes his staunchest adherent. During the father's absence, Jim is persuaded to "break out." The priest goes after him, and after some fine horsemanship, rescues Jim from a peril which effectually cures him. (July 9th 1,876 ft.)

A Working Girl's Romance.—Tired of the eternal slavery of the store, the girl places a missive, explaining her position, within a glove. Fate takes the note to a spoiled society woman, who, seeking diversion, finds the girl and aids her to happiness. The good deed also brings about a reconciliation with the society girl's lover. (July 9th. 982 ft.)

NORDISK.

Dr. Gar-El-Haima.—Sensational long feature, the disguises of the arch criminal being ingenious in the extreme. After some brisk scenes, a final capture is effected, the doctor and his accomplice finding themselves neatly trapped. (July 6th. 2,558 ft.)

PASQUALI FILM CO.

For Love and Liberty.—The days of insurrection in Italy are recalled, and a stirring tale is unfolded. The Count, devoted to his country's cause, is accused of being in league with the Government spies. The signal for the outbreak is unexpectedly given by a child, and the rebels quickly get to work. The Count is released and the tyrant Chief of Police meets his doom. (July 6th. 2,730 ft.)

Polidor Wins a Bride.—After many brave efforts at honest toil, including a job in a circus, Polidor earns the gratitude of a fond and doting parent and his glad-eyed offspring. (July 6th. 540 ft.)

PATHÉ FRÈRES.

A.K.

His Reputation at Stake.—Denham, an ex-convict, seeks his son and finds him the respected county sheriff. The son refuses to shelter the father, who is ultimately captured under suspicion. Ralph now proves a more worthy regard for the old man and takes him into his home. (July 5th. 1,000 ft.)

A Thousand Dollar Reward.—Banished from the ranch for carelessness, Bob leaves, but is followed by his sweetheart, the rancher's daughter. She is captured by a bandit, wherepon Bob effects a brave rescue and earns a double reward. (July 5th. 1,025 ft.)

A Modern Romeo.—Comedy, with a love-sick maiden who will have none of her country swain, preferring Hamspiel, the great Thespian. The latter, upon being appealed to, soon disillusions the girl and sends her back to her Monty. (July 9th. 1,225 ft.)

CHICAGO.

The Erring Brother.—Aided to escape from justice, Dick ultimately gains happiness with a good woman. Again Tom finds that his brother is about to suffer, and changing clothes, is wounded while simulating an escape. A pathetic scene shows Tom brought back to find his sacrifice in vain. (July 5th. 1,075 ft.)

A Mistaken Divorce.—Misfortune drives the husband out West and the wife is prevailed upon to obtain a divorce. Trouble comes in turn upon her father and she consents to a marriage for money. On the eve of the wedding day the first husband comes to explain, but the wife remains true to what she considers her duty. (July 9th. 1,050 ft.)

DENVER.

A Break for Freedom.—American-Indian drama, the quarrel over Red Wing resulting in Brave Heart being captured. The girl releases her lover and chains the bloodhound in his place. They are far away and in safety when their flight is discovered. (July 9th. 950 ft.)

ECLECTIC.

The Million Heir.—Comedy burlesque, a terrific series of petty extravagance attending the tidings that Gaetan has been left a fortune. Nemesis swiftly overtakes him as the result of his escapades. (July 5th. 525 ft.)

FILM D'ART.

Love's Cruelty.—Spurned by the woman he loved, the man leaves the society reception where he has sung and is taken seriously ill. Upon recovery he forgets his humble nurse and leaves to seek a fortune. At the height of his fame a simple offering moves him to remembrance and he seeks out his humble sweetheart, only to witness her death from a long endured sorrow. (July 5th. 2,550 ft.)

IMPERIUM.

Winter Scenes in the Chamounix.—The loveliness of this beautiful Alpine valley renders it an ideal subject, especially under a mantle of snow. (July 5th. 325 ft.)

The Gondo Troupe.—Clever athletes, a lady and three male partners perform some amazing feats of strength, with and without gymnastic apparatus. (July 9th. 350 ft.)

JAPANESE.

The Temples of Nikko.—The elaborate carvings and picturesque nature of the Temples of Shinto and Buddhism are noted, also the loveliness of the gardens and mountainous district. (July 5th. 525 ft.)

PATHECOLOR.

Within the Lions Reach.—Revenge for slighted affections culminates in Theo, now a successful physician, being lured to the house of Bertha, a cinema actress. She receives him kindly, as of old, then leaves him to find himself in a room with lions surrounding him. His bravery results in an escape. Bertha, stricken with remorse over the man's lost reason, ends her own life. (July 9th. 2,375 ft.)

PATHE.

Wiffles Puts up for Parliament.—By kind permission of the daily Press, Wiffles "puts up" with the somewhat doubtful aid of a gramophone and a cinema film and receives one vote. His scheme to win Jane ends in ma-in-law being bled for a substantial amount. (July 9th. 1,225 ft.)

RUSSIAN.

Mountains and Torrents of the Caucasus.—Magnificent scenes of wild grandeur in parts which are only accessible upon pack horses or upon foot, the bridges being, in many cases, but the trunks of trees. (July 9th. 325 ft.)

SCIENCE AND NATURE.

Herring Fishing.—Scenes on the North Sea and at the East Coast fishing ports. The surprising dexterity of the Scottish fisher girls is also shown. (July 5th. 625 ft.)

SPANGLIAN.

Country Life in Andalusia.—Spanish beauties and a fair landscape are revealed, also a picturesque old castle. (July 9th. 350 ft.)

THALIE.

Showing His Gratitude.—Roughlot insists, in return for the lawyer's help, on entering his service, but proves anything but a desirable domestic. In the end the lawyer commits a violent assault, and fails to save himself from the cells. (July 7th. 900 ft.)

U.S.A.

M'sieu Gaston from Paris.—The entire staff of the Transpolitan, including the chef's ugly daughter, eagerly await the new waiter. He soons shows a preference for Charlotte, femme de chambre, but the chef bids him choose between a death from the stockpot or the smiles of Eleanor Jane. (July 9th. 825 ft.)

R. PRIEUR & CO., LTD.

ALPHA.

Bill Misses a Chance.—Fun on a racecourse is seen in the second of the series. Bill wins on several events, but his friends exact revenge with the aid of a broken-down cab and a curious horse. Bill's efforts to return to the course result in some wild adventures. (July 6th. 550 ft.)

COSMOGRAPH.

A Visit to Rocky Jo'burg.—Well-selected, short length "scenic." (July 9th. 440 ft.)

GLORIA.

Married in Secret.—Fearful that his rich uncle may not approve of his wife, Joe persuades her to appear as the chamber-maid. Unfortunately for Joe, uncle falls in love with the girl and some curious complications follow. (July 6th. 1,700 ft.)

The Cure.—Tired of an exaggerated love of the romantic, pa takes his daughter's fiancé into his confidence. The latter disguises himself as a brigand, who makes violent love to the girl. An abduction forms a comical incident in the plot. (July 9th. 1,230 ft.)

PRIEUR.

Forgotton.—Re-issue of a pathetic romance of a lost love and the tragic end of a forsaken man. (July 6th. 800 ft.)

G. SERRA.

CELIO.

Thorns.—The misdeeds of a gambling brother wreck the happiness of his widowed mother and sister. The latter obtains a good position in another town and is ultimately betrothed to the mayor's son.

Again, her brother appears and some dramatic scenes are witnessed before the mayor's daughter finds a letter which removes all misunderstanding. (July 9th. 2,100 ft.)

CINES.

Bloomer Loops the Loop.—Smitten with a craze for gyratory exploits, Blomer performs somersaults, then dreams of startling deeds amid the clouds. His final volplane cures him of his desire for Pegoudism. (July 6th. 450 ft.)

An Excursion at Capri.—An excellent scenic, a steamer trip showing the famous group of Azzuro, Mount St. Michael, the ruins of the Imperial villa, and the great natural arch, interspersed with enjoyable sidelights. (July 6th. 390 ft.)

Digitized by Google
Original from NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

Cinessino's Fairy Story.—Fantasy, played entirely by children, the contents of a magic box coming to life and portraying a pretty love tale, with the aid of Cinessino. (July 9th. 440 ft.)

SUN.

The White Smoke.—Remarkable exploits by a gang of banditti, who use a powerful chemical to aid their nefarious schemes, form the main portion of the story. A daring scheme on the part of a girl's lover secures her release and the capture of the band after a severe fight in the mountains. (July 6th. 1,250 ft.)

SELIG POLYSCOPE CO.

The Midnight Call.—A 'phone call and "wrong number" enable a doctor to become a detective. He takes police to a lonely house and ultimately unearths a scheme whereby an heiress has been brutally imprisoned by scheming relatives. (July 6th. 933 ft.)

The Story of Diana.—Artistic reproduction of the famous legend. Orion is beset by wolves and Diana looses her leopards to his aid. A fine battle between Orion and a wild animal is a feature of the story. (July 6th. 825 ft.)

Redhead Introduces Herself.—The doings of a very lively tomboy with an aggressive goat for a companion and at a baseball game provide a good juvenile comedy. (July 6th. 640 ft.)

The Game of Life.—Hab is a dipsomaniac but seeks to conquer the craving by a Crusoe-like life. Fate delivers his two enemies upon the same island, where his forbearance does not prevent further plotting. A succession of exciting scenes are witnessed before the missing chart comes to light and reveals the whereabouts of the survivor. (July 9th. 3,045 ft.)

A Mix-Up on the Plains.—Concurrent advertising brings the new teacher and Sawyer's new cook to the station at Mudville. Careless emissaries take the girls to the wrong quarters, the teacher being nothing loth. A quaint mix-up and the use of a wedding ring end the comedy. (July 9th. 1,002 ft.)

THANHOUSER.

The Miser's Reversion.—The old taxidermist is about to pledge his charming daughter to a distasteful marriage when he falls asleep. His dream is vividly shown, his reversion to an ape enabling a touch of rich humour. The visions awakens the old fellow to his own folly and he stays an elopement just long enough to add his blessing. (July 9th. 3,023 ft.)

PRINCESS.

All's Well that Ends Well.—Mother and daughter, proprietresses of a teashop, note a very regular customer, an elderly gentleman. The mother, mistaken, pairs him off with her daughter upon the "half-day," while she goes out with a younger man. Subsequent manœuvring soon convinces the mother, and two merry couples return to an engagement supper. (July 6th. 962 ft.)

TRANS-ATLANTIC FILM CO.

BISON 101.

From the Lions' Jaws.—Stirring animal feature with an intelligent elephant in one big scene and an episode where the villain is besieged in a hut and meets hs fate from the lions. The girl has some perilous adventures in the jungle but is rescued by her lover. (July 9th. 2,019 ft.)

CRYSTAL.

Baldy Belmont, Almost a Hero.—His scheme to rescue a fair widow from a burglar (?) works very well until a real cop. arrives and arrests the alleged crook and the bogus limb of the law. (July 6th. 379 ft.)

The Fat and Thin of It.—Gymnasium comedy, two couples having a merry time of it. The fistic encounter between Messrs. Slim and Stout is very amusing. (July 9th. 962 ft.)

FRONTIER.

The Sheriff's Deputy.—When Arthur puts up for election the old sheriff at once bans his daughter's engagement. The suitor neatly bluffs the old man, then gives him the election, himself becoming merely deputy. (July 6th. 996 ft.)

Hand that Rules the World.—Divorce from a callous woman enables Edwin to consummate a happy marriage. Unaware, his first wife seeks one day to renew their relations. The sight of childish glee causes her to shrink back into the darkness. (July 9th. 981 ft.)

GOLD SEAL.

Lucille Love, Girl of Mystery.—Her adventures upon an island in the South Seas are depicted in thrilling style. This special "serial" was reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of May 14th on pp. 771-2. (July 6th. 2,000 ft.)

Discord and Harmony.—The adoption of a friendless girl and her secret marriage to a friend cause trouble to the old musician. Only upon his death do the unjust acquaintances learn the truth. The last symphony is feelingly played and serves for a requiem for the departed. (July 6th. 2,880 ft.)

IMP.

The Silver Loving Cup.—The death of their only child causes both the doctor and his wife to drift into degeneracy. Harvey works in the slums and the loving cup presented to him proves the means of reconciliation. (July 6th. 1,996 ft.)

The Gambler.—In the saloon Jim is drugged by a half-breed. The gambler, apparently dosing, sees the affair, persuades Artego to play and wins the whole of the proceeds. For the sake of Jim's sweetheart the gambler makes a handsome restitution. (July 9th. 969 ft.)

"KEYSTONE NIGHTS"

ARE BREAKING ALL RECORDS!

READ THIS LETTER FROM AN EXHIBITOR WHO HAS TRIED ONE.

Queen's Picture Hall,
Bolton,
June 13th.

Dear Sir, – I have this day forwarded photographs of our Great Keystone Night, which will give you a slight impression of the hall. To say it was a success would not be to convey any idea of the Night—it was a record. We had 1,500 people in, who stayed to the end, and then said "We could do with more." Many laughed that night who had worn long faces for months. The old people enjoyed it as much as the young.

Thanking you very much for your valuable assistance,—Yours, etc.,

W. E. WRIGHT, Manager.

Fix up your Night now and enjoy mid-winter receipts in the dog days!

THE RACE.

A capital comedy by the Keystone "Kid" company, in which there is a thrilling contest for a purse between a dog-drawn cart and a "two-leg-power" motor-car. A fresh and popular release.

RELEASED THURSDAY, AUG. 6th.
APP. LENGTH 836 FT.

KID LOVE.

Another special offering by the juvenile company, in which there are two rivals for a lady's hand. The youthful Romeo shows himself full of ingenuity in his attempt to gain favour, and his spoof suicide leads to many laughable scenes.

RELEASED MONDAY, AUG. 10th.
APP. LENGTH 1,030 FT.

ALL FILMS PRINTED ON EASTMAN STOCK.

JOKER.

Mike and Jake Go in for Matrimony.—Comedy of a raffle. Mike gets the wrong prize—an old maid—and gladly exchanges with Jake. The young one proves, however, a tough proposition for Michael. (July 6th. 1,014 ft.)

A Pair of Bears.—Escaping from the circus, the brother bruins spread consternation far and wide until a little child shames the fugitives and leads the bears homeward. (July 9th. 836 ft.)

NESTOR.

The Way of a Woman.—An accident to the man causes the girl to state that they were going to a marriage when, in reality, the case was one of abduction. His force of will had compelled her love and admiration. (July 6th. 1,000 ft.)

The Peace of Bear Valley.—Foolish infatuation on the part of an engaged lumber merchant for an Indian girl cause a fierce battle with the tribe. Order is restored by the troops, but a jealous woman ends the lumberman's life. (July 9th. 975 ft.)

POWERS.

Hands Invisible.—Witnessing a passionate embrace and ignorant of the fact that the man is his wife's brother, the jealous husband strangles her. The dreams of his deed ultimately turn his brain and cause an untimely end. (July 9th. 984 ft.)

REX.

The Kidnapped Pugilist.—Leaving his native village to engage in a big fight, the youth is followed by his sweetheart. He is kidnapped by enemies but she overhears, and outwits the plotters. (July 6th. 1,000 ft.)

Menace to Carlotta.—Italian quarter of New York forms the locale of a plot of drink and gambling and the sale to low associates of an entrapped girl. Tony learns of their intentions and after a great struggle saves his sister. (July 9th. 1,036 ft.)

VICTOR.

The Honeymooners.—At the hotel the couple meet old flames and a foolish flirtation ultimately brings divorce. Later, old recollections come to both and they drift curiously back to the honeymoon hotel. The accidental meeting brings about a new understanding. (July 9th. 2,058 ft.)

UNIVERSAL FILM CO., LTD.

BIG 5.

Baby at the Zoo.—Feeding the animals provides a delightful morning with "Our Baby" in another film of this humorous series. (July 9th. 449 ft.)

EAGLE.

Madcap Mary.—The escapades of a tomboy cause anxious moments for perplexed and angry victims. (July 6th. 596 ft.)

HERON.

How to Make £2,000.—Comedy in which one almost learns (but not quite) how to get rich quick. The hero (?) gets in the end as big a surprise as anyone. (June 9th. 794 ft.)

URBANORA.

URBAN-ECLIPSE.

A Rich Man's Redemption.—Desire for a new sensation causes the eccentric millionaire to distribute charity in a species of scramble. Mary's father has a winning ticket but is too ill to go. She disguises herself as a youth but a brutal assault reveals her sex. The millionaire, under her guidance, learns the true art of giving. (July 6th. 1,000 ft.)

A Trip Through the Abruzzi.—Beautiful mountain scenery and curious holiday happenings, also a trip to the Grotto del Cavallone, partly upon mules and finished upon sledges. (July 9th. 295 ft.)

Dupin Gets "the Bird."—Invited by his "guvnor" to a shooting expedition, Dupin finds himself but a mere gillie. His adventures and the losing of the last, lone express, end in his having to bivouac on the roadside. (July 9th. 550 ft.)

VITAGRAPH.

The Price of Vanity.—Vain desire leads a young wife into senseless extravagances. A dramatic sequence of events caused by jealousy opens her eyes and a good friend effects a timely reconciliation. (July 6th. 2,052 ft.)

Auntie.—A friendly gift from her rich employer causes false ideas in the girl's mind but her aunt interviews Mr. Rich and causes a fatherly interest and goodly advice. Auntie and the employer arrange to lunch together while Meg prepares for her youthful lover. (July 6th. 944 ft.)

A Model Young Man.—Headaches galore sum the portion of Jack (in the mornings). He is in desperate straits when his sweetheart decides to stay to lunch. Luckily, a telegram from grandpa, the indulgent, extends his credit and brings relief. (July 6th. 1,010 ft.)

Old Reliable.—Powerful drama of commercial life, an old man taking the blame of another's crime. Specially reviewed in THE BIOSCOPE of May 28th on pp. 979-81. (July 9th. 1,998 ft.)

Ghosts.—Ghoulish stories, told during a holiday, get upon the nerves of the girls. Dared to go to an old ruin, Jim consents. He is an unconscious somnambulist, hence an excellent comedy of errors. (July 9th. 967 ft.)

The Idler.—Adopted by a rich man, the youth soon shows the traits of hereditary idleness and is ultimately dismissed from the works of his benefactor. A chance meeting with his real father, a down-at-heel, teaches the young man a lesson, and his foster-parent soon realises his worth, with a new start. (July 9th. 1,010 ft.)

WESTERN IMPORT CO.

KEYSTONE.

A Thief Catcher.—Suspicious John and his bulldog accidentally discover a nest of real robbers. The desperadoes capture the clever one but his faithful bow-wow goes for help and the Keystone police do the rest. (July 6th. 1,020 ft.)

San Francisco and Its Environs.—Some very beautiful scenes obtained in and around the famous city of the Golden Gate. (July 6th. 338 ft.)

Between Showers.—The rivalry of two fatuous adorers and their efforts at gallantry enable a comical story. Charles Chaplin makes some prime fun by his antics. (July 9th. 1,020 ft.)

BRONCHO.

A New England Idyll.—Well-staged and picturesque drama of life upon the stage and a love element which emanates from a charming old village. Brisk acting and a story with a happy dénouement. (July 6th. 2,082 ft.)

K.B.

The Raiders.—Exciting drama of illicit-still working and a raid, caused by spite upon the part of a defeated rival. A woman's ruse causes the villain to be shot for a moonshiner and brings safety for her wounded husband. (July 9th. 2,028 ft.)

KOMIC.

Wifey's Christmas Present—Takes the form of a tiger-skin rug, which gives her husband, after a festive evening, cause for a most perplexing vision. July 9th. 662 ft.)

YORKSHIRE SALES AGENCY.

BAMFORTH.

Winky Dons the Petticoats.—Domestic trouble of a very trying order follows the attempts of Winky to do the housework. Chaos is exemplified in a host of catastrophes and the poor baby is nowhere to be found. (July 6th. 535 ft.)

THE PICK OF THE PROGRAMMES.

WHAT WE THINK OF THEM.

Hearts and Swords.

The latest adventure of the inimitable Ford Sterling possesses in liberal measure all the qualities which have rendered these films so widely popular, and no trace of falling off in his own peculiar humour. In fact, it will probably be thought by many that this film, particularly in its second reel, is one of the best samples of the brand. The plot is as slight as may well be, for a comedian of Sterling's quality is not to be hampered by the conventions of a connected story, but there is, of course, an extremely pretty girl—rowing on the waters of an extremely beautiful lake. Sterling immediately falls madly in love, and it would be a departure from all his own traditions if he did not soon fall into the lake. Though roused to anger by the rivalry of a French Count, he is himself lured away by the fascinations of a beautiful Eastern dancer, and events become so complicated that there is no means of straightening things out except a ferocious duel, which is fought with brickbats and broadswords according to rules which occur to Sterling during the progress of the fight. The entire police force is called out to arbitrate, every member of which eventually joins the combatants in the waters of the lake.

It is as impossible to describe a Sterling comedy as it is to resist its humour, and the beauty of the setting and the perfect quality of the photography add enormously to their attractiveness. Ford Sterling's eccentric comedy and wonderfully ingenious bits of "business" gain greatly by the contrast. (Trans-Atlantic Film Company. Released August 10th. Length 1,869 ft.)

Fighting Death.

The public continues to demand sensation with ever-growing avidity and the film actor continues to supply it with correspondingly increasing daring and inventiveness; but the limit even in film sensations is surely reached in this extraordinary Blaché production, "Fighting Death," wherein that professional risk-taker, Mr. Rodman Law, figures as hero. We need not catalogue the thrills of the picture; it will be sufficient to say that they are realistic thrills and in no way the result of trickery and ingenious photographic effect. They succeed each other throughout the piece in one long crescendo of excitement.

In a production which contains such amazingly sensational incidents the story must necessarily seem of rather secondary importance, but although the plot of "Fighting Death" was obviously designed as a peg upon which to hang the thrills, it is by no means without merit on its own account. Improbable and melodramatic it certainly is, but it can boast a certain degree of novelty, and it is always thoroughly effective. The acting also is considerably better than is often the case with films of this description. There is some striking natural scenery in the production, including numerous very beautiful snow pictures, and, indeed, from a spectacular point of view it is unusually good.

There is little else that it is necessary to say of this excellent melodrama, which is packed with rapidly developed situations, and which is, in consequence, never for a moment dull. Its sensations are, of course, its outstanding feature, and they may be summed up in one word as "prodigious." We have seen few films better calculated to satisfy the popular lust for sensation than "Fighting Death," and we have no hesitation in predicting for it an unusually successful career. (Blaché film. R. Prieur and Co., Limited. Released August 3rd. Length 3,280 ft.)

A Web of Fate.

This is a fine drama of Western life, full of excitement and adventure, and with some magnificent views of wild and spacious mountain country. Joe Brandon is a rancher, and lives with his wife, Rosetta, in a Western village. He spends too much of his time in the gambling saloon; otherwise their life together is perfectly

E LOVE

MYSTERY.

¶ Everybody is expectantly waiting for the film of her adventures; and a poster reading "LUCILLE LOVE showing to-day" will attract curious thousands.

¶ Write for sample advertising matter, throwaways and souvenirs. A hundred and one advertising novelties are at your command.

What the "DAILY MAIL" says:—

"To-day the heroine of the cinema serial, LUCILLE LOVE, which commences in the Weekly Dispatch on July 12th is in Liverpool. She is making a tour of England and Scotland in search of a husband.

"LUCILLE LOVE is a remarkable experiment in which journalism and cinematography have combined forces. On July 12th next the first instalment of the serial, 'LUCILLE LOVE,' will appear in the Weekly Dispatch. On the following day will be released at the principal picture houses all over the country a section of the film 'LUCILLE LOVE' corresponding to the section of the story that has appeared in the Weekly Dispatch. The same will happen the following weekly, and so on for fifteen weeks until the story terminates.

"Needless to say, the story is a most thrilling one, otherwise it would be impossible to keep up the interest of picture house patrons for so long. That it will do so is evidenced by the extraordinarily large number of bookings of the film all over the country. LUCILLE LOVE, the masked Girl of Mystery, is touring England and Scotland in the dress in which she is represented on the film—a picturesque riding costume.

"Her object in making the tour is to find a husband who will come up to her ideal. Already she has received nearly 4,000 proposals, and more are pouring in every day, but so far she has not met the one-and-only man. She has had an immense reception everywhere her journey up the East Coast of England into Scotland and down into Lancashire having been more in the nature of a triumphal procession than anything else."

What the "EVENING NEWS" says:—

"'LUCILLE LOVE,' the newest of picture theatre favourities, is now on tour. At present she has not been seen on the screen, but many thousands in various parts of the country have welcomed this facinating lady whose doing are watched with as much interest as if she were a woman with a world-wide reputation.

"The story of 'LUCILLE LOVE' starts in the Weekly Dispatch of July 12th next. Each week for fifteen weeks an instlment of the story will appear, and the next day a film version of that instalment will be released for showing in the picture theatres of the kingdom. 'LUCILLE LOVE' is in search of a husband, so the story of the film tells us, and already, although none has seen her on the screen, 3,000 people have so far made her offers of marriage.

"Yesterday she was in Leeds; the previous day she visited Hull in the decorated motor-car which the Weekly Dispatch has provided for her. To reach Hull it was necessary to cross the Humber by the ferry. On arriving there 'LUCILLE LOVE' and party were greeted by a crowd of about 5,000 people, who gave her a royal reception. Afterwards she visited all the picture theatres, which she does in every town she enters, distributing to the members of the audience the 'Lucille Love' masks.

"During the week-end she will be in Edinburgh. The return journey will be by the West Coast route, and thence to London by the South Coast. About the beginning of July she will be in London, where, during a fortnight, she will visit practically all the picture theatres. The story of 'LUCILLE LOVE' has been filmed in America, and is held in this country by the Trans-Atlantic Film Company. Managers of theatres ought to be grateful for this bright idea of Lucille Love's tour, just at the time when it is necessary to add to attractions in the entertainment line, especially as the public, always on the look-out for new things, are taking the keenest interest in the tour as they will in the story of 'LUCILLE LOVE.'" happy. On one unhappy day Joe loses not only his money, but a valuable gun which has been lent him by a friend. He meets Mason, the gambler, out on the hills, with the intention of offering his horse in exchange for the gun, but a quarrel arises, and in the fight that ensues Joe is killed and Mason severely wounded.

Rosetta is overcome with grief at her husband's death, and on returning from his grave she comes upon Mason, severely wounded. Not knowing that he is responsible for her husband's death, she takes him to her cabin and attends to his wounds. She realises that he is her husband's murderer by recognising the gun, and plies him with drink in order to extract a confession from him. In a drunken stupor he falls and is fatally wounded, and Rosetta, thinking she has caused his death, escapes in a light cart. Imagining she is pursued by the sheriff's posse, she urges on her horse till it gets out of control and crashes down a steep embankment. She is seriously injured, and drags herself to her husband's grave, where she expires.

Miss Dot Farley plays the heroine with considerable power, and the film is full of life and bustling action, giving a vividly interesting picture of life in a wild country. The photography is of fine quality. (Warner's Features. Released July 23rd. Length two reels.)

Caught in the Web.

This film demonstrates the uncertainty of circumstantial evidence, and involves such a mystery as would have delighted the ingenious Mr. Sherlock Holmes. James Martin has been poisoned after drinking a cup of coffee, the remains being shown to contain a deadly acid. His son, Daniel, is arrested on suspicion, and his sweetheart employs detectives to find evidence of his innocence. A dark stain is discovered on the ceiling immediately above the spot where Mr. Martin was accustomed to sit at table, and moisture dripping from the spot on to the table is found to be a similar acid to that in the coffee cup. The room above is searched, and a jar of acid found to be overturned on the floor. Further search results in the discovery of counterfeiters' casts and engravers' tools. A watch being set on the premises, a gang of well-known coiners is arrested, the result being that young Martin is restored to the girl who has worked in his interest.

The mystery is well sustained, and its final solution keeps up the interest to the end, which finds a fitting climax in the arrest of the coiners and the reward of the young lovers. There is little scope for acting, but the construction of the story is clear and straightforward, and makes an effective one-act drama. (Reliance film. New Majestic Company. Released July 6th. Length 976 ft.)

The Fruit of Evil.

This is a drama with an unusually strong motive, and by the remarkable beauty of its photographic effects must arouse great interest even apart from the power of its story. A husband and wife quarrel and part, the wife going away secretly with her little daughter, and leaving her son to the care of her husband. She seeks humble occupation in a small seaside town, and brings up her daughter in that class of life. Years pass by, and the father and son come to stay at a nearby hotel for the summer. The boy and girl meet, and falling in love they get married. The girl has left a note for her mother, who hastens after her and finds her at the moment of leaving the church. The husband and wife recognise each other, and the boy and girl realise their relationship. The girl rushes off in despair, and together they seek the shore and walk hand-in-hand into the sea.

It is a subject which requires great delicacy of treatment, and the author seems to have been rather afraid of handling it. The action seems unduly hurried, little time being given to the development of the love story, which therefore seems little more than a commonplace flirtation, hardly rendering the final tragedy inevitable or even necessary.

The setting and photographic effects are extremely beautiful, notably a lovely picture of a moonlit sea in the final scene, and this renders the film one of unusual interest. (Nestor film. Trans-Atlantic Film Company. Released August 10th. Length 989 ft.)

The Glory of Whiney Durkel.

This is a grim and powerful story which one might imagine would afford material for a longer film, and is a subject which might have attracted the attention of a poet of Masefield's temperament. Whiney Durkel is the half-starved and half-witted son of a hard-fisted miser, kicked, cursed and ill-treated in every way by his father and all who know him, receiving his nickname from the misery of his condition. His father is killed by one of his tenants whom he has treated with unusual severity, and Whiney, found gazing at the dead body, incapable of explaining his presence and hardly realising the tragedy, is suspected of murder and committed for trial. Public feeling veers round in his favour. Half out of pity and half out of morbid curiosity, people visit him in his cell, give him flowers and kind words, while the prison officials treat him with a care and kindness which he has never known before. The real murderer visits his cell and endeavours to ask his pardon. Whiney even then does not realise his position, but some kind of instinct fills him with rage, and he attempts to strangle the man. The men are separated, and Whiney is led away to his fate, knowing nothing and regretting nothing, for he is in the hands of those who have treated him with the only consideration he has ever received.

It is a gloomy and somewhat depressing story, treated with considerable power and played with realistic conviction. (New Majestic Company. Released July 30th. Length 995 ft.)

The Two Vanreals.

This is an artistic and picturesque rendering of Booth Tarkington's interesting novel, and deals with life in Kentucky in the earlier decades of the nineteenth century. The story tells of a feud between Tom Vanreval and Robert Carewe which starts when Vanreval rescues his friend, Crailey Gray, from financial troubles brought about by playing cards with Carewe, and which comes to a head when the two men find themselves bitterly opposed in their political views. Vanreval refuses to fight a duel with Carewe, who thereupon threatens to shoot him down on sight if ever he sets foot on his property. Matters are complicated by the fact that Vanreval falls deeply in love with Carewe's daughter, Betty, and through a misunderstanding at their first meeting Betty imagines him to be Crailey Gray. Vanreval serenades her in romantic fashion to the music of a guitar, and when Betty hears that her lover is going off to the Mexican War she sends him a note asking him to meet her in the garden that afternoon. The note is directed to Gray, who realises the danger his friend will run if he keeps the appointment. He therefore goes himself in Tom's uniform, and is fatally wounded by Carewe, who has learnt of Betty's invitation. Though Gray's life is sacrificed for his friend, the tragedy ends the feud between the two men, and Betty's future happiness is likely to be the outcome.

It is an interesting story, and makes a picturesque little drama, which would have gained in strength if Betty's mistake as to the identity of the two friends had been more explicitly emphasised. The costumes and setting are artistic in the extreme, and the piece is played with a keen appreciation of its delicate charm by a strong company, which includes Mr. Bigelow Cooper, Mr. Herbert Prior, and Mr. Richard Tucker, while Miss Mabel Trunnelle gives an exquisitely dainty performance of the heroine. Most of the scenes take place in beautiful surroundings, which, with effective contrasts of light and shade and perfect photography, combine to make an unusually pretty film. (Thomas A. Edison, Limited. Released August 3rd. Length 2,085 ft.)

Three Knaves and a Heathen Chinee.

This is the story of three sports who devoted their talents to the game of poker in their native village, and a simple and ingenuous Chinaman who, like most Chinamen who have left their native shores, presided over a modest laundry. Joe, Fred and Jack soon discover that their skill at poker has a discouraging effect on their fellow-townsmen, and they are at last reduced to teaching the game to the guileless Oriental, and extract from him what small sums he was willing to stake every Saturday evening after the laundry work was done. When they hear that Charlie has been left a legacy their spirits revive. The legacy amounted to $1,000, and this seems worth taking extraordinary pains to secure. They therefore raise what money they can, most of which is advanced by the local pawnbroker on their only available property. The game is uneventful until Joe gets three knaves, and then the simple Chinaman begins to bet until most of the money is in the pool. A glance at Charlie's hand reveals to Fred the hideous fact that he holds a full house, and he advises Joe to "cheese it" and start again. Joe accordingly throws in his hand, and the simple Chinee stuffs his garments with the spoil. It is only after the trio have been cleared right out that they discover Charlie's hand consisted of three sixes, a two and a three. He was so ignorant of the game and so careless in his methods that he had held the three so that it looked like another two!

This is a film that "combines instruction with amusement," for it is a bright and merry little comedy, played with delightful humour by all the principal characters. (Thomas A. Edison, Limited. Released August 3rd. Length 414 ft.)

The Terror of the Air.

On the whole we consider this to be just about the very best melodrama the Hepworth Company have yet turned out. Although the plot of the film leads one to place it in this latter category, moreover, it is so admirably acted, staged, photographed and produced generally, that in all other respects it is entitled to rank with the most distinguished modern comedies and dramas yet seen. The Hepworth Company have realised, in short, that exaggerations and extravagances, far from rendering a story more convincing, destroy its realism. They present this improbable story in so perfectly natural a manner, with such sincerity and with such infinite care for realism even of detail, that

HEARTH

By Charles Reade.

A FILM OF ROMANTIC ADVENTURE.

This film was shown to 54 Exhibitors before one refused to book it, and then it was a question of price, as he made an offer that Renters did not think good enough.

The Cinema, June 11, says—

Magnificent Hepworth Exclusive. "The Cloister and the Hearth" must not be missed. It is too good under any circumstances to miss. Exhibitors who are wise will not allow their patrons to miss it.

The Bioscope, June 11, says—

"The Cloister and the Hearth" easily takes its place at the head of the list as the best of them all. It is a fascinating drama of love and villainy.

one positively believes in it all just as though it were a faithful and minute "transcript from life."

We have hitherto insisted rather unduly, perhaps, upon the improbability of the story and not enough upon the ingenuity with which the author has done his best to render an unlikely theme credible. For even from the author's point of view, the play is undeniably a clever piece of work. It is based upon conventional situations, but these latter are developed with so many novel touches that it has none of the dreary sameness of the ordinary machine-made melodrama.

As for the acting it is positively magnificent. A particularly notable feature of the play is the fact that it introduces one "for the first time on any screen," to the art of Mr. Henry Vibart as a picture player. Mr. Vibart's name has, of course, long been familiar to all West End theatre-goers, who have had occasion time after time to admire his wonderfully finished natural style, and the great picture public owes no small debt of gratitude to the Hepworth Company that they have induced him to appear before the camera, so that his art, once limited to the few, may now be appreciated by the many. Mr. Vibart adapts his methods to the demands of the cinematograph with unusual success, and his acting in the present film as a dear old curio-dealer is a joy to behold.

Mr. Tom Powers, who appears as the hero of "The Terror of the Air," by courtesy of the Turner Films, Limited, has never been seen to better advantage. Mr. Harry Royston is, as always, an impressive villain. Miss Violet Hopson gives an extremely sympathetic rendering of an unfortunate mother who is induced to assist unknowingly in a plot against her own son. Mr. Stewart Rome gives a careful and satisfactory performance in a difficult and rather colourless part.

Hepworth films are so famous for the beauty and artistry of their subtle photographic and lighting effects that there seems little need to comment upon the high excellence of the present film in these directions. At the same time one would wish not to pass over altogether without comment the scene in the film showing the change from night to morning in the bedroom of a common lodging-house. These effects are usually so crudely executed that one cannot withold a word of admiration for the perfectly natural manner in which the illusion of "the dying night and the swelling dawn" is executed here.

Among the more ordinary but none the less effective features of the film are glimpses of a huge liner and a perfectly splendid explosion—really about the most striking that one has seen in a film. There are several scenes offering very interesting practical demonstrations of the wonderful invention whereby explosives may be fired from a distance—an invention which figures largely in the plot—and there are several good areoplane scenes. Altogether "The Terror of the Air" is one of the very finest stories of the kind ever produced, and it should prove enormously successful. (Hepworth film. Released August 3rd. Length 2,300 ft.)

The Greyhound.

The interest of this film commences even before the story, for in the first few feet we find an extremely novel method of introducing the players to the audience. The producer of the picture is seen seated among his artists, and as he hands to each member of the company his or her typed part an enlargement of the latter reveals the name, both of the artist and of the character he or she is called upon to play.

The title of the film, "The Greyhound," is derived from the nickname applied to the chief villain, who does not, however, seem to live up to the appellation, either in his appearance or in his manners. "The Greyhound," magnificently played by Mr. W. H. Tooker, is a characteristic American "crook," who makes a living by card-sharping and general fraud. Into the history of his misdeeds is woven a pretty, if conventional, love story with the result that the interests of the film are many-sided and by no means confined to the excitements of crime.

The picture is very well acted throughout, the character studies of criminals being particularly effective. The chief honours fall to Mr. Tooker, mentioned above, Miss E. P. Otis as a rascally old woman, known as "Deep Sea Kitty," and Miss Catherine Carter as the "Greyhound's" unfortunate wife, but everybody else does well, including Mr. David Wall as the somewhat smug hero.

There are many fine scenes on board an ocean liner, during the voyage of which much of the action takes place. At times there is apt to be a superfluity of "Americanisms" in the subtitles, but these may easily be translated for the benefit of British audiences. The villain's death is a little ridiculous, since no man would be permitted to fall off a ship and drown whilst the passengers and crew idly watched his final struggles, but this is only a small flaw in what is otherwise a very well constructed and credible story. The film would gain by some judicious cutting, as the action drags a little in places at present, but this will doubtless be attended to before it is offered to the public. In all other respects it seems a very creditable piece of work, and one which promises well for the future productions of the Life Photo Film Corporation. (Life Photo Film. American and Continental Film Company.)

The Banker's Daughter.

We have here a well acted drama of modern American life—American, that is to say, so far as the principal characters are concerned, though many of the scenes are set in and around Paris. There is an increasing demand on the part of the public for films of this type, in which the plot is something more than a melodramatic extravaganza and the personages thereof ordinary human beings instead of grotesquely theatrical puppets. "The Banker's Daughter" convinces one because it is true to life both in its incidents and in its characterisation, and it interests one just as dramatic events of real life interest the spectator.

The story is well constructed, and although the action is developed at considerable length, it never becomes dull. There are any number of well-built studio scenes, and many happily chosen exteriors. The introduction of one of Rossetti's best known paintings as the "masterpiece" of one of the film characters is an absurdity which is rather too obvious to be swallowed even by uneducated audiences, but this is a slip which may easily be amended. Otherwise there is really nothing in the picture of which one can justifiably complain. The acting, as we have said, is first-rate, particularly fine performances being given by Mr. W. H. Tooker as an elderly banker, and by Miss C. La Salle as his very pretty daughter.

"The Banker's Daughter" is quite an excellent entertainment, and although it might be improved by a few cuts, it should meet with everybody's approval even in its present full form. (Life Photo Film. American and Continental Film Co.)

WINCHESTER'S NEW THEATRE.

Enterprise marks every move of the management of the Palace, Winchester. Messrs. J. and J. Simpkins are to be congratulated upon the handsome Theatre Royal now nearing completion and situated in the busiest part of the city. The building is constructed with a handsome circle and will seat about 700. The stage has a proscenium opening of 26 ft. and will be capable of staging large productions. It is Messrs. Simpkin's intention to run the theatre on up-to-date lines with a full picture and variety entertainment, twice nightly. When completed, which we are given to understand will be in about a month's time, be one of the handsomest theatres in the South. We wish the proprietors every success in their new venture. We might mention this is not a new business with Messrs. Simpkins, as they have been running the Palace, Winchester, for the past six years with marked success.

Scene from "Beauty" Film.

HER HERITAGE.

Release date July 27th. Approx. length 986 ft.
